JUDGE PALMER'S CASE.

Mr. Davies then invited the minister of justice to state the attitude of the government in reference to the resignation of Judge Palmer, of the New Brunswick supreme court which resignation, he said, was surrounded by circumstances of an exceptionally grave and serious character. After a reference to the purity of the bench, Mr. Davies referred to the charges preferred against Judge Palmer by the St. John Globe, and said he believed in the face of the charges and the fact that the attention of the Government had been drawn to them, Judge Palmer's resignation had been accepted.

Sir John Thompson said he agreed that the question was one of grave importance, but one that could be better discussed when the papers relating thereto were laid on the table. Judge Palmer had absolutely denied the charges made against him by the Saint John Globe and had made explanations which satisfied the government that the judge intended to vindiregular way. The resignation of Judge Palmer had been accepted, as it had been accompanied by medical certificates show ing failure of eyesight, and under the eircumstances he thought the government had been justified in accepting the resig-

Spelling Bees in the Pahamas. [Rev. Bernard J. Reilly in Donahoe's for March.]

If there is one thing to which the colored children in the Catholic schools of the Bahamas take more kindly than to anything else, it is a spelling bee. The sister allows the two best spellers to choose, alternately, from among the rest of the scholars. She then gives a word to each in turn, or else permits each one to propose words to his opponent. I remember one very interesting match which took place in the boys' school. Each boy was allowed to propound a word to the one ranged opposite to him, and the struggle was a hard one.

The smallest boy of them all made the most desperate effort. He was given the word "separate" to spell. He scratched his head for a moment, grew nervous, and then came at it with a rush: "S-e-p-e-ra-t-e!" "Wrong!" said the sister. "Sit down, Master Shipley." "Sister marm !" ("Sister" without the "marm" seems too familiar to the colored people.) "Sister marm !--s-n-p-e-r-a-t-e." "No, said the sister again, "you're wrong. You'll have to sit down."

Still not satisfied, the child gathered himself for a last frantic effort. He waved his hands over his head to attract the sis- simply over feeding them and perhaps was, but all I've got to say is, you held a ter's attention. The black pupils of his eyes seemed drowned in a rolling whiteness, the veins stood out on his forehead, the perspiration made little muddy streaks times a day, as they will learn to look for down his face, and he screamed at the top their meals regularly and follow their of his voice, "S-u-p-p-e-r-r-e-t-e!"

There was a wild burst of derisive laughter from the others, and the poor he has taught them. They are as plump, little fellow was crushed. He dropped into a seat, his head fell on his arms, and his sobs were painful.

The sister interrupted the spellingmatch for a few moments, and, going down twenty hens until they begin to lay. to the vanquished one, whispered something in his ear.
