

KENT COUNTY COURT.—In the case of the Queen vs Cormier and wife, who were charged with setting fire to the McEwen house, near Buctouche, the accused were acquitted. Damien Cormier is the man who was suspected of doing away with a man named Perry, who disappeared mysteriously near Buctouche some years ago. LeBlanc vs. Tait resulted in a verdict for the defendant.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.—Antoine LeBlanc, Oliver Savoie, Peter Savoie and Peter Albert, of Black River, Buctouche, went spearing eels on Potts' Pond about 7 o'clock Thursday night. LeBlanc and Oliver Savoie went on to the pond in a scow while the other two men remained on the bank and made a fire. After LeBlanc and Savoie had been out fishing for some time, they found that their boat was filling with water. Lazare LeBlanc, who was also fishing on the pond near by, offered them a bailer to take the water out of their boat, but they replied that they would go ashore. Before reaching shore, however, the boat sank. They called to Lazare LeBlanc, but before they could be reached, Antoine LeBlanc sank and was drowned. Savoie was rescued in an exhausted condition. LeBlanc's body was recovered Friday morning. Deceased leaves a wife and three small children.

—There were "wigs on the green" Saturday night at hotel row, Queen St., James Thompson took objection to an epithet hurled at his son by James Cady and invited the latter to apologize or settle the matter according to the rules laid down by the Marquis of Queensbury. In the first round Thompson was knocked out, and the son came to the rescue with a cudgel, which was secured by Cady and wielded so effectively that in a few moments he stood master of the field, the Thompson faction having retired behind the walls. In a few moments a sortie was made by the besieged, the old man and two boys, armed with clubs and other weapons. For a brief time nothing could be seen but flying rustic seats, sticks and other missiles accompanied by the dull thud of the clubs as they struck home. Cady received a severe scalp wound and had to be taken to the doctor to have the wound dressed. It is time such disgraceful scenes were put a stop to. If the authorities are unable to cope with the matter they should be replaced by men who could.

An Agonizing Death.

A crowd of nearly a thousand people watched a man drown in Los Angeles, and was powerless to help him. His name was Thomas Reynolds, and he was a laborer in a sewer building on Los Angeles street. The scene was the most agonizing that can be imagined. Reynolds was working in a new sewer that is building directly underneath an old brick one. The ground is soft there and Reynolds was caught by a small cave-in. His legs were pinioned by the falling earth, but no one thought his situation serious. A rope was made fast to him and an attempt was made to pull him out, but his shovel had fallen across his feet, and it was soon seen that he would have to be dug out.

The work was at once begun. Suddenly to the horror of the great crowd that had assembled, the old brick sewer right over the wretched man's head burst and a large stream of water flowed into the excavation, gradually driving the rescuers out. A fire engine was sent for and attempted to pump the inflow of water out, but it proved of no avail.

The man was doomed and nothing could be done for him. He was upright in the hole and the water soon reached his waist. For the first time he realized that he would die. Inch by inch the fluid rose, and the poor fellow lost his nerve and commenced to utter the most heartrending shrieks and appeals for help. The streets became blocked with people, and as the news spread of what was going on in that hole the crowd became frantic with a desire to save the man. But absolutely nothing could be done to succor him. The water reached the throat, then the chin, then a ripple struck his lips. The watchers at the brink of the hole turned their faces away and groaned as a last despairing shriek came from the victim. His arms beat the water back frantically and then were still.—San Francisco Examiner.
