BROTHERS WHO SEEM NOT TO DWELL TOGETHER IN UNITY.

It is a lovely and pleasant thing for brothers, whether of the press or of the family, to dwell together in unity. But such is not always the case. We have noticed from time to time some slight divergence of feeling and sentiment between our esteemed contemporaries. The World and the Advance of Chatham; there have been occasional notes of discord in the frequent interchange of greetings between the Times and the Transcript of Moncton, while there are all too many indications that brother Scott and brother Hannay, of the two big morning dailies of St. John, do not see eye to eye in the things of the newspaper kingdom. It appears that the present editor of the Telegraph was for years before his advent to his present position, the principal editorial writer of the Daily Gazette of St. John. In that capacity he proved most conclusively, as was his Conservative duty and high privilege to do, that so far from having lost in her population and industries as was contended, St. John had actually gained considerably in both these respects during the census period. Of course as editor of the Liberal Telegraph it became Mr. Hannay's duty and pleasant employ to show precisely the opposite of this, and again plunge the city of his adoption into the abyss of Cimberian darkness and blue ruin. And this furnishes the ground of the present unpleasantness, for the Sun will persist in answering the Telegraph editor out of his own mouth after the manner of a certain austere man in scripture story. Clearly in this case brother Scott has brother Hannay somewhat "on the hip," so to speak, and he pursues his advantage with daily reiteration that has caused the Telegraph editor apparently to lose his temper at times.

This little episode is chiefly of interest for its bearing upon the vexed question whether it is necessary that a newspaper writer shall write from his convictions or merely as the paid advocate of certain policy and principles. Lawyers habitually take either side of a controversy between litigants in the courts and serve their clients to the best of their ability regardless of the merits of his cause. Something more than this is expected of a public writer, for a public journal is something more than a man. And the men who have made great journals—we mean in the sense of being powerful and creative organs of public opinion—have always been men of strong convictions to which they were true at all times. It is an advantage of independent journalism that it enables its conductor to thus express his honest convictions, untrammelled by party and regardless of consequences.

But after all, these newspaper quarrels are not to be taken seriously. Whether an editor is merely an advocate or a public man bound to convey to the public his real convictions, there is this much of similitude between editors and lawyers that their recriminations are usually professional and do not affect personal and social relations.

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND AND HIS PARTY.

That President Cleveland is both an able and a popular man is admitted pretty generally, yet since his election the Democratic party has steadily lost ground in the country. Doubtless the long continued commercial depression is largely accountable for this state of things, but if bad times have affected the party chances unfavorably in recent years, as always happens to the party whose fortune it is to be in power when times are depressed, then it should follow that with the revival of business now apparent across the border the Democratic party should find an improvement in its prospects. Yet at the present moment with the fall elections near at hand there is no apparent brightening of Democratic chances. The policy of the party in regard to the tariff and the policy of the President on the silver question if not wholly satisfactory to all, have not been a source of weakness in the country generally, though an obstinate section of the Democrats are disposed to make trouble on the latter question. This is affecting the party prospects in several states, notably in Missouri, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois. There are various elements of disunion in the ranks in New York and Maryland also, and though the difficulty may be tiled over in the Empire State, there is danger that Maryland, which for a quarter of a century has been Democratic, may at next election be transferred to the Republican column. In fact the outlook, viewed even from within the Democratic field is that President Cleveland will have a Republican successor when the next presidential contest is over.

THE HOT BOX.

In these days when everybody travels by rail, and men in active business find it necessary to make many such journeys, there is one fruitful cause of delays, constantly recurring and most annoying. It is the "hot box." It is in the nature of things that the faster the speed the greater the liability for a journal to become heated, and hence it is on the best trains, to whose passengers time is of the greatest importance, that these delays most frequently occur, prove most troublesome. All fast trains are expected to make sharp connections with other lines, and the delay of even a few minutes behind schedule time makes a failure to connect with the probable loss of hours on a journey of any considerable length.

To the ordinary traveller, unacquainted with the mysteries of machinery and mechanics, it seems strange that this should so frequently happen. Doubtless all that skill and money can do has been done or attempted to prevent the heating of car axles. Oil is abundant and cheap, and the bearings are fitted with the utmost accuracy, yet in the constant jar of rapid movement some trifling thing occurs which increases the friction and renders it necessary to stop the train and set the derelict car on a siding, or take time and cool down the offending "hot box." This happens on the best equipped roads, sometimes, chiefly because of their high speed, but the disappointment of the belated traveller is only the greater in such cases because he had counted with so much certainty on making his run according to the time table.

SAINT JOHN WILL CELEBRATE.

Besides the great International Exhibition which is booked for the ten days beginning with 24th September the people of St. John are arranging strong inducements for visitors to look in upon the city during that time. Races at Moose Path Park will interest all who delight in speedy trotters, and a Regatta in the harbor on the second and third of October will engage the attention of aquatic sportsmen. It will not be surprising if the North Shore should compete for the yachting and rowing honours, and with good chances of bearing them off. St. John has produced no successors to her famous Paris Crew of a quarter of a century ago, and there has been in the meantime a marked development in the rowing and sailing craft in other parts of the province. Doubtless Chatham at least will cut some figure in the aquatic events at St. John.

We notice that the Admiral is to be invited with one or more of his ships of war, and if the North Shore will but send Commodore Stewart the success of the naval side of the celebration will be assured.

STANDARD DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Mr. M. R. Benn, of Douglastown, Miramichi, general agent for the above celebrated work was in Kent recently. The Standard Dictionary which defines 301,865 words and phrases, 75,000 more than any other dictionary, was compiled by 247 English, American and Canadian editors and specialists, and is said to be the most complete, the most authoritative and the most comprehensive work of the kind in the English language. It cost the publishers, Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls, London, New York and Toronto, nearly one million dollars to produce it. In speaking of the work the Toronto Globe says:—It is well named the "Standard," for it treats with the authority of special knowledge of absolutely everything under the sun. It is the product of the knowledge and scholarship of a host of specialists and authorities, of the work of able editors, and of the enterprise of the Funk & Wagnalls Company, the publishers, who had sufficient faith in the venture to invest $1,000,000 in it. It can be truly said that it is a distinct gain to literature, to science, and to education. With so many admirable publications in the field, such as the Century, Webster's, Worcester's, the Imperial and Stormonth's, the question might be asked: Is there room for another competitor? The answer is given most conclusively in the statement that the Standard contains 75,000 words more than a dictionary published so recently as the Century. Being the latest in the field it has also the advantage of the work that has been done by its predecessors.

The book, while it affords encyclopedic treatment to subjects of vast importance, is a striking example of what may be done by judicious condensation and system. The idea of the grouping of related words and terms is not altogether new, but in no other book of the kind has the plan been carried so far, or so carefully systematized and with such excellent results in the way of clearness of presentation and breadth of scope, as in the Standard. The word "architecture" may serve as an illustration of a group of this kind. Under this single word the reader is referred to twenty other words, representing the leading types or groups into which architecture is historically divided, as Byzantine, Chinese, English, Greek, Renaissance, etc. Turning to any one of these words we find there the subdivisions of the subject explained and still further distributed—the word English, for instance, opening up thirteen more minor branches. Thus, from the single word "architecture," to which heading the reader in search of information on this point would naturally turn, the whole field, taking in every country, period, and style, is revealed at a glance. The general definitions of the Standard excel in the points of clearness, sententiousness, and brief comprehensiveness. They are exact, terse, and clearcut. The spelling of every one of the 300,000 words has received the attentive consideration of the eminent philologist, Prof. F. A. March, L. L. D. The matter of correct pronunciation was referred to an advisory committee of fifty persons composed of representative scholars in all parts of the world. The book is illustrated with a number of colored plates in Prang & Co.'s best style, notable among them being the plate of gems and precious stones. The two volumes of the work contain about 5,000 illustrations, including a number of full-page pictures. To avoid the confusion that often arises, especially in a dictionary, by the use of a hyphen for the division of both single and compound words, the German double hyphen has been used in hyphenated compounds. An important feature of the work and one which is the result of prodigious labor is the manner in which quotations are placed within the immediate reach of the reader. The places of quotations used to verify or illustrate the meanings of words have been so indicated that they can be easily found—the name of the author, the title of the work, volume, chapter and page, and the name of the publisher and date of publication being given. Nearly 100,000 volumes were read by more than 500 persons in the course of the selection of these quotations representing practically a search all through English literature from Chaucer down to the present time. A point that will be highly appreciated by printers and proofreaders is that in the Standard there is a uniform system of compounding words. Several hundred pages are devoted to the appendix, giving in one vocabulary order all countries, states, counties, and cities in the English-speaking world down to about 1,500 population; outside of that, countries, states, provinces, rivers, etc., and cities down to about 10,000 population. In the same list are also included the noted names of fiction, all names of persons (not living) of any note, all Biblical names (for pronunciation), together with other miscellaneous information of great value.

Yachting.

CHATHAM, Sept. 7.—The Miramichi Yacht club had a fine easterly breeze for its race to-day for Governor Fraser's cup. There were five starters: Learig, Alex. Burr; Maude, J. C. Miller; Oriana, J. L. Stewart; Starling, B. R. Bouthillier; Kilbride, Chas. B. Sargent. The course was twice around a three mile stretch off Chatham, twelve miles in all. The Learig won by 11 minutes elapsed time, with the Maude second, Oriana third, and Starling fourth. There was a big crowd on the wharves all the afternoon. The cup was presented to Mr. Burr at the close, speeches being made by Commodore Miller, Hon. L. J. Tweedie, J. L. Stewart and Warren C. Winslow. Cheers were given for Governor Fraser, the Learig and Commodore Miller. There is a movement on foot looking to the sending of the Learig to St. John to compete in the exhibition regatta. She is about 26 feet water line.

15 Years of Itching.

Wm. Golding, commercial traveller, 130 Esther st. Toronto, says: For 15 years I suffered untold misery from Itching Piles, sometimes called pin worms. Many and many weeks have I had to lay off the road from this trouble. I tried eight other ointments and so called remedies with no permanent relief to the itching and stinging, which irritated by scratching would bleed and ulcerate. One half a box of Chase's Ointment cured me completely.

Molus River.

Master Harry Wilmot of Fall River, had the ill luck last Tuesday to run a needle into his knee-joint. It was imbedded so as to lie out of sight the only clue to its location, being an end of thread in the eye. Under the skillful treatment of Dr. Ollough, the lad is doing well.

Edward Stevenson is able to sit up and walk a little.

Mrs. Hughes of Chatham is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson.

Master Johnson Law of Kingston is visiting Molus River.

Everywhere We Go

We find some one who has been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, and people on all hands are praising this great medicine for what it has done for them and their friends. Taken in time Hood's Sarsaparilla prevents serious illness by keeping the blood pure and all the organs in a healthy condition. It is the great blood purifier.

Hood's PILLS become the favorite cathartic with everyone who tries them. 25c. per box.

Kent Junction.

Sept. 9th.—Miss Annie Smith of Cocagne was here on a visit to her aunt Mrs. J. W. Morton.

Mr. L. P. McMichael has been permanently appointed night agent at Beaver Brook. His smiling countenance is very much missed here.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Morton and son Tupper accompanied Miss Annie Smith as far as Moncton, Saturday returning that evening after a pleasant days outing.

I have been informed of the departure of another one of our young men, Mr. Albert Wilson night agent of this place; who has been removed to Coal Branch. His society will be much missed especially by the young ladies.

Mr. Craig of Barnaby River, arrived here this evening to fill the position vacated by Mr. Wilson.

Mrs. Thos. McPherson went to Derby Junction to-day to visit her brother.

Mrs. F. Ferguson of Richibucto, passed through here Saturday.

If all reports are true, a popular young man of Richibucto is very much interested in the welfare of one of the fair ones of this place.
