When Mollie Bathes the Baby. When Mollie bathes the baby I lay my book aside. And watch the operation With deep parental pride; I scan the dimpled body Of the little struggling elf, For undeveloped points of Resemblance to myself.

When Mollie bathes the baby She always says to me: "Isn't he just as cunning And sweet as he can be? Just see those pretty dimples! Aren't his eyes a lovely blue?" And then, "O precious darling, I could bite those arms in two."

When Mollie bathes the baby I always say to her: "Look out now, don't you drop him!" And she answers back, "no sir!" Then I talk about his rosy cheeks, The muscles in his arms, His shapely head and sturdy legs, And other manly charms.

When Mollie bathes the baby The household bends its knee, And shows him greater deference Than it ever shows to me. But I feel no j-alous goading As they laud him to the skies, For every one assures me That he has his father's eyes.

Extravagance. Many of the sufferings of this world can be traced to extravagance in living, in dress, in outfits, or in the use of time. Extravagance is promoted by a desire to reach some position in the social scale above one's present surroundings. The giddy heights to which some of the wealthy have attained are objects in the distance to which those less favored by the decrees of fortune aspire. The rich man's parlor with its burnished wood work, its walls of marble, its paintings and pictures, its carved furniture and all the accretions that wealth can buy or pride suggest begets a longing in many a proud spirit to be the possessor of just such a parlor with the attachments that naturally cluster around.

In nine cases out of every ten hope is without its fruition, yet every nerve is strained and every resource is pressed into the service to make the mechanic's cottage as near in splendor to the banker's palace as possible. The false idea has taken possession of many a moderately well-to-do man that happiness and great wealth are synonymous, the one being part and parcel of the other, and so he masses his mental and physical powers to the attainment of wealth, that he may gratify his desires for elevation to place and position in the social circle. One of two things generally happens, either the devotee will become so blinded by the glare of tinsel and finery that he lets go all restraint, buy-gew-gaws without judgment, hurls his ready cash into a mansion that is too large, too fine and too costly for the measure of his means, runs into debt, is devoured by the mortgage and sinks down dejected, discouraged and miserable; or, taxing every energy of mind and body he at last attains to wealth and position, only to find that extravagant living, extravagant apparel, extravagance in all the appointments of his home for the sake of appearing as well as the high-toned brings the wretched reflection that his life has been worn out in the vain attempt to grasp solid happiness, only to find the whole business a mockery and unsatisfactory. Extravagance prevades all classes, from the lowest to the highest, and manifests the same nature wherever found. Its practice always brings unsatisfactory results. Though the glare of present grandeur may give a passing pleasure, yet the end is pain. How many there are who are rolling in wealth, spending their hundreds and thousands beyond the ordinary necessities and luxuries of life look back with an unaccountable longing for the little white cottage that sheltered their young manhood, but who are in the whirl of that class in the social order that makes an extravagant use of the material things and dwarfs everything to the level of a butterfly life, but they are in the whirl and must keep on. Many a man who is strong of mind and vigorous of body has let his pride of show master his better judgment and spent his whole income on finery in the summer of his prosperity who is forced to beg or starve in the winter of adversity. It is this silk dress or his tailor-made suit or his trimmings to match; and so it goes the world around. Extravagance first and poverty of pain afterwards.

NO MORE FITS.

Mrs. William Langley was Subject to Them for Five Years—Dodd's Kidney Pills, which Never Yet Failed, Cured Her.

LONDON, June 11.—Mrs. Wm. Langley, of 21 Euclid Ave., London South, has for the past five years been subject to fits. She was treated by doctors in Lansing and Detroit, Mich., and by three different physicians in London. Not one of them could cure her. About two months ago she began using Dodd's Kidney Pills. Since then she has had no return of the fits. To-day she is perfectly cured. Her trouble was undoubtedly due to kidney disorder, a fact which the physicians who treated her never discovered and consequently, their treatment was in vain.

Parrot Peached.

Mahoney's parrot scoffs at the idea of testifying in a common police court, says Friday's New York Recorder. Hecskuffed at a Recorder reporter yesterday, too. But Mahoney is sure that the parrot must go to court to testify against the Mahoney and her, John.

Last Wednesday the Mahoney domicile was robbed while Mahoney and the rest of the family were out. The thief had the whole of the Mahoney apartment on the third floor of the big and crowded apartment house at 517 West 27th street, to himself, and he went off with a suit of John's clothes and a gold locket, which Mahoney says is worth all of $50, if not more. Mahoney pere was the first one home. The parrot was posing languidly in its cage.

"The house's been robbed, ole man," finally squeaked the parrot. "Oh, go away," said Mahoney. "You make me tired."

"The house's been robbed, ole man," said the parrot again. Then the disturbed condition of things showed the old man that the parrot was right.

"Who's been here?" he asked. "Who's robbed the house?"

"Johnnie," chuckled the parrot. The old man went out and had his son arrested. The young man, who is 19 years old, denied the theft, and said that the parrot, which gets out of its cage sometimes, must have taken the things and hidden them. But Mahoney insisted that John had got into the house through the scuttle in the roof. He had been an out-cast practically for three months or more.

The boy was held in $2,000 for trial in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday. Mahoney said last night that he would have the parrot subpoenaed as a witness when he came to trial. He is sure that the bird is competent. When a Recorder reporter asked the parrot questions last night, the bird was very insulting, and declined to be interviewed at first.

"Who robbed the house," asked the reporter. "Oh go 'way, you son-of-a-gun; you make me tired," said the parrot.

It took some minutes of persuasion before he would greet the reporter in a civil way. Finally the parrot answered, "Johnnie," when the reporter asked him the question again. Then it chuckled as if it was glad that its explanation of the robbery had been accepted.

Unqualified Commendation.

Rev. T. Watson, Colborne, Ontario, writes:—"K. D. C. has produced in me a wonderful change, almost from the first time of using. My indigestion is all gone and my general health is much better than it has been for years. K. D. C. has my heartiest and unqualified commendation. I believe it to be all its makers claim it to be."

St. Louis, June 13.—The reported arrest in Montreal of Dr. Granby S. Howard, charged with swindling Joseph A. Specht, of Gunston Hall, Va., is denounced by Col. Price and Dr. Nigley as an outrage on a pure and holy man. Mrs. Estelle Morrey, a daughter of Mr. Specht, also denounces it.

Mrs. Morrey has just returned from Gunston Hall. She is a delicate, pale-faced little woman, with that peculiar expression of the eyes characteristic of religious enthusiasts. When told that her brother was offering for sale documents which, he said, would completely expose the alleged nefarious work of Howard, she said she was greatly grieved over her brother's conduct. She said that the wonderful new religion of which Howard is the head is the "Oriental Order of Sal Bhai Koozman," which, she said, meant simply the "Seven Ladies of the Chamber."

She said she thought her mother had given Howard only $20,000 and she was sure Howard had used every cent of it to advance the new religion. She denied that her mother was insane and said that her brother Joseph only wanted to gain possession of their mother's money.

"Neither my brother nor my father is engaged with us in the study of God's truth, though my father has attended some of our services and is strongly impressed. Only my mother, my little sister and myself have taken the vows. I have been studying the truth now about four years, and the further I progress the more I am convinced that our belief is the truth God wishes his people to know. I have been for many years a member of Lindell Avenue Church, but I could not find there the religious peace for my soul that I so much needed, and I have never found it except in the revelations of the Bible that have been made to me through Dr. Howard."

Mrs. Morrey said much more in the same vein, showing how completely she is under Howard's influence. As Estelle Specht she was one of the belles of St. Louis, and her wedding was one of the most brilliant society events in the history of the city.

A DISTRESSING SITUATION.—What a dreadful thing it is to wake up in the middle of the night suffering from cholera,—the nearest doctor a mile away and no one to send for him. Imagine a more distressing domestic situation, if you can; and yet cases of this kind are very common. The trouble, however, would never have become serious if the man of the house had a bottle of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN-KILLER at hand, for it is a remedy that never fails to cure cholera, cramps, diarrhea, or dysentery. All druggists keep it. 25c. for large New size.

Skeletons in Other Closets.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 13.—It leaked out here this morning that six of the prominent ladies of this city who took a leading part in the anti-Breckinridge protest at the Opera-House here several weeks ago have been warned, through a letter mailed from Pittsburg, Pa., that there are "skeletons in their closets," and that they could not afford to take part in such a "detestable proceeding against Col. Breckinridge."

The letter was sent to Judge Durham (the address being Mrs. Durham), Mrs. Judge Morton, Mrs. A. M. Harrison and three others. It was sent from Lexington to the Pittsburg Postmaster, with the request that he remit it to Lexington as addressed. The Postmaster wrote across the top of the letters, in red ink, "sent from Lexington, with the request to be mailed here."

The ladies refused to allow the letter to be published, since they attach no significance to it. One of them said this morning: "We all know the handwriting but we can't blame him for doing all in his power for Col. Breckinridge though it be done in ever so mean a manner. The letter will have no effect. We know our husbands pretty well, and such threats are beneath our notice."

W. B. Corbin, of Georgetown, a personal friend of W. C. Owens, was here to-day to whip Col. Breckinridge's son Dusha. He looked for young Breckinridge, but failing to find him, wrote a card for publication in a Lexington paper, in which he asserted that Dusha had manufactured a number of lies printed about Owens. In a recent interview, Dusha said that Owens was by nature a coward, but by instinct a traitor, by practice a liar and by profession a gambler. Young Breckinridge comes from fighting stock on his mother's side, but his friends say he must not fight the Georgetown man, unless he is first attacked.

Late English News.

Word comes from Liverpool, Eng., that the agents of the Hawker Medicine Co., of St. John, N. B., as a result of the Hawker remedies in the neighboring cities and counties are overwhelmed with orders for fresh supplies of these great health giving remedies. Their success in England is as phenomenal as in Canada. No greater proof of merit could be presented to the public.

Edward T. Jack, of St. John, N. B., who has for years given considerable attention to lumber matters, has expressed himself on the question of log export duty. United States lumbermen having paid large sums into the Ontario treasury for certain timber limits, subject to no restrictions as to where the logs might be cut, he considers the government would have been guilty of a breach of trust should they have inserted afterwards, that these logs be cut within the province. "Suppose," says he, "that after a man had bought a thousand barrels of flour in Toronto, deliverable one year from date, the Dominion government imposed an export duty of $1 per barrel on this flour, who would justify such an act? Placing to one side questions of justice, as well as the implied rights of purchasers, how much money is lost when logs are taken to the United States to be manufactured? The cost of sawing, about $1 per M. feet B. M.; the log hauler wants no export duty imposed, for he usually receives a higher price for hauling from Americans than he can get from the Canadians. Why, then, close his best market merely to please the mill owner, in aiding him to shut out all competition in the matter of log purchasing. In New Brunswick we want no export duty, in fact a duty could not be collected here unless at an enormous expense, as the rivers St. John and St. Croix are for a considerable distance the boundary between Canada and the United States, and when a log floats across the centre line of these rivers into the United States, it can be sawn there without the payment of duty. Further, it is not to be supposed that our friend Jonathan will look calmly on and see his sons wronged, and there cannot be any doubt that, if the Dominion government imposes such an export duty, he will act and will place, much to our detriment, a duty on sawn lumber additional to present charges sufficient to counterbalance an export duty which the Dominion government may place on sawn logs."—[Canadian Lumberman.]

Peculiar to Itself.

So eminently successful has Hood's Sarsaparilla been that many leading citizens from all over the United States furnish testimonials of cures which seem almost miraculous. Hood's Sarsaparilla is not an accident, but the ripe fruit of industry and study. It possesses merit "peculiar to itself."

Hood's Pills cure Nausea, Sick Headache, Indigestion, Biliousness. Sold by all druggists.

Worse than Coolies.

The condition of the peasants of Sicily who recently rose against their oppressors and well nigh precipitated a general revolt against the Italian government, is perhaps more wretched than that of any other civilized people in the world. For ages the poorer classes have been the prey of the richer and have been burdened by the most exorbitant taxation, while the rich have generally escaped without any taxation at all. Corruption is rife in every office in the island and justice is a mere mockery, simply depending on who can give the largest bribe.

The land is owned by a few noblemen who lived in Rome or Palermo and who lease their estates to capitalists known as "gabellotti," or tax extorters. These in their turn divide the estates and sublet them to "subgabellotti," who again lease the subdivided land piecemeal to the peasants, or, if you wish, farmers. These latter are most shamefully biad. They are permitted to retain but one-quarter of their crops, no matter how poor the yield may be. In addition to this they are compelled to pay an enormous tax and provide themselves with seed and the necessities of life. Reduced to the most abject poverty, the estate owner "padrone" sometimes lends them money at 50 per cent a year.

The day laborer's lot is even worse, if such a thing is possible. The lowest Chinese coolies live in luxury compared with the Sicilian day laborer. The result of this is that agriculturists, who are the chief support of Sicily, are becoming totally ruined. The petty farmers and peasants are held in outrageous slavery by the capitalists and landowners.

Some people laugh to show their pretty teeth. The use of Ivory White Toilet Powder makes people laugh more than ever. It's so nice. Price 25c. Sold by druggists.

The Age of a Tree.

Almost everyone is aware of the fact that when a tree is cut down its age can be determined by counting the rings, each of which represents one year's increment, but closer observers find in the irregularities of these rings and other signs a very faithful register of climatic and other conditions in any given year during the whole of its growth. The years of small rings, that is of little growth, were either very dry, or the tree was exhausted by bearing an exceptionally heavy fruit crop. The broad rings indicate abundant rain and good growing conditions. Brownish spots on the surface, looking as if they were worm-eaten, are evidence of a severe winter, the young sapwood formed in summer having been partly destroyed by severe cold, and the injured part covered over with sound wood the next year. The year may easily be fixed by counting the rings from the outside. If the layers of wood are not of uniform thickness all round they afford evidence that at this stage of growth there were conditions which hindered its growth on one side. The spread of its roots or branches has been arrested, perhaps, by a neighboring tree. The number of layers showing this irregularity indicates the number of years during which the tree was exposed to the unfavorable conditions. The student of forestry may learn lessons of practical value in the management of forests by a careful study of the annual rings.—Literary Digest.

The Delineator for August is called the "Summer Holiday Number," and in every respect is a worthy representative of this popular magazine. Summery fashions are pleasing to the eye and will be found very satisfactory to those who have delayed the completion of their warm weather wardrobes. The papers on Knitting, Netting, Tatting, Crochetina, and Fancy-Work generally, have also special interest this month. There is in addition a suggestive and useful article on Dressing for Stout Ladies. Of the serial subjects, Edith Child Bryn Mawr, '89, contributes a very interesting paper on A Girl's Life and Work at the University of Bryn Mawr, and F. E. Parrish a practical article on Typewriting and Stenography as an Employment for Women. The contributions on Venetian Iron-Work and Crepe and Tissues provide further instructions in these fascinating and profitable home-occupations, and Eleanor Georgan's article on the Cultivation of the Voice will be found valuable both by teachers of elocution and singing and their pupils. The housekeeper will be pleased with the suggestions contained in A Few Useful Pockets and Hints on Serving Fruit, and the mother will find much sensible advice in the chapter on Mother and Daughter and How to Live Wisely. A Midsummer Night's Dream and a Mutual Improvement Club offer suggestions for Summer-entertaining. The subscription price of The Delineator is $1.00 a year. Single Copies, 15 cents. Address orders to The Delineator Publishing Co. (Ltd.), 33 Richmond Street West, Toronto, Ont.

Food for the Sick.

Raw eggs are among the most valuable resources in feeding the sick. They supply a liquid food which is not only highly nutritious but also easily digestible. Few patients will care to attempt to swallow them whole, and by slowly stirring to blend the white and the yolk, the dose, says a medical contemporary, is rendered less unpalatable. Eggs should never be beaten to a froth, as in that state they are indigestible, and invite flatulence and other dyspeptic symptoms. The whites of eggs are a form of non-stimulant admirably suited to stomach and intestinal disorders attended with inflammation.
