MR. McINERNEY'S SPEECH.

In Moving the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

As Mr. McInerney arose to move the address in reply to the speech from the Throne, the cheers that greeted his appearance had the tone of a right hearty welcome. He began by a pleasant reference to the orthodox and customary expressions of diffidence which were expected from the mover. Nevertheless he conceived it meant that he should enwrap himself with the spirit of modesty in approaching a task which but for the honor which it reflected upon his constituency he might hesitate to undertake.

CANADA'S PROGRESS.

Coming to the matters mentioned in the speech, he said that during the last year, it could not be denied, the country had experienced great prosperity, not progressing by leaps and bounds, but undergoing a healthy progress, for the quick growing is the short lived, and the royal oak which takes on its thin layers slowly is a thing of beauty and a joy for centuries. An examination of the trade returns shows that the country has progressed in a marked degree. The census returns show that there were employed in the manufacturing of Canada in 1891, the census year, 367,496 persons, while in 1881 there were 112,561 persons less than employed. The value of products carried on our railways had doubled during the decade. Taking also our exports and imports and the same material growth is illustrated. In 1891-92 we imported goods valued at $113,763,375 and in 1881 $103,137,323; our imports in 1891 were $127,468,068 against $119,419,510 in 1881; so that the total volume of trade last year amounted to $241,369,445, which is a very large increase over 1890 and exceeds the largest trade on record that of 1883 by $11,029,619.

HAWKER'S TOLU AND WILD CHERRY BALSAM.

Favorite and Most Valuable Remedy for the CURE of COUGHS, COLDS, CROUP, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, INFLUENZA OR ANY FORM OF THROAT AND LUNG TROUBLE. If Afflicted, Try It. It Will Cure You.

Malcolm McLean, of Kensington, P. E. I., writes the following:

For five years I suffered from severe Chronic Bronchitis, for which the doctors and numerous patent medicines failed to give relief. My physician and friends advised a change of climate as my only hope. HAWKER'S BALSAM OF TOLU AND WILD CHERRY was recommended to me, and I am happy to say that I was entirely cured before I had used two large bottles. I consider it to be truly a wonderful medicine, and cheerfully recommend it to all afflicted.

FURTHER EVIDENCE.

But even these figures do not tell the whole truth; for if protection carries out the design of those who set it up, it must have tended to lessen the exports and imports, as regards the volume of trade which passes through the custom houses, by encouraging the manufacture in the country of a large number of products previously taken from abroad; and by expending among our wage-earning population the large sums paid for imports. Again there has been a decline in the value of goods in late years equal to one-third, so that even these figures do not represent fully the large increase which the country has made in the past ten years, and their point was that he was glad to find the farmers of Canada putting into manufactured products a large number of the national products of the country; so that even some members of the House might be surprised to learn that in 1892 the dairy produce exported to England amounted to $12,708,407, while during the same period the United States exported to the old country $11,038,834; in other words the sixty-five millions across the line exported but three-fourths as much as the five millions on this side of the boundary. (Cheers) In regard to New Brunswick, they had been told that their industries were waning; but the census figures do not prove anything of the kind. In 1881 the manufacturing establishments in the province numbered 3,117, in 1891 they were 5,419, almost double. The capital invested had increased from $8,425,282 to $16,608,755. The number of employes grew from 19,922 to 26,609, and the wages paid increased from $3,866,011 to $5,936,021, and the value of products from $10,512,058 to $23,685,636.

CAREFUL MANAGEMENT.

As to revenue and expenditure the receipts on account of consolidated fund were $36,921,871 and the expenditure $36,765,894, leaving a surplus of $155,977, which shows that the finances of the country have been carefully looked after and no vast amount has been taken out of the pockets of the people beyond what was required to carry on the great public works. But the figures for the six months ending December 31st, 1892, show that the receipts were $18,559,024, and the expenditures $13,842,497, showing plainly that the admirable progress of the country is being maintained. He congratulated the minister of railways and canals on the fact that his management of government railways had brought an annual deficit of half a million down to about $7,000, and that without entailing the service on the Intercolonial, which it must be remembered, is the bond of union between the Maritime Provinces and the Western Provinces of the confederation. Immigration into the Northwest had also largely increased during the year; for the number of homestead entries last year were fifty per cent greater than the year before, and largely in advance of the figures for any previous year in the history of our great western domain. The statisticians of the United States say that the surplus wheat production of their country amounts now to about 150 million bushels a year, but the home consumption is so rapidly overtaking the output that in fifteen years it will equal the production; and then will have come a bright era for our Northwest when it will surely be the great wheat producing country of the world. (Cheers)

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

Alluding to the reference in the speech to the settlement of questions in dispute between Canada and the United States, he said the government should be congratulated for undertaking to arrange the Alaska boundary difficulty while it was yet in its infancy. It was pleasing also to know that the conference with Newfoundland had been satisfactory; and he hoped that as good oftentimes comes out of evil, the difficulty occasioned by the Bond treaty might yet be a means of bringing Newfoundland into confederation, and thus compassing the union of the whole of British North America. As to the disagreement between the two countries in the canal tolls question, he pointed out that while according to the treaty of Washington no obligation was imposed upon Canada to grant the use of our canals on terms of equality, the same had been freely accorded. Yet in 1885 the United States curtailed our reciprocal privileges, and it was only fair to require that these should be restored when a demand was made upon us for enlarged concessions. However, we had no quarrel with the United States; and he hoped we should long live and flourish in harmony side by side.

The measures promised were of much importance. In the first place the franchise act was to be amended in the direction of cheapening its operation; and he hoped the day was not far distant when residential manhood suffrage would prevail and a voice in the affairs of the country be thus given to those upon whom the country had to depend alike in times of peace and trouble. The criminal law was also to be amended in the direction of allowing criminals in certain cases to give evidence in their own behalf. He hoped it would meet with the approval of the House, although the principle was a departure from the law of the mother country, which he was bound to say was prone to humanitarianism, for it was necessary also that in this country the ends of justice should be subserved as well as the safety of the accused.

A BRILLIANT PERORATION.

In the last paragraph in the speech His Excellency expresses his confidence that our deliberations will keep in view the welfare and stability of the country. That is a matter of prime importance, for we shall have sojourned here in vain, he said, unless we have learned to dedicate our highest thoughts to the welfare of our common country. As the prime essential in nation-building was stability and progress we should build along these lines. In glowing language he depicted the splendid resources of the Dominion, its facilities commence, its mines and lakes "capable of mirroring the mysteries of the infinite; its mineral wealth beyond the computation of fancy; and its rich heritage of historic associations, all pointing to the importance of the task of framing and moulding the destiny of the descendants of the greatest races the world ever produced." He concluded with a remarkably forcible appeal for the de-thronement of bigotry and intolerance, and a poetic abjuration so to encompass the duties of Legislation as that future generations might say: "The men of old built well." (Great cheering)

Some people are greatly prejudiced against patent medicines, but how the patent can hurt a medicine and not a machine is a mystery of mysteries to me."

FEB. 7th.—Tuesday of last week was an unfortunate day for Mr. Thos. Atkinson. Through rather peculiar circumstances he lost one of his finest horses. Mr. James Brown's horse took fright detaching the shafts from the sleigh and breaking away from Mr. Brown. The horse ran furiously up the street and in passing Mr. Atkinson's team one of the shafts was forced through his breast; and broken off. The horse died in a few moments. About the same time Mr. Atkinson was working among the logs on his pond, and by some means slipped and fell, causing injuries which have since confined him to the house.
