Thanks-giving Day.

The days are gray and chill and cold, The wind goes whistling shrill, The slight snow in the hollow's hold The rabbits footprints still. Above the boughs are brown and bare, Below, the flowers are dead, The songsters of the summer fair, To summer skies have fled.

But yet November, month of storm, You have one golden day That cheers the heart, and keeps it warm; Although your skies are gray. The Harvest Home of all the year, When all the barns are stored, In earths increase doth still appear The bounty of the Lord.

Then those we love we meet again, They come from far and near; For others too, we look in vain, They do not greet us here. Yet while for these all eyes are dim, All heads bow silent, low, Thanks-giving full, complete to him "From whom all blessings flow."

Mr. Cyrille Cormier has built a large kitchen to his house.

Mr. Robert Morton who lives near the station, has also built an addition to his house. Mr. Ben Miller is putting up a large barn.

Our small villa seems to be flourishing in a rather quiet way. We hear there was another dance Tuesday night. Very few attended as it was a wet evening.

Mrs. Charles Atkinson of Charlo, has been spending a few weeks here, the guest I was cured. I can also recommend it of her aunt, Mrs. R. Morton.

We often think of that colt, and wonder if it is still living. Caribou and moose are quite plentiful this fall: They have been seen frequently above the station along the main road.

Robin we are sorry for you. Mr. J. Rustin is getting out a quantity of pulp-wood.

Pat and Jerry leave for Salem, in a week or two. Sorry to lose you boys, but we may hope to all meet again.

Miss Barbara Day of Lewiston, Me., paid her grandmother a dying visit, Tuesday. She went to Richibucto to visit But what is your name? Your face seems friends there.

Miss M. McLeod is still among us.
