TO APPLY MANURE.

The Character of the Soil has to be Studied First.

The following, taken from the report of Prof. Shutt, Ottawa Experimental Farm, before the select committee of the House of Commons, upon the application of manures, will be of interest to many. In answer to an inquiry as to the best mode of applying manure, whether top-dressing or plowing under lightly, he gives the following answer:

That is a difficult question to answer in a word or two. The right application of manure depends largely on the character of the soil and the class of crop which you intend to grow. Most certainly it is no use burying manure so deeply that the roots of the growing crop do not reach it. Shallow feeding crops respond best to a top-dressing of a well-rotted or soluble manure. For the majority of crops, however, it is perhaps best to plough the manure in—though not at too great a depth. The physical condition of the soil or till is usually very much improved by the presence of the ploughed in manure.

In answer to the question, Do you recommend drawing the manure directly from the stables and spreading it out upon the land, or piling it, as most of us do, in small heaps? Would you recommend that it should be drawn out during the winter and then ploughed in in the spring? A.—This question of the economic fermentation of the manure and the application of it is an exceedingly difficult and lengthy one to answer. Manure should be managed according to circumstances. We must understand this, that the plant food in manure goes through certain stages of fermentation before its constituents are available for plant food, therefore we wish to induce fermentation either before the manure enters the soil, or after it has been mixed with the soil. With some soils and crops this fermentation should take place partially, at least, before the manure is applied; with the other crops and soils, the manure is best ploughed in while fresh.

Q.—Is it not better after being mixed with the soil; is the soil not benefited by it? A.—Yes, with certain soils, such as heavy clay soils. I think that not only on account of the mechanical effect, due to the presence of unrotted manure, but also to the fact that the soil itself is of a retentive character, it is often a wise plan to apply the manure quite fresh and allow it to ferment in such soils. But in dealing with light soils which easily leach, and with crops which have a short season of growth, and consequently must have food supplied to them in a readily soluble form, I think it would be better economy to apply the manure in at least a semi-rotted condition. Then, again, with very light soils, I would aim rather to manure for the coming crop than to permanently improve the soil. With regard to the application of manure to the field, we may say that it is well, in the majority of cases, that the manure should be partially rotted before it is applied, and to that end it is often most economical of labor to pile it up in the fields in tolerably large piles previous to plowing. If placed in small heaps during the winter, and the field is subject to floods in the spring, by which large quantities of water are carried off from the surface of the field, undoubtedly there is a great loss of fertilizing material due to the washing out action of the melted snow and the spring rains. Much plant food is thus carried off the surface of the soil before the frost has left the ground. If, in such a case, the manure has been kept in the pile till just before plowing, the fertilizing material would have been retained.

Q.—This is a vexed question, and if we could give instructions to our farmers in regard to the best use of manures, it will be of great benefit to them? A.—I do not think it will be possible to advocate any one system which is going to be of equal value to all our people. We shall have to educate them in the principles that underlie the care, manufacture and application of manure. When these principles are understood, they will then be able to apply the manure with the greatest advantage to themselves according to the character of the soil and the crops to be raised.

"All run down" from the weakening effects of warm weather, you need a good tonic and blood purifier like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not put off taking it. ### A Religious Wave.

The fact has often been noticed and commented upon that a religious wave of greater or less degree of power always follows a period of financial depression. This winter furnishes no exception to the rule. The reports since the close of summer, although coming from widely separated points and scattered over several months of time, have nevertheless shown that a religious revival, almost unparalleled in its extent and force, has been and is now sweeping over the country. In order to ascertain the effect of this revival in what is usually considered St. Louis territory, a leading newspaper of St. Louis recently directed a number of its correspondents in the States of Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Arkansas and Texas to report the number and results of religious revivals in the evangelical churches of their respective counties since the first of last September.

The result of this inquiry, although not as complete as was desired, owing to the inability of a great many correspondents to get reports from the country districts, the unwillingness of some of the ministers to furnish information and other causes, the object is nevertheless fully attained in the interesting reports which follow. These show that in 177 counties of the States named there have been during the past five months 53,961 conversions and 49,010 accessions to the churches. Of the total, 61 counties in Missouri report 20,216 conversions and 17,071 additions to the churches; 51 counties in Illinois, 15,852 conversions and 14,247 additions; 32 counties in Kansas, 8,574 conversions and 8,227 additions; 32 counties in Texas, 7,100 conversions and 7,345 additions; 10 counties in Arkansas, 2,249 conversions and 2,120 additions. The average per county is in the neighborhood of 300 in all the States.

The denomination which have benefited the most by means of these revivals report the following accessions: Methodist 21,840; Baptist, 7,577; Christians, 6,907; Presbyterians, 2,900. The miscellaneous additions are 3,231; unclassified, 6,560.

A Granville Tribute.

Mrs. Benj. Weatherspoon, of Granville, N. S., writes thus to The Hawker Medicine Co: "I feel it my duty to tell you what your wonderful Medicine, Hawker's Nerve and Stomach Tonic has done for me. I was thoroughly broken down and after using one bottle was completely restored to health."

The Doctor Did Not Use Them.

"Is the doctor in?" "Keep the tramp at the door of an Arch street physician yesterday.

A few minutes later an English female came to the door.

"I just wanted to see if the doctor wouldn't give me a pair of his old pants," said the tramp.

"I'm the doctor," replied the lady.

The tramp had several attacks of vertigo as he dropped down the steps.

"I feel like a new man. It will cure any case."

These are the enthusiastic words of the gentleman whose portrait appears with these lines. His own statement is free from any coarseness or "writing up."

G. W. COX.

For the past five or six years I have been troubled with DYSPEPSIA. In the winter of '92 I was completely "used up," so much so that I tried three doctors without receiving any benefit from their treatment. I tried other dyspepsia medicines without success. During that period of trial and experiment I was so poorly that I could not work steadily for one half hour at a time without going to my horse and lying down.

At last I went to W. E. Thistle's drug store to get something to relieve me, and he recommended GRODER'S SYRUP. I have taken two bottles and am now COMPLETELY CURED. I feel like a new man; I can eat or drink anything and enjoy my food. I have recommended your remedy to others. I cannot say too much in its favor. Yours truly, G. W. Cox.

P. S.—I am confident that Groder's Syrup will cure any case of Dyspepsia if it is properly used. Others who suffer as I did should know of the intrinsic merit of your remedy. For some time I have felt it my duty to write you and let you know just what two bottles of your medicine have done for me. This statement is to be used as you think best. It is true in every particular, as my friends can testify.—G. W. C.
