with a colicky baby or a colicky stomach isn't pleasant. Either can be avoided by keeping a bottle of Perry Davis' PAIN KILLER on the medicine shelf. It is invaluable in sudden attacks of Cramps, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery and Diarrhoea. Just as valuable for all external pains.
* Dose—One teaspoonful in a half glass of water or milk (warm if convenient).

ONE THING IS CERTAIN, PAIN KILLER KILLS PAIN.

terminated it otherwise than was the intention of these wicked men, for just at that moment some one forward began bawling out, in a great hoarse voice, "Where is Jack Mackra? Where is he, I say! Show him to me!" — "ye!"

As I might turn my head, I looked whence the voice came, and there saw, as in a dream, a great, tall, lantern-jawed man, with a patch over one eye and a crutch under his left arm. In his right hand he held a long sharp knife, with which he jabbed at those who stood in his way, so that they were glad enough to make room for him, one or two of them cursing him, the others grinning and laughing as though it were all a fine piece of sport. As those around me drew aside I beheld him more plainly; his left leg had been cut off at the knee, he was loose-jointed and ungainly, and he had one of the most villainous countenances that it was ever my fortune to look into. I could also see that he, like many of the others, had been drinking. It was very plain that he was a great favorite amongst the rest, for they made room for him and took all his curses and many blows, which he gave with his crutch, without either answering him or striving to defend themselves. Even the fellow who had spoken so boldly to the captain's face, and whom I afterwards found to be the chief of the "lords," as they are pleased to call those in authority amongst them, grinned and stood aside as the villainous cripple came and leaned over me.

"D—n you," says he, "and is it you, Jack Mackra? Then I have a score to pay you that has stood on the slate for this many a day."

He turned me over upon my face with his crutch, and the next moment I felt the cords that tied my hands give way, and knew that they had been cut, then my legs and feet were loosened from their lashings, and I was a free man. I heard the fellow say, "Get up!" whereupon I stood upon my feet and gazed about me, though my brain still swam, and all things appeared blurred and distorted to my sight, the sky and the sea and the faces around me being all strangely mingled together. Then presently, as my confusion began to fade away from me, I heard the one-legged man speaking to me.

"And do you know who I am?" said he.

"No," says I, at last gathering my wits to speak; "I cannot bring you to mind."

"Why," says he, "don't you remember Jimmy Ward, the cook aboard the Pembroke Castle—him as you saved from five drunken Spanish devils over at Honduras? Hey? don't you mind how they had me down under the table, jabbing at me with their d—d snicker-bees and swearing that they would cut the living heart out of me? If it hadn't been for you, it would have been all over with Jimmy Ward at that time." He waited for an answer, but as yet I could say nothing. "Well, I haven't forgot it if you have," he continued; "I owe you a good turn, and I'll pay it if I have to bleed for it."

Just then up steps the fellow who had faced England so boldly a moment or two before. "Come, come, Jimmy," says he, "a joke's a joke, and I can laugh as loud as any; but here's a man has done us more damage than anybody we've fell in with since we ran foul of the Eagle."

"Hang him up! Hang him up!" sang out several of those who stood around, and I verily believe the business would have gone against me, after all, only for Captain England, who must have been near for all this time, and who came to the aid of the cripple. Both together, they contrived so to argue and talk and threaten the others that the end of the matter was they led me off to the captain's cabin, the one on one side of me and the other on the other, whilst the crowd followed behind, though they came no further than the door, which was clapped to in their faces.

"You've had a narrow miss of it," says England, so soon as we were come fairly within and had sat down, "and you've nobody to thank for it but yourself, for if you'd minded what I told you you'd have staid where you were and let your bad luck sail her own craft without putting your hand to the helm. Even yet I don't know if we'll be able to get you off, for Tom Burke is hot for your blood, and will get it if he's able."

"That he will," said Ward; "for he's not the man to give up what he's laid his hand to."

"Have you had anything to eat?" said England, presently.

"Not since five o'clock this morning," said I.

"Why," said he, "you'll have to be fed whether they hang you or not." Whereupon he fetched out from a locker a great lot of biscuit and a decanter of the very port-wine with which I had entertained Mr. Longways when he came aboard the Casandra with The Rose of Paradise; nor have I ever tasted food that was more refreshing than that which I then ate, for I was well-nigh exhausted with hunger.

No one spoke for a while, and England walked up and down the cabin with his hands clasped behind his back. During all this time I had been looking around me, and of a sudden my heart seemed to leap into my throat, for in the corner of the cabin, lying amongst a lot of litter, where it seemed to have been flung as of no account, I saw the iron despatch-box.

My danger had been so great and my mind in such a maze for all this time that there had been no room in my brain for other matters, the very objects of my adventure having been forgotten for a while but with the sight of this everything came back to me with a rush, and I wondered for the first time that I had not yet seen my betrayer.

"Where is Captain Leach?" said I to England.

He stopped short in his walk, and regarded me with a very strange expression, which at the time I could in no wise understand.

EDMANSON, BATES & Co.,
Gentlemen.—About three or four weeks ago I had an attack of Itching Piles. I tried two or three different remedies recommended by druggist as "the best and only cure," etc., but got no relief. About the time I was beginning to despair of finding any relief, with some slight misgivings I bought a box of your pile cure, which I am pleased to say gave me almost instant relief and permanent cure. I consider your Ointment a God-send.

ALF. J. DEAN.

A CHEERFUL JOURNALIST.

The Poetic Soul of a Maine Journalist is Moved to the Following Elegant Burst.

It is a dull spirit indeed that does not feel the inspiration of this season. The up springing of nature sends a thrill through the least imaginary soul. And forgetting the snow and dark days of the long New England winter, and look forward to the promise, given by the spring grass, the bursting buds, the early blooming flowers, and the glowing suns of early May.

It would be well if all were able to enjoy the thrill of which the writer speaks. But how can a man or woman tortured by disease forget the pain and wretchedness that have survived the snows and dark days of winter? They cannot until they are cured. They need a Spring medicine. They need a thorough course of Hawker's nerve and stomach tonic, the greatest nerve and brain invigorator, and flesh and blood builder of the age. It restores lost nerve energy, and renews mental activity and muscular vigor. It forms new rich blood, increasing its reconstructive powers, thereby renewing wasted tissues and nerve force. For delicate ladies or men suffering from the effects of worry, brain tire, exhaustion or any form of debility resulting from overwork, la grippe, or overtaking of the nerve forces in any way, it will be found invaluable in restoring tone to the nerves, stomach and blood, and vigor to the mind and body. Sold by all druggists fifty cents a bottle, six for $2.50.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.
Svyrrous—Misture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SVYRUS'S Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists, or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia. Lyman, Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents.

That's All.

When Mr. Gladstone was addressing a great meeting at Manchester in 1868 during his candidacy for south-west Lancashire, a curious incident occurred. He was speaking of the famous Trade Hall, the scene of very many of Mr. Bright's oratorical triumphs. The room was densely packed with an enthusiastic audience, whose patience was severely tried by one man. This individual at short intervals, shouted, "Tell us what you said in '58." At length the meeting could bear with him no longer, and a general cry of "Turn him out," arose. The man was seized, raised on high, and passed somewhat roughly over the heads of the audience until finally he was landed in the street. Then some curious person went up and asked him to explain what he meant by saying "Tell us what you said in '58." The disturber laughed. "I didn't mean anything," he said, "only I was roasted and stifled in there, and I knew the only way I could get out was to make a row and be turned out. That's all."

The Whiteway executive held two cabinet meetings at St. John's on Monday. The situation in respect to confederation with Canada is not as satisfactory as might be. The debt of Newfoundland is $13,000,000, and this is a formidable obstacle to union. Canada's debt is only $50 per capita. She is willing to assume $10,000,000 of Newfoundland's debt, which would represent the same proportion on her per capita indebtedness. There is slight likelihood of the Imperial government assuming the remaining $3,000,000. It is reported the government is trying to negotiate another loan to help meet the claims of saving bank depositors. It is said this is partly the object of Mr. Bond's visit to Ottawa. The government is preparing to introduce stringent retrenchment measures at Thursday's meeting of the Legislature. It also promises to present a report of the confederation negotiations with Canada.
