Which of the young ladies admires a white shirt front in a photograph?

During the last few weeks one of our juniors has been continually wringing his hands in a very peculiar manner. Many of his friends would like to know whether this is done as a manifestation of grief or for some other reason.

It is a great misfortune not to have enough wit to speak or write well, or enough judgment to keep silent.

A Challenge.

To the Editor of The Review: Your correspondent from this section in last week's REVIEW states that D. D. Warman traded his horse for a roadster, not a trotter, and goes on to say further that there is a certain party in Molus River who will trot anything on the river for $20.00 a side, and if the gentleman referred to wishes a race, I will help to prepare the track.

A Letter From Mr. Eddy.

Editor Review: Sir,—Observing in your issue under date Feb. 8th inst., an article which refers principally to myself, I would respectfully beg leave to reply.

The first charge that I used threatening language to the complainant is hardly consistent with truth, in fact, is false. The language used was in all cases justified by the occasion I believe. There was at the hearing a deal of evidence withheld which would place me in another light in the matter, and Wm. Eddy I believe in a somewhat unenviable position. I could not at the time consent to furnish it myself, consequently I refused to be examined. As for the charge of insanity I believe I have been acquitted of that before men who from their position I should judge to be experts. Please to publish and oblige.

Yours respectfully,

T. EDDY.

Little River.

Dear Editor:

That person from Little River who signs his name "A Reader," will please bear in mind that the change in Samuel Allanach's house will last longer than the winter. Oh, how large it sounds for a person that did not give one dollar towards building the church, to say "Our new church."

About the pews, they won't be finished until after the assessing is done, for fear those who own a pew might get another raise on their taxes.

S. ALLANACH.
