A PROFITLESS LESSON.

A Commanding Officer's Orderly Who Had Ideas of His Own.

In one of our infantry regiments quartered at Aldershot some time ago, one of the men was detailed for commanding officer's orderly. It was a miserable day, rain coming down in torrents, and one of the far end of the camp, our son of Mars, thought it was hard lines, as being a wet day, his comrades would have no parade.

Thus it was in no good humor that he repaired to the orderly room. Walking straight to the colonel he said, in an abrupt and surly tone:—"I'm your orderly."

The colonel was too astonished to reply, and the man repeated:—"I'm your orderly."

The colonel rose from his chair and said:—"Come here, my man! Sit down in my place and fancy you are the colonel and I the orderly, and I will show you what you ought to do and how to do it!"

He went outside, and knocking at the door, he opened it, and walking straight to the man, saluted and said:—"I've come to report myself as your orderly, sir!"

The man, equal to the occasion, said:—"Very well, remain outside! I will call you when I want you!"

He did so, and, waiting a few minutes, he heard the man call "Orderly!"

What was his astonishment on going in to see the man leaning back in the chair with his feet on the table, smoking a cigarette, and to hear him say in a drawing voice:—"I won't wait for any more, orderly. You may go to Halifax for the rest of the day!"

It is needless to say the colonel did not avail himself of the permission—Spare Moments

Helpful Hints.
Moths have no fondness for walnut leaves.

Wool underwear is cheaper than sickness, and many times more agreeable.

Beat eggs thoroughly for cake and incorporate them with the other ingredients.

As a cure for ringworm, try yellow dock root steeped in vinegar.

The convenience of a cushioned sponge when sealing letters and affixing stamps should not be ignored.

Finely clipped paper, blue needles, clover heads and deer's hair are some of the substitutes recommended for footstools in pillows.

A teaspoonful of salt in the bath water in the morning will be found beneficial to some delicate children.

A weak solution of oxalic, citric or tartaric acid may be applied to paper and prints to remove stains of ink without much fear of damage. When the stain is removed, wash in pure water.

Fashion and convenience have agreed to the engraving of the address at the head of all stationery.

For a convalescent, a drink that is both palatable and nourishing is obtained by adding a beaten egg to a glass of lemonade.

An egg beaten up lightly, with or without a little sugar, is also a good remedy in cases of dysentery and diarrhoea; it tends by its emollient qualities to lessen the inflammation.

Frequently the stomach finds a number of broken dishes awaiting a healing hand. A sure cure is said to be effected by this application: Beat up a half pint of milk the same quantity of vinegar when a curd has formed, mix the curd with the whites of four eggs, beating the whole thoroughly, then stir in sifted quicklime until the mass has acquired the consistency of thick paste. This cement dries quickly and is injurious to water.

Sweeping cups may still be classed among useful articles. If not with elegant adornments. They protect the hair from dust and are easily cleaned. One that costs but a few cents is cut from galvanized iron, and is twenty times in diameter. Run the edge deep enough to admit a narrow sheet of lead, and cut two thin strips, respectively two and two and a half inches wide, past the edges, lay one within the other, and press in a double-line groove; sew this around the edge and the cap is ready for wear.

These caps are more easily made in two colors of material, as pink and blue, light grey and pink, or any two harmonizing colors, the cap being in one color and the lining of the two combined.

When a woman remains home very weary. The Pacific Journal recommends taking off the bodice and brushing the hair up to the top of the head. Then squander sprightly after sprinkling of water, as far as can be done, on the back of the neck and base of the hair. After five minutes of this exercise should be washed with hot water and a part of the moisture taken out by blotting or an ammonia. If possible, a glass of warm milk or sugarcorn stoutant like beer should be taken.

As a domestic remedy.

A citizen witness in a Southern court recently stated that the case made to testify as to a certain woman, because she had a "domestic trouble" just about that time. "What was this domestic trouble?" asked the examining attorney. "Well, she had the usual 'trouble,'" said the witness. "I was in the penitentiary for stealing a cow!"—Argument.

What the World Did.

"Don't tell any folks," he intoned, "how I did it." Even the hard-boiled sheriff, who was attending the posse, stopped to brush away a tear. "They are very nice people," sobbed the dejected man, "and they would be dreadfully mortified to know I ever was a convict. I had not had a rest!"

What the World Did.

Yes—I wouldn't marry the best man in the world.

Yes—Nor if I would marry the best man in the world, and let the best man have one of the bridemaids—Oh! I never got the chance.
