PREJUDICE AGAINST THE JEWS.

The bitter persecutions which the Jews have from time to time had to suffer in Europe, have given rise to a great deal of discussion, and excited a great deal of sympathy for these down trodden people, in this country and in England. In America, they have never had to encounter these acts of tyranny and oppression, which have made life a burden to them in Russia and elsewhere on the continent of Europe. Remonstrances have repeatedly gone forth from England and America, against the brutal treatment accorded these people by the government of Russia, but these protests have been allowed to pass unheeded, and the persecution still continues. A late dispatch from Odessa says that the Jewish inhabitants of Caucasasia have been ordered to remove from their present homes to within the southwestern pale. About one-third of the Jewish population of Libau, the Baltic seaport, will be expelled within the coming six months, greatly to the detriment of the town, in which they form an influential part of the commercial community. In Germany, too, there is an intense anti-Semitic popular feeling. This sentiment is stronger among the conservatives, who have in their manifesto just issued, made their hostility apparent by declaring that a profession of Christianity must be adequately impressed upon the life of the people and the action of the legislative bodies and the administration of justice. Happily there is no such hostile feeling towards the Jews on this side of the Atlantic, as exists in many parts of Europe, but that there is a prejudice against them even in the most enlightened part of the New World, seems to be generally admitted. The action of the Union League club of New York city, in refusing to admit a Jew to its membership, has given rise to much comment in regard to this prejudice, and some are seeking to ascertain the cause. The Hebrew Journal of New York, concludes its view of the case with these words:—"Could any process be less conducive to the enlightenment of the Jews as to the superior merit of Christianity than that utilized by anti-Semitism; than such ludicrous, diabolical stultification of the professed teachings of Christianity as the breeding of hatred against human beings because of their failure to accept its teachings? The whole thing is so utterly irrational, that it is impossible sometimes to realize that such a thing has been going on for hundreds of years in the most civilized countries, and still survives—without the emphatic and universal condemnation of Christianity."

The Christian Inquirer (Baptist), New York, seeks for the cause of this prejudice, and sums up its reasoning in this language:—"Many religious persons have been quick to disown any religious prejudice, but may it not be that the cry, ringing down the ages, 'His blood be on us and on our children,' may, after all, have some recognition on the part of those who hold Christ to be the Son of God?"

The defeat in the German Reichstag of the Army Bill, providing for an addition of 50,000 men to the standing army, after a long and exciting debate, was promptly followed by a dissolution of that body and an appeal to the country in a general election. This bill was brought forward by the emperor, and was introduced by the government at his instigation. When reviewing the troops a short time after the defeat he had some hard things to say concerning the opponents of the measure, declaring that it must pass and intimating that he would not accept the verdict of the country should it prove adverse. These foolish and unstatesmanlike utterances have greatly strengthened the opposition, and the outlook is dark for the government. All political parties have entered upon the work of the campaign in earnest, manifestos have been issued and the general opinion in Berlin, as expressed by the despatches, is that an increased majority will be returned against the government. In such an event, it remains to be seen whether the emperor will abide by his determination to refuse to accept the verdict of the people.

The Chinese Exclusion Act, or the Gearsy Law as it is more familiarly termed—device hit upon by Congress to rid the country of Chinese—went into effect on Friday, the 4th inst. The special requirements of the act are that all Chinese in America shall register, take out certificates, and have their photographs attached to their certificates. Should they fail to follow the requirements of this act or to produce their certificates when called upon to do so, they are liable to arrest and expulsion from the country. The Chinamen refused to submit to the law without a struggle. They consulted counsel, and submitted a test case for the consideration of the Supreme Court. The result is that the law has been declared constitutional. They must, therefore, register or take a trip back to China at the expense of the American government.

Herring have been most plentiful this season. A great school of them came into the harbor two weeks ago, and remained for over a week. They were so abundant that they could be fished up with baskets, and they even calmed the water in places. The oldest inhabitant to a man admits that the like was never known before.

Indications of Coal Deposits.

Mr. S. J. Wilson, of Shediac, an artesian well borer, was in town to day. In conversation with a Transcript representative as to experiences in boring, he said that recently on one of the islands 2 miles off the north shore of Westmorland he sank an artesian well for a lobster factory. At 200 feet there was salt water, and at 240 feet an overflow of fresh water. Speaking of coal deposits he said from observation in boring he should think the most likely place for coal in this vicinity is at Grand Digue in Kent Co., opposite Shediac. There was 31 feet of shale and several inches of clear coal; and where there is so much shale I should think there would be coal if one followed the lead in the right direction. On Cocaigne Island about 23 feet from the surface I found coal and iron mixed for three or four feet. At Cocaigne Bridge I also came across coal at a depth of forty feet from the surface. It was rather dirty, very fine and mixed with shale. I came across nineteen inches of clear coal in one of the borings. At Lewisville on the Francis property I found coal and manganese. The coal almost looked like graphite.—Transcript.

A sad sight was witnessed at the station this morning on the arrival of the Quebec express. On board the train was a raving maniac named Patterson, from the Washdemoak. The man was bound hand and foot with heavy ropes and had to be carried from the train by four men. He struggled fiercely to break his bonds, and the sight was most sad and affecting. He was taken to the lunatic asylum.—St. John Gazette.

The Grand Manan outlaws, George and Chester Dunbar were taken to St. Andrews to be tried in the Circuit Court Saturday by Judge Tuck. It is not what people eat, but what they digest, that makes them strong. It is not what they gain, but what they save, that makes them rich. It is not what they read, but what they remember, that makes them learned. It is not what they profess, but what they practice, that makes them righteous.

Gonzalez Lavelin, a Cuban, 24 years old, was shot at his boarding place in Rosmore street, Somerville, Mass., by Miss Annie E. White, a Nova Scotia girl, also a boarder at the house. On her last voyage to the West Indies from Halifax, the schooner Helena picked up the shipwrecked crew of the foundered American bark, Edward Cushing, and landed them at Porto Rico. The men had been in an open boat about 48 hours. The Cushing belonged to Portland, Me. She left Canning, N. S., Jan. 15, encountered a hurricane in the tropics and foundered after the crew had taken to the boats.

It is announced at Washington that the average number of applicants for 400 places in the consular service of the United States is 200 apiece. That makes 80,000 applications from, presumably, 80,000 persons. We know pretty well how hunger for office rages in the ranks of the unwashed Democracy, but these figures rather exceed our expectations. Why should there be so great a desire on the part of the Bourbons to go abroad? Would some of them feel safer beyond the reach of American courts?

The Girls Win.

One of the most interesting features of this year's achievements at McGill college is the fact that although only eleven women are taking the degree of Bachelor of Arts out of a graduating class of thirty-nine yet out of eleven graduating in honors six are women and out of five medalists three are women, showing that in taking honors the women have in proportion to their number done three times as well as the men.
