

RUN DOWN WITH DYSPEPSIA STOMACH Liver AND HEART AFFECTED. Almost in Despair But Finally CURED By Taking AYER'S PILLS

"For fifteen years, I was a great sufferer from indigestion in its worst forms. I tested the skill of many doctors, but grew worse and worse, until I became so weak I could not walk fifty yards without having to sit down and rest. My stomach, liver, and heart became affected, and I thought I would surely die. I tried Ayer's Pills and they helped me right away. I continued their use and am now entirely well. I don't know of anything that will so quickly relieve and cure the terrible suffering of dyspepsia as Ayer's Pills."—JOHN C. FRITCHARD, Brodie, Warren Co., N. C.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE SIR JOHN S. D. THOMPSON.

Impressive Services and Eloquent
Funeral Oration.
(Condensed from Globe.)

HALIFAX, Jan. 3.—With all the honors Canada could bestow, the remains of Sir John Thompson were to-day committed to the grave. The services were the most solemnly grand ever seen in Canada and were a fitting conclusion of the impressive obsequies held in England under the direction of the Queen and the Imperial government.

Early this morning the body was conveyed privately from the council chamber to St. Mary's church and placed in a position in front of the altar at the head of the centre aisle. It was covered by a beautiful pall worked and donated by Lady Aberdeen, and the wreaths of the Queen and the Governor General were placed beside it. The church was completely draped in black and in such a way as to make a grand and impressive sight. Silver crosses and stars shone on the black drapings and in the light of the candles and incandescent lamps added much to the impressiveness of the scene. The service began about 10 o'clock. Archbishop O'Brien presided. Bishop Cameron was celebrant, Rev. Dr. Murphy was assistant priest, Rev. T. J. Daly, deacon; Rev. G. J. O'Brien, S. J., Montreal, sub-deacon; Rev. Dr. Campbell, and Rev. M. Carroll, acolytes; Rev. D. Foley, censor bearer; Rev. J. B. Moriarty, master of ceremonies.

The Dies Irae was magnificently rendered by the choir. For the benefit of the congregation it had been specially translated into English by the archbishop.

Archbishop O'Brien delivered the funeral oration. His Grace took his text from I. Samuel XII, verses 2, 3 and 4. He said it was meet some words should be spoken of life and hope amid the sadness and gloom that encompass us about. The great heart of Canada had been strongly moved and its sympathy aroused as never before, by a sorrow deep in its sense of loss and pathetic by reason of the noble qualities its object awakened. The mourning and regret had not been confined to the Dominion—from across the ocean the echo of an empire's wail had reached our shores, while unmistakable evidence of regret had come from far and near. No outward mark of respect had been omitted—from our Queen to the lowest citizen, from political friends and political opponents, abundance of such tokens have been given while representatives of the Queen and the civic power of our country are here to give all pomp and circumstance to the funeral. But man dies not with death and in the midst of our mourning the solemn rites of religion, tinged though they be with human sadness, yet have an undertone of consolation, of hope, of triumph. The pleading tones of the Dies Irae are not wailing of despair but rather expressions of confidence in infinite mercy and finally before the remains are carried forth the exultant words which contain promise and assurance of victory over death will be intoned. The Archbishop then pointed out that our sorrow is not as those who mourn without hope, if we know that our friend though dead lives before God. Our sorrow, however, was profound and universal. For an individual loss the regret was confined within a narrow circle, but we could feel sure the loss was a national one. Few, he said, would deny that Canada had suffered almost irreparable loss because of the qualities which were based and rooted in the character of the man. In him as in Samuel of old people recognized integrity of life and conscientious fulfillment of onerous duties. In all positions of his earthly career, in city council, provincial legislature, on the bench, in the department of justice, and in the Dominion parliament—he could challenge public criticism.

Archbishop O'Brien, continuing, pointed out that from such a life many lessons were to be learned which it was well to ponder on in this day of grief, and derive therefrom the consolation of realizing that though dead he speaketh and that though removed from the scene of his earthly activity the magic of his influence survives and is productive of good. Industry, sobriety, and conscientious attention to details of each duty were pinions which bore him onward in what can only be rightly characterized as a phenomenal manner. His success points to young men the one sure and honorable road to public distinction as well as the one way of combining worldly success with personal integrity.

After appropriate reference to Sir John's faithfulness in the discharge of his religious duties under all circumstances, the Archbishop briefly referred to his death, and concluding said, if England mourned, and all Canada wept at the sudden falling of his night there are those whose agony not only then but now is too sacred to be unveiled. The faithful wife and loving children and sorrowing relatives must bear not only their full share of the public bereavement, but also the bitter personal loss, the extent of which can be known save by themselves alone. If words of sincerest sympathy and every mark of tender and delicate respect could obliterate such sorrow from the mind they would be even now fully comforted. From far and near such words and such tokens have come. Her gracious Majesty, with true womanly feeling and solicitude—for which all Canadians love and admire her the more, if that be possible—has testified in a most striking manner her sympathy her admiration, and her love. By her special command all the observances prescribed by his religion were carried out and almost royal honors paid to his remains. Such marks of universal esteem as well as words of friendly condolence, may well help to assuage if they cannot heal the wounds of the heart. More than this, his grieving family will find consolation in the reflecting on his well-spent life and simple Christian conversation. He has left to them an inheritance more precious than gold, a spotless reputation and an untarnished name, and the memory of noble qualities nobly employed. Though soon to be borne from their sight their hearts shall not be bereft of hope for the God whom he loved and served will whisper to their soul, "Thy husband, thy father, thy brother shall arise." In this sure hope we commit to the earth his mortal remains, and as we pray for the speedy entrance of his soul into the eternal joys of heaven let us not forget to pray for his family, that they may be comforted and sustained, and for our country, that it may be the fruitful mother of many such sons as the Right Hon. Sir John Thompson.

The service was as solemn and impressive as it was possible to be. All the local militia were out and assisted the police and marshals in keeping the route clear, and King's Liverpool regiment were lined on either side of street all along the route about ten paces apart, the immense crowds being kept on the sidewalk.

It was nearly twelve o'clock when the services were over and promptly as possible the line got into order and the procession started, going down Spring Garden road to Pleasant street, then along to Inglis, and to South Park street to Holy Cross Cemetery. The military all carried arms at trail. The different societies wore their badges draped and had crapes on their arms. The marines from the Blenheim, about three hundred strong, also had crapes on their arms. The bands all had their instruments draped and drums muffled.

The floral tributes were on two large cars drawn by black horses led by men in heavy crapes. Against a black background the beautiful tributes showed to the best effect.

The funeral car was a magnificent construction. It was drawn by six black horses. The car was of black with silver trimming. A chain of roses was about the coffin, which was covered by Lady Aberdeen's pall, on which rested the Queen and Lord Aberdeen's wreaths. Other tributes from friends were placed about the car.

Kingston.

Mr. Jonathan Forster arrived home from Campbellton last week.

Miss Kate McLean, teacher, of Chatham, went home last week. She was accompanied by Miss Conway, of Kingston.

The Richibucto Amateur Dramatic Company will play in the public hall, here this (Thursday) evening, and it is expected that a large number from the surrounding districts will attend. Home talent has always been highly appreciated by the people of Kingston and this occasion will likely prove no exception to the rule.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Goldie which took place on Saturday afternoon, was very largely attended. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Hazen Russ, John Jardine, Jr., T. F. Curran, Edwin Bowser, Martin Lanigan, Jonathan Forster.

Mrs. B. F. Bruin, of Waltham, Mass., arrived here on Friday, too late to see her mother, Mrs. Goldie alive, but in time for the funeral.

Mr. Bert Goldie left on Friday for his home in Fairville St. John.

Mr. Robert Girvan left on Friday for Fredericton, where he is attending Normal School.

Miss Lizzie Fraser left on Saturday for Kouchibouguac, where she will take charge of the school in district No. 1.

There is a great deal of sickness throughout the country, and the doctors are kept pretty busy. In one family there has been five deaths within two weeks or four within about one week. They are: Mr. John Morton, of Pine Ridge, who died about two weeks ago. His brother William, who attended the funeral, took the disease (pneumonia) and lasted only a few days, Samuel and James Morton, sons, and Mrs. Rufus Beers, daughter of the last named Mr. Morton. It is said that other members of the family are sick.

An enterprising farmer here has about revolutionized the nursery business in this locality. His methods are entirely different from those practised by the nurserymen of Rochester and other great stock growing centres. The latter growers of trees and shrubs, dig their stock in the autumn, and what they do not dispose of immediately is put into frost proof cellars, to be delivered in the following spring. But our nurseryman simply cuts them off above the snow and sells them by the sled load whenever he gets an order—and this is very often. Gray birch, white birch, and other ornamental trees are in good demand. Have the smelts become so esthetic that they require beautiful parks to be laid out for them? They are getting too toney.

Miss Lida Forster has resumed charge of her school at Molus River.

Mrs. Thomas Burns is recovering from her protracted illness.

Mr. James McDougall is home from the woods, sick.

Mr. Alex. McKay, of Halifax, is visiting his cousin, H. M. Ferguson.

Three of our good looking, well dressed, refined mannered young men make frequent visits to the Shiretown. Their mission is a profound secret.

Miss Teresa McDonald, teacher, is confined to her boarding house with a severe cold. Her department of the public school is closed as a consequence.

Mrs. James Morton, who was reported dangerously ill of pneumonia, the disease which took off her husband a few days ago, is improving.

ON THE DARK ROAD!

A ST. JOHN N. B., LADY
WHO WAS NEARING
THE GRAVE.

SHE DECLARES THAT PAINE'S CELERY
COMPOUND SAVED HER.

The case of Mrs. William Irvine, of St. John, N. B. was a sad one, and caused her family and friends great anxiety for a time. Overwork, watching, loss of sleep and intense agony from kidney trouble made life almost unbearable. Effort after effort with medicines and doctor's prescriptions proved futile. The grave and its terrors were becoming more realistic, and death's hand seemed to be firmly fastened on the victim of disease.

There flashed a bright inspiration.—Paine's Celery Compound!—a thought of a medicine that had wrought wonders for others. The marvellous life-giving medicine was used, and the results are briefly set forth in Mrs. Irvine's letter as follows:—

"I think it great pleasure as well as a duty to put on record what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I have been troubled for the last ten years with kidney complaint, and have tried a great many preparations and doctor's prescriptions, but with little or no benefit.

For the last six months I have had a great strain upon my system from night-watching and overwork. I was breaking down; my friends said, 'I was going fast to death.' I resolved to try your Paine's Celery Compound, and used four bottles. My kidney trouble disappeared; nervousness and sleeplessness are troubles of the past, and my general health is greatly improved. In a word, I am cured; and I wish you to publish this so that the world can read it.

In memory of Mary Kennedy, daughter of Robert and Catherine Kennedy, who died December 19, 1894, aged 29 years and 10 months, written by her sister who holds her memory sacred.

Mary, you were kind and lovely,
Gentle every day you stayed;
But 'twas God who took you from us,
And his summons must be obeyed.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful in the grave so low,
Thou no more will join our number,
Thou no more with us can stay.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven with joy to meet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

A brutal attack with a knife was made Friday night by a stranger on Rev. Peter D. Brady, rector of the parish of St. Mary's college, San Francisco, in the parlor of the rectory. A man, well dressed, demanded money as soon as the priest entered the room. When Father Brady remarked maybe he had no money for the fellow a volley of profane abuse followed and the rector was murderously stabbed in all parts of the face. The miscreant beat his victim senseless and bit his finger.
