

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC

AND Stomach & Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

It is Pleasant to the Taste as the Sweetest Nectar. It is Safe and Harmless as the Purest Milk.

This wonderful Nervine Tonic has only recently been introduced into this country by the proprietors and manufacturers of the Great South American Nervine Tonic, and yet its great value as a curative agent has long been known by a few of the most learned physicians, who have not brought its merits and value to the knowledge of the general public.

This medicine has completely solved the problem of the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia, and diseases of the general nervous system. It is also of the greatest value in the cure of all forms of failing health from whatever cause. It performs this by the great curative powers upon the digestive organs, the stomach, the liver and the bowels. No remedy compares with this wonderfully valuable Nervine Tonic as a builder and strengthener of the life forces of the human body, and as a great renewer of a broken-down constitution. It is also of more real permanent value in the treatment and cure of diseases of the lungs than any consumption remedy ever used on this continent. It is a marvelous cure for nervousness of females of all ages. Ladies who are approaching the critical period known as change in life, should not fail to use this great Nervine Tonic, almost constantly, for the space of two or three years. It will carry them safely over the danger. This great strengthener and curative is of inestimable value to the aged and infirm, because its great energizing properties will give them a new hold on life. It will add ten or fifteen years to the lives of many of those who will use a half dozen bottles of the remedy each year.

IT IS A GREAT REMEDY FOR THE CURE OF Nervousness, Nervous Prostration, Nervous Headache, Sick Headache, Female Weakness, Nervous Chills, Paralysis, Nervous Paroxysms and Nervous Choking, Hot Flashes, Palpitation of the Heart, Mental Despondency, Sleeplessness, St. Vitus' Dance, Nervousness of Females, Nervousness of Old Age, Neuralgia, Pains in the Heart, Pains in the Back, Failing Health, Broken Constitution, Debility of Old Age, Indigestion and Dyspepsia, Heartburn and Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Frightful Dreams, Dizziness and Ringing in the Ears, Weakness of Extremities and Fainting, Impure and Impoverished Blood, Sores and Carbuncles, Scrofula, Scrofulous Swellings and Ulcers, Consumption of the Lungs, Catarrh of the Lungs, Bronchitis and Chronic Cough, Liver Complaint, Chronic Diarrhoea, Delicate and Scrofulous Children, Summer Complaint of Infants.

All these and many other complaints cured by this wonderful Nervine Tonic.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Nervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous derangement.

To the Great South American Nervine Tonic Co.:
DEAR GENTS:—I desire to say to you that I have suffered for many years with a very serious disease of the stomach and nerves. I tried every medicine I could hear of, but nothing doing me any appreciable good until I was advised to try your Great South American Nervine Tonic. I bought one bottle of it, and since using several bottles of it I must say that I am surprised at its wonderful powers to cure the stomach and general nervous system. If everyone knew the value of this remedy as I do you would not be able to supply the demand.

A SWORN CURE FOR ST. VITUS' DANCE OR CHOREA.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., JUNE 22, 1887.
My daughter, eleven years old, was severely afflicted with St. Vitus' Dance or Chorea. We gave her three and one-half bottles of South American Nervine and she is completely restored. I believe it will cure every case of St. Vitus' Dance. I have kept it in my family for two years, and am sure it is the greatest remedy in the world for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, and for all forms of Nervous Disorders and Failing Health, from whatever cause.

There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARNEY E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach. Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

The Peers and the People.

Condensed from a Paper in Blackwood's Edinburgh Magazine, October.

The Session has been unprecedented. Never before has the Government carried through the House of Commons a measure involving imperial disintegration; never before has the Government relied, night after night, upon the votes of men who have been censured by the highest tribunals for not having denounced "the system of intimidation which led to crime and outrage, but persisted in it with knowledge of its effects," for their majority; and consequently for their existence; never before has a Government, by brute and arbitrary force driven through the House a Bill effecting a series of constitutional changes, refusing all discussion on twenty-six out of thirty-seven clauses, and, finally, never before has a Government been so overwhelmed in a great division.

On the other hand, what is the value of the forty-one votes recorded for the Government? Twenty-one now hold office under the crown, and are, therefore, as much bound to vote for this or any other measure, as to discharge the duty of their respective offices. Fourteen others owe their rank to Mr. Gladstone, and are, therefore, linked to his policy by close ties of gratitude; and six only without any strong compelling motive have thrown in their lot with Home Rule. On the other hand the ranks of the majority owe their commanding superiority to the adhesion of men whose natural bent, whose lifelong friendships, and whose sentiments of party gratitude must have suffered some measure of strain in the vote of Saturday morning. Eighty-three Peers have been created on Mr. Gladstone's suggestion; of these, sixty-two now occupy a seat in the House; and of this number, twenty-four only could endure to vote with the Government.

Ministers in the House of Lords had this great advantage—the Bill it was their part to present to the Peers was the final outcome of Home Rule wisdom. It was the best and most perfect production which six years incubation and six months assiduous labor could construct. The Gladstonian speakers in the House of Lords had, then, nothing more to do than to justify the measure which had come up from the House of Commons. How did the Gladstonian Peers utilize this great opportunity? The test of them shall answer; and the best—that which excited most expectation and which was most worth hearing or reading—was without question the speech by Lord Rosebery. Four columns of matter had to be produced: The first column was a succession of witicisms full of point, originality, delicacy, and brilliancy; for after-dinner it would have been superb. When the second column begins, the reader is startled into gravity by the declaration, "To-night I would ask to waive all discussion of the Bill." The leading Minister declines to discuss, still more to support, the leading, indeed the only Bill of the session. Nor does he hesitate to draw the curtain, and show the working of his mind. "You may be certain in regard to this controversy of the infallibility of the course you have pursued, or propose to pursue. I may frankly say, I am by no means sure of mine. I am not certain about anything in regard to Ireland." After this disclosure Lord Rosebery again relapsed to the jocular strain, likening Lord Salisbury to the matador who finally slays the bull (the Home Rule Bill) after it has survived all the lesser perils of the arena.

The last column of Lord Rosebery's speech strikes a chord which finds an echo in every speech delivered on the Government side of the House. "We were face to face with the moral and material failure of the Union to secure prosperity to Ireland. We were then driven, and not unwillingly driven, to the policy of Home Rule; all other policies we had tried had failed—this alone remained, and we tried it." What a cry for the country—Failure! It is presented as a regular grammar in every person and in every tense—I fail, thou didst fail, he failed, we have failed, you will fail, etc., and the only remedy is to do the exact opposite of what you have been doing for eighty years and more. We know our new policy is difficult—all its details are in fact so embarrassing that we can't bear to speak of them; we know it is detested by a million or two who will be placed under a hated yoke; we don't believe in it ourselves—at least, not much—but we have come to the conclusion something must be done, and this may be tried as well as anything else.

It is refreshing to turn from Gladstonian apologists to the champions of the Union. There is a ringing note of confidence, and hope, and honor, and courage in the speeches of the Duke of Argyll, the Duke of Devonshire, Lord Cranbrook, and Lord Salisbury, which comes as a welcome change from the dreary accents of despair. The whole policy of the Opposition, as expressed by Lord Salisbury, may be summed up in the words "patient continuance in well-doing." If this is persisted in, Lord Herschell may cease to be startled into what he disapproves by the discontent of a portion of the Irish people. They are not inhuman, and they can be gained by a policy of strength, justice, and kindness, undertaken not by fits and starts, but with resolution and continuity. The question of acute interest at the present time is, What is the attitude of the Lords to the country, of the country to the Lords, and of the Government to both? The House of Lords has refused to accept the Bill, not so much because it is incurably bad as because it has not been approved by the people, and because the policy on which it rests has been condemned at the election by the majority of British electors.

One question remains—What is the attitude of the Government to the House of Lords and the people? There is no doubt what it should be. They have been defeated on the one supreme cardinal measure of their programme; this defeat is inflicted on the ground that the people have not yet expressed their will; and logic, and justice, as well as constitutional usage, demand that the people should at once be asked, "Do you want this bill?" Mr. Gladstone has one excellent reason why he does not follow this course, dissolve Parliament, and ask this question. He knows that the people do not want the Bill.

The Radicals appeal unto Caesar when it answers their purpose; unto Caesar let them go. Until they come back with their verdict, it is the duty of the British majority in the House of Commons, and of the Imperial majority in the House of Lords, to insist that they shall not govern on the basis of a possession of power, which their own conduct proves they know they do not possess.

"The Lost Continent."

Dr. Bowdler Sharpe, the well known ornithologist of the British museum, delivered a lecture at the Savage club on "The Lost Continent." Dr. Sharpe first illustrated the zoogeographical regions of the world, with their peculiar forms of bird life, and explained the occurrence of isolated forms in different portions of the globe by the existence of a former land connection now vanished beneath the sea. The idea of an ancient tropical continent at the south pole uniting South America Madagascar and Australia is arousing considerable interest, and discussion in scientific circles at the present time, chiefly owing to the support which it has received from the recent discoveries in the Chatham islands of Mr. H. G. Forbes, the well known Malayan traveler. The lecturer in conclusion dealt with some problems of the geographical distribution of birds for which no reasonable solution has yet been offered.—St. James Gazette.

Sweetheart Abbey.

There is in Galloway, Scotland, an ancient ruin known as Sweetheart Abbey. Within its ivy covered, storm battered walls lies buried the affectionate and devoted Dervogill, with the heart of her husband, John Balliol, embalmed upon her breast. Lovely in their lives, in death they are not divided. The crumbling masonry is still and must ever be a romance in its symbols of death and decay, telling every day, as it has for 600 years, the thrilling story of a woman's tender love and devotion.
