LIFE INSURANCE AT COST.

The Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association of New York issues life policies at about half the old line rates, and returns to the policy holders at the end of ten years the earnings of their share of the reserve which makes it the cheapest life insurance in the world, considering the security offered. The company has a reserve fund of $3,700,000 and have paid to deceased policy holders upwards of $19,000,000. Lieut. Col. James Domville, 134 Prince Wm. Street, St. John, is manager for the Maritime Provinces. James T. Kirke, Special Traveling Agent for N. B.

P. S.—Some desirable territory for Agents may yet be secured.

Something of new record was established by thieves in Adams county, Wash., last week. They stole a big barn belonging to the county auditor, pulling it down during the night, loading it on wagons and hauling it to parts as yet unknown.

Mr. Edward Jack, of Fredericton, the well-known civil engineer, died on Tuesday evening after a severe illness of about ten days. Mr. Jack was born in St. Andrews about 70 years ago and has been a resident of Fredericton for a great many years. In early life he studied law, and was called to the bar in 1850. In a short time he abandoned the law for civil engineering. For many years Mr. Jack had charge of the stumpage department of the crown land office, but resigned fifteen years ago.

K. D. C. is marked prompt and lasting in its effects.

The Only Venomous Bird.

Among all the thousands of feathered creatures classified by the trained ornithologists, but one, the rpir n'doob, or "bird of death," is known to be venomous. This queer and deadly species of the winged and feathered tribe is a native of the island of Papua, or New Guinea. The bird is described as being about the size of a common tame pigeon, of gray plumage, and a tail of extraordinary length, ending in a tip of brilliant scarlet red. It is a marsh bird and is found to inhabit only the immense stagnant pools adjoining the lakes of the interior of the island. The rpir has a hooked beak, as sharp as a cock's spur and hollow. The venom with which he inoculates is distilled in a set of organs which nature has provided for that purpose and which lie in the upper mandible just below the openings of the nostrils. Under this poison secreting laboratory in the roof of the mouth is a small, fleshy knob. When the bird sets its beak in the flesh of a victim, this knob receives a pressure which liberates the venom and inoculates the wound. No man, native or otherwise, was ever known to recover from a bite inflicted by a rpir n'doob. The suffering in such cases is said to be much more agonizing than in cases of rattlesnake and Gila monster bites.—St. Louis Republic.

GENTS—Please send us four dozen Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion. We find it a genuine article. It knocks all others out in the first round. Several ladies here are loud in its praise, saying it has saved the lives of our children.

GROGAN & Co.,
Kouchibouguac, N. B.

Bishop Paret, of Baltimore, tells a good story at his own expense. He was recently on a train, and near him sat two drunken men. Presently one of the men with a forcible expletive, remarked to the other that some one had robbed him of a $20 bill. His friend remarked: "Oh, I guess not; you must have it about you somewhere." But the other insisted he hadn't, and that he had the bill when he came aboard the train. Some one had robbed him, and he proposed to find it if he had to search the whole crowd. "As it happened," says Bishop Paret, "I had a $20 bill, and that was all, and as I was the nearest man to them, and the first likely to be approached, I felt a little uncomfortable. Then it occurred to me to pretend to be asleep. Sure enough, in a minute more I was accosted with, 'I say neighbour!' but I made no answer. Then the man grabbed my arm and shook me, but to no use, as I didn't wake up. He kept on shaking, however, and always a little more forcibly, until at last his friend interposed with: 'I say, Bill, let him alone, will you: he's drunker'n you are!'"

Hoarseness And Sore Throat.

DEAR SIR,—I highly recommend Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam as the best cure for coughs, colds, hoarseness and sore throat, ever used.

Alfred Austin, the new poet laureate of England, will be sixty-one years of age on May 30 next. He is a Roman Catholic in religion and a Conservative in politics. Governor Levi P. Morton, of New York, has announced to his friends that he will stand as a candidate for President before the national Republican convention at St. Louis.

She Ought To Know

Having used Burdock Bitters for 15 years I cannot keep from recommending it to others. I have sold hundreds of bottles from my store and as I keep other medicines I ought to know which sells best. It is a wonderful medicine.

Yours very sincerely,

Against Canadian Competition.

The Northwestern Lumberman says the prospects for the restoration of a duty on lumber are brighter, and that a bill will be introduced at this session of congress and is promised influential support. Canadian competition is the thing complained of. Here is the bill which is being advocated.

"Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, that on and after the first day of March, 1896, there shall be levied, collected and paid upon the articles mentioned herein, the rates of duty respectively prescribed, namely: Sawed boards, planks, deals and other lumber, rough, $1 a thousand feet board measure. Lumber of any kind planed or surfaced one or two sides, $1.50 a thousand feet board measure. Lumber of any kind worked to a specific form of manufacture, such as siding, flooring, pickets, mouldings, etc., $2 a thousand feet board measure. Shingles and lath, 20 per cent. ad valorem; provided that where any country now imposes, or hereafter shall impose, an export duty on logs or discriminating stumpage dues, the amount of such duty or dues shall be added to the duties named on articles enumerated above imported from such countries imposing such export duties or discriminating stumpage dues."

THE BEST DIPLOMATISTS.

They Are Usually Men of Whom the Public Hears Nothing.

Sir Edward Mallet, in his recent speech at the dinner given in his honor by the British colony in Berlin, dwelt as follows upon the qualities which go to make up a good diplomatist:

When it became known that I was about to retire from the service, much speculation arose as to who was likely to be my successor, and the names of men who are great in other branches of the service of the Queen were suggested. For a reason which I will attempt to explain it was advanced that it would be better to fill the place with an outsider of distinction than with one belonging to the permanent diplomatic service. It is a very peculiar thing about that service that the greatest ability may be concealed beneath a bushel. It is our duty to proceed noiselessly in our course. The surest proof of the merit of a diplomatist is that he is not heard of. The moment a fuss is made about him you may be pretty sure that something is wrong, for so long as he can keep everything smooth, which is the object and essence of his calling, he can attract no very brilliant man can ever be fitted for diplomacy. The very keenness of his intellect will impel him to dazzle the public by successes great and small.

But the virtues of diplomacy must be achieved in silence, or their spoils are often lost. I remember many years ago a distinguished outsider being sent to represent us at a distant post. He was resolved upon success, but he was also resolved that his successes should be known. So he telegraphed them to one of the most influential of the daily papers—I will not say which—and I can assure you that we were all duly impressed with the records of them, and dwell, not perhaps without envy, on the picture which was presented to us of the potentate to whom he was accredited writhing in the iron grasp of our representative. But when these reports came to be translated into the foreign press the vigilance and the jealousies of foreign nations were aroused. Reprisals were threatened in other quarters of the globe, and in the end our Minister was requested to come home. The diplomatic service heard of him no more. Yet this man would have been a useful agent if he had acquired the habits of self-negation and reticence which training alone can give. In another case a brilliant lawyer was appointed. He went to his post determined to uphold the flag as it had never been upheld before, and succeeded. Within a short space he had quarreled with a majority of his colleagues to that extent that when he gave an official dinner on the occasion of the Queen's birthday, they neither came nor sent an excuse. He afterward contributed in a slashing style to a rupture of relations, and this really showed much talent, for the nation was both a peaceful and a friendly one. He came away in a whirl of fireworks which left him in the dark, and the diplomatic service saw him no more. No, we do not want coruscating diamonds; the homely button is much more useful.

I will push this simile further. The world is a huge body clad in a garment of state. The diplomatists, studded all over the earth, are the unobtrusive buttons which hold the garments together. As long as we perform this function satisfactorily we pass unnoticed, because the garments continue to fit properly. It is only when we break loose or come off that we become an object of attention and discussion. For instance, I am going to come off, and on that account alone I have recently been more written about in the papers—I say it with pride than during all the eleven years that I have been Ambassador. I have thus fairly outlined the causes which might lead it to be supposed that when a high post falls vacant it can be filled from outside the pale of service. Believe me that within its ranks there are men who can fill all the diplomatic posts we possess with ability and distinction, and that these posts can not be so filled except by persons who have behind them a long diplomatic training. You will not, therefore, be surprised that I should have hailed the selection of Sir Frank Lascelles as my successor with great satisfaction, a sentiment which was increased by a long-standing friendship between us. We were together at the Paris Embassy during the trying time of the Commune, and it is under such a strain that one learns best the metal that a man is made of. He has mounted step by step, the rungs of the diplomatic ladder. He is versed in all the traditions and possesses all the qualities which combine to produce distinction in a diplomatist. He will, I am sure, within a short time gain your suffrages to such an extent as to make me pleasantly jealous in my retirement.

Precious Ink Bottles.

Four ink bottles, from which some of the greatest literary works of the century issued, are to be on view, says our Paris correspondent, at an approaching exhibition of relics. They were used severally by Victor Hugo, Lamartine, the elder Dumas and George Sand. Mme. Victor Hugo collected them to sell at a charity bazaar in Guernsey. To this end she had them set in a frame of oak that could be used as a table. With each is a letter attesting its authenticity. Victor Hugo said: "I did not buy or choose this ink bottle, but fell on it by chance and used it for months. It was asked of me for a work of charity, and here it is.—Hanteville House, June, 1860." Lamartine wrote: "Presented by Lamartine to a master of the pen." Dumas the elder thus certified: "I certify that this is the ink bottle I used in writing my last fifteen works.—A. Dumas, 10 April, 1860." George Sand, in a letter of three pages, begs Mme. Hugo to excuse the ugliness of her box ink bottle, which she shut with a spring. She used it in all her tours and wanderings, and could only part with it for the sake of Mme. Hugo's charity.—London News.

A Modern Knight.

The following, as told by an exchange, proves that the spirit of the knights of old is not yet gone:

It was a cold morning in March, in Chicago. A little old man stood on the corner of Clark and Randolph Streets, selling newspapers.

He was thinly clad, and kept trotting up and down, trying to keep warm, and his voice was hoarse from cold, and passers-by could hardly hear him.

Some boys jeered and laughed at him, but one, about thirteen years old, rather better dressed than the rest, after looking at him for a few moments, walked up to him and said: "I will shout for you."

The old man thought the boy was making fun of him, but the boy began to call out: "Times, Herald, Tribune, News!" in a clear voice, which attracted so many customers that in a little while the old man had sold his stock. He offered to pay his youthful partner, but he would take nothing, and went off with a smiling face.

USEPELEE ISLAND WINES FOR DEBILITY NATURE'S TONIC.

E. G. SCOVIL, AGENT PELEE ISLAND GRAPE JUICE. ST. JOHN, N. B.
DEAR SIR,—My family have received great benefits from the use of the PELEE ISLAND GRAPE JUICE during the past four years. It is the best tonic and sedative for debility, nervousness and weak lungs we have ever tried. It is much cheaper and pleasanter than medicines. I would not be without it in the house.
