RICHIBUCTO, N. B., DEC. 28, 1893.

THE NEW LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR.

The government, last week settled the governorship matter by appointing Judge Fraser of the Supreme Court, to the vacant position. The appointment appears to have given pretty general satisfaction throughout the province. The objections that have been raised to the appointment, have not referred to Judge Fraser personally, but to the precedent established by the promotion. The new governor is sixty four years of age and has been in public life nearly all the time since he first entered public life at the age of thirty-six. He was born at Beaubair's Island, Miramichi, August 1st, 1829. His father, John Fraser a native of Inverness, Scotland, came out to his relative, the Hon. James Fraser, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, remained in Nova Scotia for some years with him, and then entered his establishment in Miramichi, becoming subsequently a partner in the firm. The Hon. James Fraser, although a resident of Halifax, for years represented the county of Northumberland in the New Brunswick legislature. Governor Fraser's mother was born in Quebec, her father being Mr. Hugh Fraser, a Scotch Laird of the Fraser Lovat family, and her mother the daughter of an Irish artillery officer, who served under General Wolfe at the taking of Quebec. Governor Fraser was educated at the Newcastle Grammar school and in 1845 began the study of law in the office of Messrs. Street & Davidson, of Newcastle. He was admitted an attorney in 1850 and called to the bar in 1852. He removed to Fredericton in 1851 when Hon. Mr. Street became attorney general. In 1865 he was elected as one of the representatives of York in the assembly, on the anti confederate platform. The government resigned the next year, and in the ensuing contest Mr. Fraser was defeated. In June, 1871, he was appointed a member of the legislative council and president of the executive but resigned both positions in the following year, and accepted the office of provincial secretary in the King administration, appealing once more to the people of York, who returned him by acclamation. When Hon. Mr. King retired from provincial politics in 1878, Hon. Mr. Fraser became attorney general, holding that office until May, 1882, when he resigned to become a candidate for the commons. In the latter contest he was unsuccessful. In December of the same year, on the demise of the late Mr. Justice Duff, he was appointed to the supreme court bench. He was made a Q. C. in 1873. He was twice married; first in September, 1867, to Martha, daughter of the late Alex. Cumming, of Fredericton; and, second, in May, 1884, to Jane M. P., daughter of the late Hon. Charles (Mr. Justice) Fisher, D. C. L.

The returns of the Registrar General of England and Wales for the quarter ending September 30th show that the depression in trade coupled with recent industrial disturbances has had the effect of increasing the pauper population of the country. The total population of England and Wales is under 30,000,000 and the average pauper population in the last quarter, according to the returns, was 670,430, of whom no less than 181,514 were in the workhouses of the country. In other words, the proportion of the population in receipt of poor law relief was 22.6 per 1,000 against 22.0 in the corresponding quarters of 1891 and 1892.

In England Mr. Gladstone is on record as saying the women have exercised municipal suffrage "without detriment and with great advantage." Lady Randolph Churchill and a band of highly conservative women, who published a remonstrance against granting parliamentary suffrage, to women, a few years ago, were careful to say that they had no objection to municipal suffrage, and even thought its responsibilities had exerted a beneficial effect on the characters of women.

T. B. Barnett Mortally Wounded in Kansas City.

Made reckless and desperate by hunger, an ex-convict calling himself Thomas B. Barnett, started on last night to play the part of a street robber. He robbed Isaac Thompson, a negro, of a five cent piece, at the corner of Sixth street and Wyandotte street, a few minutes after midnight. Jacob Barner, night clerk at the Home Signal company's office, a half block away, and John Burton, a hack driver, who was in the Home Signal office, went to the negro's assistance, and when the highwayman turned on them, pistol in hand, and demanded money, Barner shot and probably fatally wounded him and the robber sent a bullet into the hackman's thigh.

Barnett, the robber, began his brief career in this city in James Keenan's saloon at the corner of Third street and Main street, at exactly fourteen minutes past midnight. He walked into the saloon and up to the man behind the bar and thrust a pistol into his face.

"I'm hungry and I'm going to have blood or money to-night," he said. "If you wa'n't patty decent people I'd just kill y-u."

"Go over by the stove and take a nap," answered the bartender.

"No, I've got work to do to-night. I want one of these things," and the man motioned with his hand as though ringing an imaginary cash register hanging at his neck. "What time does the last car go by here?"

"It has already passed," was the reply, as the saloon man glanced at the clock.

"Well, I'll go down and pull Curtin's leg; he's got a saloon on this block. Will you go with me?" said the fellow, addressing a man beside the stove.

"No, I don't want to go to jail," was the reply.

The robber passed out through the swinging doors.

"I guess that fellow's got wheels on his head. He's crazy; but I don't like the look of his gun," was the remark of the bartender to the half dozen men who had heard the man's bold talk.

The robber, "who had work to do," walked over to the corner of Sixth and Wyandotte streets, and there accosted Isaac Thompson, a negro porter, who formerly worked at Frank Jones's saloon, and who was walking with two colored women, Minnie Cameron and Alice Stewart, who lived at 316 W. Sixth street. The ready pistol was drawn and Thompson handed over a single nickel, all the money he had. One of the women ran down sixth street to the Home Signal office, 100 feet away, and opening the door cried:

"They are robbing a man on the corner."

Jacob Barner, the night clerk, 18 years of age, picked up a pistol and came from behind his desk and Jack Burton, a hack driver for Eugene Carlat, who was waiting a possible call, took another pistol, and together they ran up the street, the woman with them. Barnett was trying to unscrew a stud from the negro's shirt bosom when the woman pointed him out to the two men.

"What's the trouble, Bad?" said Burton, addressing the negro.

"He's robbing me," was the reply.

"Well, why don't you give him your stuff?" was the half laughing answer of the hackman.

The robber held a pistol in his right hand at his side and the two men had not noticed it. He made no effort to run, but turning to Burton said:

"Have you got any money?"

"Lot's of it," was the reply of Burton, who did not take the matter at all seriously until he saw the man's hand slowly raise and the gleaming pistol pointed at him. Then he sprang at the man and caught his hand.

Jacob Barner drew his pistol and fired at the robber, but thought he missed him. In the scuffle the robber fired once, sending a bullet into Burton's thigh.

"Get him or he will kill us," cried the hackman, and the boy fired again point blank.

The robber fell, and Barner and his companions ran back to the signal office and telephoned for the patrol wagon. The wounded robber and the negroes were taken to the station in the wagon, and Barner and Burton went there in a hack.

Once within Police Surgeon Inena's room the wounded man assumed an air of bravado. He called for a cigarette but could not smoke, and then began to curse the man who shot him. One bullet entered over his heart and the other near the left shoulder blade. They will probably cause death.

When told that he would die, the man called for a priest and Father Lillis came and gave him the sacrament of extreme unction, as he lay on the stretcher in the surgeon's room. After that the man told his name to Captain Plahive and said that his father, Samuel Barnett, lived in Chatham, New Brunswick. He worked in the mills at Lowell, Mass., and later was imprisoned at Rochester, N. Y. He served two years, he said, in a penitentiary at Walla Walla, Wash., for breaking open a freight car.

The man was sent to the city hospital and at 4 o'clock this afternoon was still alive, but very weak.

[If the man's story is true he is a son of Samuel Barnett, of Chatham, and a nephew of the late John Barnett, of Richibucto.]
