Dominion Parliament.

OTTAWA, June 27.—At the opening of the house to-day, the premier moved an adjournment over Thursday in view of the opening of the Intercolonial conference to-morrow. He would prefer also that the House should not sit on Monday (Dominion Day), but would defer to the wishes of the House in that regard.

Mr. Laurier had no objection to the motion to adjourn over Thursday, but objected to adjournment over Dominion Day.

The speaker then declared motion for adjournment to-morrow carried. As orders of the day were called, however, Mr. Kenny arose to protest against sitting on dominion day. This he did in the interest of cultivating a wholesome national spirit which was most important in a young country like Canada and he thought our legislators should set an example in this respect. It was important they should do so and that Dominion Day should be observed in view of the presence in Ottawa of the Australian delegates.

Mr. Hazen fully concurred in these sentiments. From the Canadian standpoint he thought that it would be a mistake not to observe the Canadian national holiday. He well remembered that when Parliament sat on Dominion Day in 1891 every newspaper in the country protested against the proceeding.

The remainder of the afternoon's sitting was spent in discussing a bill for inspection of electric lights.

In committee of supply, Mr. McMullen complained of the proposal to spend $2000 to put in a branch siding of the I. C. R. at Ferrona. He held that the company ought to contribute to the cost.

Mr. Fraser called down his colleague by informing him that the branch was to connect with a twelve mile line of the Ferrona Co. and was for the benefit of the Intercolonial.

Then the item carried. Mr. McMullen protested against the vote of $198,000 for the branch road to connect Dartmouth with the Intercolonial.

Sir John Thompson explained that to make connection by replacing the bridge recently destroyed would cost $235,000, that the government was under obligations to operate the branch and the most economical way to do so was to run the road around the arm.

Mr. Fraser commended the project and the item went through. The customs estimates went through after the Controller had answered one hundred odd questions.

At 11.20 p. m. the house adjourned until Friday afternoon.

Talk up Your Town.

If you live in a town you should believe in it. If you don't believe your own town or city is a little better in most respects than any of its neighbors, you should move out. Like other places, it has advantages that others have not, and your modesty should not prevent you from making that fact known wherever the opportunity presents itself. At home or abroad, whether pursuing pleasure or engaged in business, do not neglect to give those with whom you come in contact to understand that you live in a town populated by enterprising, go ahead, progressive people and that is advancing instead of retrograding. If you can truthfully speak in commendation of the ability of your professional men, the square dealing methods of your merchants, the excellence of your churches, schools and public institutions, and the industry, energy and sobriety of your citizens generally, let nothing prevent you from exercising that privilege. You should learn to believe, if you do not already, that we have all these, and in addition the handsomest women, the best located town, the finest country surrounding it, with the most fertile farms, tilled by the most intelligent class of farmers to be found in the Dominion.

If there are any drawbacks, it will not be necessary to mention them. The people and newspapers of competing towns will relieve you of that task by attending to that part of it themselves. Strangers seeking a location are always greatly influenced in favor of any place whose citizens are enthusiastic in its praise. No city or town can expect to attain prominence over its rivals unless its inhabitants appreciate the excellence and virtues of their own locality. Talk is a cheap commodity but when rightly utilized it can be made effective in many directions and this is one of them.

Change of Church Connection.

Rev. Finlay Alexander, sub dean of the Cathedral, Fredericton, has changed his religious views and announced his strong belief in Roman Catholicism. On the strength of this, Bishop Kingdom has suspended him from further duties in connection with the Church of England.

Prof. Stockley, of the University, it is understood, will adopt the same course as the Rev. Mr. Alexander. Mr. Stockley has been residing at the parsonage with Mr. Alexander for several months past and it is supposed one has influenced the other into a change of his religious belief. The matter is a subject of much wonder in Fredericton, but it is said that Bishop Kingdom is the least surprised of anybody as he has been expecting the subdean to take such a step at any time.

A Long Season.

"It is one of the surest signs of rain when you hear it on the shingles." So said one New Hampshire prophet. Another was less careful.

He was at work in the hay field with a companion.

"I tell you what," he said, "if the sun sets clear of a Friday night it is sure to rain before Monday night."

The second man could not see the reasonableness of this rule, and so expressed himself.

"Well, it's so, whether you believe it or not," cried the prophet. "I've noticed it more than a hundred times this summer."

There is no excuse for any man to appear in society with a grizzly beard since the introduction of Buckingham's Dye, which colors natural brown or black.

The hen is an insignificant appendix to the farm and her products are rarely reckoned as among the assets of the farmer being considered as too small to be noticed, yet we imported from foreign countries during the eight years between 1883 and 1890, both years included, $18,780,000 worth of eggs. The number of dozens were 114,000,000. It will be readily seen that besides using up the country's supply we import over $2,000,000 worth annually and that the egg is quite an important factor in our wealth.

The History of the Prohibition Plebiscite Movement.

In the year 1875, sixteen members of the House of Commons of Canada united in a "call" for a general convention of Prohibition workers. The convention was held in the city of Montreal on the 15th, 16th, and 17th days of September, 1875. Out of it grew the Dominion Alliance, an organization for the uniting of all prohibition workers in effort to secure effective legislation. Among the resolutions adopted by this convention was the following:

"That in order that a prohibitory liquor law, when passed, may have the sympathy and support so indispensably necessary to its success, it is the opinion of this Convention that the Dominion Parliament should be urged to frame such a law, subject to ratification by popular vote."

At that time the leaders of the prohibition movement expected to secure legislation on the lines laid down in this resolution. They failed, however, it being held by the leader of the Government at Ottawa that such a method of enacting legislation was not in harmony with the principles and methods of the British Government.

The principle embodied in the resolution was, however, carried out to some extent in the year 1878, by the enactments of the Canada Temperance Act, a local option prohibitory law which could only come into force upon being ratified by a vote of the electors of the territory affected by the prohibition. This measure was made effective in many counties and cities, but being partial and sectional in its operation, it was not accepted by prohibitionists as a settlement of the liquor question, and from time to time there has been pressed in the House of Commons a resolution declaring in favor of total prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating beverages. At different times the House of Commons has, by large majorities, affirmed the soundness of the prohibition principle, and declared its readiness to enact prohibitory legislation as far as it has jurisdiction "so soon as public opinion will sufficiently sustain stringent measures." On several occasions when the prohibition resolution was being pressed by its friends, there was offered an amendment declaring in favor of the submission of the question to a direct vote of the people. This amendment never obtained enough votes to secure for it consideration as a practical question. It was opposed by prohibitionists, who took objection to any amendment offered as a substitute for their direct demand for immediate total prohibition.

In the year 1891, the prohibition resolution offered in the House of Commons was displaced by an amendment submitted by the Hon. Minister of Finance, declaring in favor of the appointment of a Royal Commissioner to inquire into the working of the liquor traffic and prohibitory legislation. The Commission was appointed, and is still engaged in carrying on the investigation committed to it. The question was thus practically removed from the House of Commons until the report of the Commission would be made.

In the meantime public opinion in favor of prohibition was growing rapidly. The advocates of the reform, feeling confident of their strength, desired an opportunity of demonstrating to their legislators the strength of the sentiment that existed in favor of prohibitory laws. Several years ago a resolution was adopted by the Grand Division Sons of Temperance of Nova Scotia in favor of a popular vote on the issue. When the liquor law of the Northwest Territories was about to be changed the friends of temperance memorialized the Government for a direct vote on the question of prohibition. In 1892, the prohibition workers of Manitoba appealed to their legislature to have taken a vote of the electors of that Province. The legislature agreed to the request, and the result was that at the last general provincial election, the voters were asked to express by a direct ballot their favor for, or objection to, the enactment of a law of total prohibition for the province of Manitoba. The vote polled was as follows:—

In favor of prohibition..... 19,637
Against prohibition..... 7,115

Friends of prohibition in the Province of Ontario believed that they could strengthen their cause and make more effective their demand for prohibitory legislation by following the example set by their co-workers in Manitoba. There is a great deal of uncertainty as to whether or not a province has power to enact a prohibitory law. Until recently it has been generally believed that such power was vested exclusively in the Dominion Parliament. Some judicial decisions, however, have led to the belief that provinces possess more extensive jurisdiction in regard to the liquor traffic than they were formerly supposed to have. The British North America Act, which is the charter of the Canadian Federation, is not explicit on the point in question. Strong advocates of prohibition believed that pending the settlement of this question and while the prohibition movement in House of Commons was temporarily shelved by the Royal Commission, they would do good work by securing from the people of Ontario a direct expression of opinion on the question of immediate total prohibition.

Recognized A Fraternal Soul.

He was a commercial traveller of the more flashy type and had just finished telling a startling story to his newly made acquaintance in the car.

"That reminds me of one of Munchausen's yarns," said the victim, for want of something better to say.

"Munchausen, who is he?"

"Why, don't you know about him? He is one of the most colossal examples of mendacity that civilization has produced." A brief painful silence ensued, which was broken by the traveller in a tone that was almost timid.

"Excuse me, my friend," he said, "if I seem inquisitive. But would you mind telling me what house he travels for?"—Washington Star.

"What extra sins you are taking in brushing your hair and trimming your mustache this morning," said the helpmate of Rev. Mr. Squire, one Sabbath. "Yes, my love; I am anxious to give my congregation a personal illustration of my sermon." "Oh, indeed! In what way?" "Well, you see, I am going to preach on the beauty of holiness."

Dr. Low's Worm Syrup cures and removes worms of all kinds in children or adults. Price 25c. Sold by all dealers.

Two Irish visitors to a well known show after seeing a portion of the menagerie, came to a passage over which was the legend "exit." "Begorra, Pat," said one of them, "we musn't miss the exit, whatever kind of a baste that is." They followed the index finger on the sign; and all too soon they found themselves on the outside of the show and denied the privilege of entering again unless they repaid the price of admission.

Here And There On The Farm.

If possible have long rows for the garden, so as to permit of the use of the horse hoe or cultivator. By this plan farms who give but little attention to the cultivation of a garden will be induced to grow quite a variety of garden crops at but little extra cost of labor. The aversion of farmers to the use of hand tools, such as the hoe, rake and spade, debar them from making the garden a speciality, but by using a seed drill, and planting in long rows, so as to cultivate with the horse hoe a garden will entail but little extra work for small crops.

No nechanic will attempt to perform a full day's work without sharp tools, yet farmers will use the same tools a whole year without sharpening them. It is as important to keep the farm tools in good order as it is to have a sharp axe, as the better the condition of the tools and implements the less effort is required by the teams and the better the work is performed.

The sprayer is not only useful on trees but for preventing or destroying vermin on stock. When kerosene emulsion is sprayed over cattle in the form of a fine spray it reaches every portion of the body and but a small quantity is required. The emulsion is not injurious and does not irritate the skin as is often the case with adulterated kerosene.

When the ground is worked to a fine condition the roots penetrate the soil more easily, secure a greater share of plant food, and grow more rapidly than when but slight cultivation is given the soil. Careful cultivation thus increases the yield of crops by affording greater feeding capacity to the roots of the plants.

Sameness of diet may lead to constipation of the bowels. This results when cottonseed meal or cornmeal are fed continually without change. The remedy is variety of food, giving linseed meal, ground oats, and green food. Medicine is unnecessary, if the animals have a varied diet.

Horses that work every day and are placed in their stalls at night to come out for labor the next morning, are compelled to subsist on grain, hay and other dry food. At this season of the year green food of some kind is almost a necessity with them, as it regulates the bowels and cools the blood. If but a small quantity of grass could be cut and placed in the manger for them, once a day, it will be highly relished by them, and will also promote their health.

A BOON TO HORSEMEN.—One bottle of English Spavin Liniment completely removed a curb from my horse. I take pleasure in recommending the remedy, as it acts with mysterious promptness in the removal from horses of hard, soft or calloused lumps, blood spavin, splints, curbs, swellings, stifles and sprains.

"Then you accept me, Ethelinda. Oh, what happiness!"

"Yes, but you must see father and mother, George."

"As regards your father and mother, Ethelinda," said George, who had been frequently snubbed by both during his courtship, "as regards your father and mother—" and he curled his lip and threw out his chest.

"Speak low, George," she said, "I think they are both listening."

"As regards you father and mother," continued the wily lover, raising his voice, "I think your father is one of the most gentlemanly men I ever met, and as for your mother, she's one of the loveliest of women. I am not surprised that you are so good, so beautiful, so sweet, when I remember you are the offspring of such a pair."

"George," said the father, bustling into the room, "she is yours."

"And you have our blessing," said the mother.

And George, as he adjusted his collar, thought to himself that an ounce of timely compliment is worth a pound of argument.
