More Kind Words from Hamilton Re. garding the Great Remedy Which Cures Rheumatism in One to Three

H. L. Brewer, the well-known artist, and his wife, have lived for over a year in a cottage on wheels, says the San Francisco Chronicle. Their movable residence is at present a lot in Alameda, where they are couched under a spreading oak, and where they intend to stay the coming win-

A YEAR IN A WAGON.

Their house is a result of Mr. Brewer's attempt to secure a place where he cloud work at his art and still be at liberty to go where he wished. The house was built in 1894, at a cost of about $500, and Mr. Brewer said recently that he had already made enough by the saving in rent and expenses to pay for it. The van is somewhat similar to those in use by gypsies, but is fitted up in much more comfortable style. It has one room 10 feet long, 41/2 feet wide and 6 feet 3 inches high, and in this space Mr. Brewer and his wife have lived, slept and eaten for the last year. At one end of the wagon, over the wheels, is a raised platform, and here is a pocket edition of a cooking stove, with a collection of shining pots and pans around it. Under the seat of the wagon is Mrs. Brewer's oupboard, and her table consists of the top of the big trunk, which contains the wardrobe of the pair.

The sleeping arrangements are, however, the greatest puzzle to the uninitiated. The bed consists of two big cushions laid out upon the floor of the wagon, and hedding is stored in a box under the wagen, reached by a trap door in its floor. The little house has plenty of light, as it must have, for Mr. Brewer has it for his studio on occasions. The door is on the left side, between the wheels, and is made in two halves, so that either can be opened independently of the other. Beside the door there is a big plate glass window and several smaller windows. The whole contrivance, including two persons, the little stove and the big trunk, weighs less than 2,400 pounds, and can be taken anywhere by two horses Mrs Brewer is no less enthusiastic about the traveling home than her husband. All last winter they were domiciled in the hills above Berkeley and never felt better in their lives. Last August they started with their caravan from Alameda. They went over the hills to Contra Costa county and spent several months sketching in the valleys. Then they went to Berkeley for the winter, and in the spring moved their residence farther up into the hills This winter they expect to spend in Alameda, and in the spring they will start out for a tour of the state."

Six Dollars for a Wife.

A very romantie story comes from Summerville, Chaattanooga county. Some days ago a couple arrived in that city evidently in the first stage of a violent case of conjugal affection. Their loving tendencies and conspicuous caresses attracted the attention of the steady-going citizens of that model mountain town. They could be seen in the gloaming out strolling together, and the precincts of Cleghorn spring were rendered still more picturesque by their presence. Married folk took it for granted that they were enjoying the first fruits of love's young dream, and simply passed by on the other side and made wry faces. The single foik blushed and giggled and possibly wondered if it were always thus. The couple registered as Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Thurston, Knoxville, Tenn., and the people of Summerville naturally supposed that their conduct was but a fair sample of east Tennessee

Late one afternoon a weary looking individual alighted from a train from Chattanooga and walked hurriedly up to the hotel. He scanned the faces of these he passed very closely, as if he were looking for some one he expected to find. From the few inquiries that he made people learned that he was in search of a wife, and that he had not resorted to the usual method of putting a notice in the strayed or stolen column, but had started out on a personal search.

Mr and Mrs Thurston had been out for a customary stroll, and just as they rounded a corner they were confronted with the stranger in search of a wife. He had found his wife, but, unfortunately, she was in the hands of her friend. Expectation was on tiptoe for blood-and thunder denouement, and from various coigns of vantage, in the shape of dry goods boxes and sycamore trees, behind which they had ensconced themselves, the townspeople peered anxiously, awaiting the signal for open hostilities. But they waited in vain. Those nearest caught the fragments of a spirited conversation, in which the husband reproached his recreant spouse with her faithlessness in deserting his bed and board. She retorted that he had not treated her nice and that she had found a handsomer man than he, which was indeed the God's truth when the two men were compared. Mr. Thurston then began to parley with the rueful husband and tried to effect a compromise. The husband demanded $16 damage, which he thought was too high, considering that he had already won the affection of the wife and was in possession which was nine points in the law. He offered $5. Then there was a lot of jawing and haggling until they finally compromised on $6, which the interloper paid the forlorn husband, and the latter took the next train for Chat-tanooga, probably proud of his bargain. The couple also took their departure for green fields and pastures new.—Atlanta Constitution.

Dignity Doesn't Pay.

The post-office at Grass Valley was at the back end of a "general" store, and the postmaster, who was also the proprietor of the store, was weighing me out some tobacco, when a stelld, middle-aged woman came and slammed a two-cent piece down on the counter, and exclaim-

"Stamp-two-center!" The postmaster handed her one, but she waved it away and pitched a letter at. his head, and said:

"Lick 'er on." He promptly and humbly obeyed, and as the woman walked away, I asked: Don't people out this way lick on their own postage stamps?" "Yes, most of 'em, but that woman is rather particular, and I don't want to take chances again." "Chances on what?"

"Well, she came in here about six months ago for the first time, and bought a stamp and commanded me to lick. I horn in the band." laid back on my dignity and refused; and she turned around and kicked the head out of a barrel of N. O. molasses, and I lost about eleven dollars by the operation. As my salary as postmaster is only twenty-three dollars a year, I can't take no more chances."

Madame Brohan's Neatly Turned Compli-ment to Canrobert. The reply of Lord Rothsch ld to an English snob is given as a good sample of ready wit. It happened at an assemblage of wealthy people in England not long ago Rothschild was surrounded by many men of learning, and was conversing with one who always allowed his detestation of everything Jewish to overcome ordinary good manners and common politeness. Commenting upon the beauties of a place which this gentleman of standing and position had visited in his travels, he so far forgot himself as to add to one of his remarks: "And I was informed, too, that there are neither Jews nor hogs to be found there!"

It was an unpardonable affront under such circumstances, and the great financier doubtless felt that it merited a sting-ing retort, for he immediately responded. 'Is that really so, sir? Then you and I should certainly pay that spot a visit. We should be great curiosities."

The son of an English earl, staying in Vienna, was one evening at a dinner, to most distinguished ladies and gentlemen of that city. One of the ladies, noted even amongst her initmate friends for saying shrewd but ungracious things, considered the Englishman worthy of her somewhat embarrassing observations, and smilingly asked him how it was that the English people generally spoke French so indiffer-

"Why, my lord," she added, encouraged by the smiles of some of the others, "we Austrians use that tongue with the same freedom as we do our native language." "Madam," was the biting rejoinder she had little anticipated, "I can only account for it by the fact that you have twice entertained the French army in your capital, and we have never permitted them to enter ours!"

At the first performance of Dumas' 'Etrangere' eve ybody appeared to be so preoccupied and wore such a serious countenance that Marshal Canrobert, who happened to be present remarked it, and inquired the reason. Madame Brohan, it is recorded, answered: "We are on the eve of a great battle, and I suppose fear affects us as you see." "Fear?" the marshal said, looking round with a puzzled air. Madame Brohan immediately summoned an attendant and briefly said: "Picard, a dictionary for the marshal." A neater or wittier compliment in fewer words it would be impossible to pro-

A lady once ventured to publicly reprove a well-known London society man for his over-fondness of good living. The gentleman made himself consspicuous by the way he gorged himself at a dinner to which he and others of the upper ten had been invited. To make matters worse he was sufficiently unwise, or thoughtless enough, to attempt to excuse himself with the remark that: "In eating well I praise the food," thereby using a well-known quetation

Touched By Kindness.

A queer old clergyman once lived in the diocese of Canterbury, of whom the following anecdote is told: On his going one day to order a wig, the barber, young in business, readily accepted the order, and ventured to ask his guest to dine. The invitation was accepted, and a bowl of punch followed, to which the divine did full justice. After it was over, the parber was beginning to measure, but his customer shook his head. "No, no," he said, "you shan't make the wig."
"Why not?" exclaimed the astonished host. " Have I done anyhing to offend you?" "Quite the contrary; you're such a good fellow that I haven't got the heart to take you in. I'll go to somebody else. You know, if you'd made the wig you'd never have been paid for it."-London Telegraph.

In Doubt.

"Do you understand French, Jack?" asked an Allegheny young man of his "A little."

"Then perhaps you can help me. Miss Northside told me last night that I was non persona grata, and I would like to know what sort of a compliment she meant to bestow upon me."

"How does your father manage to catch such big fish as he talks about?" "Oh, it's easy enough," replied the boy, who was with him on the vacation

"Does he have any special tackie?" "No, indeed. He just finds a nice shady spot, and throws his line into the water and lies down with his hat over his eyes, and just dreams."-Washington Star.
