A Wonderful Echo.
At Madame Arabelle's the conversation turned upon echoes, and a lady in the company declared that she knew of one that repeated a sound nine or ten times.
"Pooh! that is nothing," said the marquis; "I have an echo in my park that can beat yours into fits."
"Impossible!" said everybody in chorus.
"You can easily put it to test, if you like."
"Very good we will step across tomorrow to hear for ourselves."
"Yes, come without fail," and so saying he took his departure, meditating a little scheme of his own. On reaching the mansion he sent for his old lackey, Sancho by name.
"You are up to all sorts of tricks, old chap. Do you think you could manage to play the part of an echo?"
"Certainly, my lord, you have only to shout Ho! Ho! and I repeat the same."
"Very well: to-morrow afternoon you shall go and stand in that clump of trees and repeat thirty times any call that you may hear, gradually lowering your voice; but mind—nun's the word!"
Next day his lordship's friends came trooping into the park.
Sancho was at his post picking up his ears; "Now ladies and gentlemen, your doubts will soon be dissipated," said the marquis; "you will be the first to try the experiment, madame?"
"No, thanks marquis, your voice is louder and more effective for the purpose than mine."
Where upon the marquis inflated his lungs and called out at the top of his voice:
"Are you there?"
To which the echo made answer: "Yes, my lord, I've been here a couple of hours!" (Curtain.)—La Famille.

For the past five or six years I have been troubled with DYSPEPSIA. In the winter of '92 I was completely "used up," so much so that I tried three doctors without receiving any benefit from their treatment. I tried other dyspepsia medicines without success.
During that period of trial and experiment I was so poorly that I could not work steadily for one half hour at a time without going to my house and lying down.
At last I went to W. E. Thistle's drug store to get something to relieve me, and he recommended GRODER'S SYRUP. I have taken two bottles and am now COMPLETELY CURED. I feel like a new man; I can eat or drink anything and enjoy my food. I have recommended your remedy to others. I cannot say too much in its favor.
Yours truly,
G. W. COX.

P. S.—I am confident that Groder's Syrup will cure any case of Dyspepsia if it is properly used. Others who suffer as I did should know of the intrinsic merit of your remedy. For some time I have felt it my duty to write you and let you know just what two bottles of your medicine have done for me. This statement is to be used as you think best. It is true in every particular, as my friends can testify.—G. W. C.

Pat's Ingenuity.
An Irishman on one occasion passed a grocer shop and seeing a pile of cheese on the counter, and noticing the shopman had left the shop thought it a good opportunity to get a cheese for nothing.
He therefore stepped lightly into the shop, and taking a couple of cheese, placed one on each side of the scales.
The shopman, hearing the noise came from the back shop and asked Pat what he was about.
"Ooch," said Pat, "don't annoy yourself; I only wished to know if your cheese or mine is the heaviest."
"Like your confounded cheek," said the shopman angrily, "if you don't take your cheese out of this at once I'll set the police on you."
Pat lifted the cheese and smiling at the trick he had performed, bade the shopman a respectful good-day.

Pat's Ingenuity.
An Irishman on one occasion passed a grocer shop and seeing a pile of cheese on the counter, and noticing the shopman had left the shop thought it a good opportunity to get a cheese for nothing.
He therefore stepped lightly into the shop, and taking a couple of cheese, placed one on each side of the scales.
The shopman, hearing the noise came from the back shop and asked Pat what he was about.
"Ooch," said Pat, "don't annoy yourself; I only wished to know if your cheese or mine is the heaviest."
"Like your confounded cheek," said the shopman angrily, "if you don't take your cheese out of this at once I'll set the police on you."
Pat lifted the cheese and smiling at the trick he had performed, bade the shopman a respectful good-day.

A noble gift to the world, Dr. Johnson left in Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. Many bless him.

Consolation.
The young lady at the piano was playing a difficult selection from Wagner. In the midst of it she suddenly stopped in confusion.
"What is the matter?" inquired one of the company.
"I struck a false note," she replied.
"Well, what of it?" said another. "Nobody but Wagner would ever know it, and he's dead. Go ahead with the music."
And she went ahead.
