GEESSE ON A STRIKE.

They Decided Not to Fill an Order for One Thousand Dozen Eggs.

"I have been having a good deal of trouble lately with the birds on my goose ranch," said Col. Stitt-Floyd, of Warrenton, Texas.

"I had an order for a thousand dozen goose eggs, and my trouble arose in trying to fill that order. It is the first time I ever attempted to market any eggs, always heretofore relying on the sale of feathers and live birds for my profit.

"This is the laying and hatching season with us, and I thought I would have no trouble to get eggs enough to fill the order. Now, a hen, you know, will let you rob her nest right along, just so you leave one egg. It is supposed that a hen has no idea whatever of numbers. But this is not true. Mine, Goose, as I found out to my sorrow.

"The first two or three days we secured a big batch of fresh eggs, but after that the 'find' began to dwindle down so fast that I determined to make a personal investigation. I went down to the river bottom next day and found that instead of being off attending to business all the geese which were not sitting had 'locked' and were roving about feeling, just as if they never expected to lay another egg. When I approached them, instead of running away they all sat down and began to hiss at me.

"It was a clear case of strike, and I was at a loss to know how to settle the trouble. I tried putting half a dozen porcelain eggs in each nest, but it would not work. The geese came up, eyed them solemnly and walked off. Then, in despair, I told the boys to put the eggs we had gathered back and see if that would break the strike.

"Well, sir, in-side of two hours after the eggs were returned every goose was back on her nest, and for the next four or five days there were more eggs laid on the Floyd ranch than there had been before in years; but I dare not undertake to fill the egg order."—Washington Star.

A Modern Hospital Ship.

The progress that has been made within the last decade in military hygiene is well shown in the equipment of the Commodore, the hospital ship fitted out by the British Government for service with the Ashante expeditionary force. The whole of the outside of the ship is painted pale green, so as to mitigate as much as possible the effect of the direct rays of the sun and of the glare from the surface of the sea. The wards are on the upper and main decks, the upper deck being reserved for the worst cases, and fitted with specially long, inclosed swinging cots of iron, which can be fixed or allowed to swing freely at will. If desired, they can be unshipped from their supports, and stand on folding feet, like ordinary bedssteads. They can then be carried into the open air, or into the operating ward, which communicates with this ward through folding doors. Each bed is supplied with a little table at the patient's head, a punkah and a rope and crossbar whereby the patient can raise himself. The wards are beautifully light and airy. They have large, square ports on each side, fitted with "chick" or split-pane blinds, which keep out flies and glare, while permitting natural ventilation, which is assisted by a steam spray extracting apparatus, as well as by a steam fan blast that pumps in an abundant supply of fresh air. The smoking room on the hurricane deck has been made into a small ward for officers, and is very cheerful and airy. A very complete laundry is paved with grooved tiles, as are also the latrines and washhouses, so that all fouling or dampness of the decks is avoided. The operating room contains a sterilizer for instruments, glass irrigators and every appliance for the carrying out of all operations under strictly aseptic conditions. Close to the engines is a drying room, fitted with hooks, for the thorough drying of all personal clothing, etc.—a most necessary precaution in the intensely damp climate of West Africa. The ship is fitted with the most improved form of filters, and carries a soda water making machine, whereby any quantity of the condensed water, of which an unlimited supply can be manufactured on board for drinking and cooking purposes, can be aerated and medicated as required. The troop decks for the men are unusually light, roomy and well ventilated, while the quarters for the warrant and non-commissioned officers are most comfortably fitted up. The ventilation, supplemented by the artificial means already described, is perfect, and no expense appears to have been spared, or anything which science or experience could suggest omitted, that would tend to promote the comfort and well-being of the sick and wounded in the trying climate to which the Commodore is proceeding. The nursing sisters have been supplied with electric furnaces, in which a platinum foil, when connected with an electric light wire, will in a few minutes boil a kettle, or heat up soup, beef tea, etc. This arrangement is not only extremely convenient, but it is much safer than using spirit lamps or open fires.

Daybreak in India.

The dawn in India is made noisy with the notes of birds, and the sounds of men and women astir. The daylight in all the occupations of the peasant is so precious that not a moment of it is wasted. Although some artisans, such as wood-carvers and workers in metal, labor in the evening by the light of dim lamps, it is necessary for the farmer and field laborer to rise with the first call of the kingcrow, as the eastern sky begins to whiten. The smoke curls upward from every cottage, while the morning meal is prepared; the cattle are turned out of the yards and driven to the pastures on the hills by a few naked children armed with sticks; figures are seen in the half-light like ghosts, wrapped in white sheets, and gliding the men one way, and the women another, with brass pots in their hands, to the scenes of their usual ablutions. Some are squatting outside their huts cleaning out their mouths with fingers and a piece of bamboo, others smoking, or "girding up their loins," and twisting their turbans before starting out to work.

As the first rays of the sun gild the mango blossoms, all the men are on their way, and unless it be a day for weeding the crops, or for gathering the harvest, when their presence is required in the fields, the women begin their daily task of cleaning the house, plastering the floor with cow dung and sprinkling the floor in symbolic patterns. Then they start with the water vessels and the children of the family, for the tank or pool where they all wash, both their bodies and their clothes, and carry back water for household wants. Some, if they have leisure, and substance, are carrying offerings of fruit and clove to the temple of Devi or Lakshmi, where the bell is ringing out to attract the faithful.

WITNESS-BOX WIT.

Repartee Which Covered the Lawyers With Confusion.

In England there is a society for the protection of witnesses from bullying during examination. Rev. J. P. Bacon Phillips is its agent, and he tells a great many humorous stories of witness-box repartee. Some of the persons of whom these stories are stated evidently had no need for Mr. Phillips' society.

On one occasion Sir Frank Lockwood was defending a man in Yorkshire who was accused of stealing cattle, or "beasts," to use the north country term. One witness for the prosecution declared he beheld the whole transaction from afar.

"Now, my man," quoth Mr. Lockwood (as he then was), severely, "you must be extremely careful in your statements. You say you watched this affair for some time. Tell me, now, how far can you see a beast to really know its points?"

"Just as far off as I am from you, maaster," replied the yokel, earnestly. And the great lawyer subsided.

There was a civil action in the law courts some time ago, mainly concerning money matters. The plaintiff stated calmly in the witness box that his financial position had always been satisfactory.

Counsel for the other side rose with a truly pompous air and inquired if he had ever become bankrupt.

Plaintiff said he had not.

"Pray be careful, sir. Remember, you are on oath. Do you mean to tell the court you never stopped payment?"

"Well," was the reply, "now you come to call it to my mind, I believe I did on one occasion."

"Ah, I thought we should arrive at it presently. And counsel took a long draught of water, in an impressive and theatrical way. "Now, sir, when did this happen?"

"After I had paid all my debts," was the crushing reply.

The court fairly shrieked with laughter, and the judge laughed too, while the usher was so stricken with merriment that he was unable to restore order.

The following amusing passage took place between counsel and witness in a disputed will case!

"Did your father give you no parting admonition?"

"He never gave much away at any time."

"I mean to say, what were his last words?"

"They don't concern you."

"They not only concern me, sir," remarked the barrister, severely, "but they concern the whole court."

"Oh, all right," was the reply. "Father said: 'Don't have no trouble when I'm gone, Jim, 'cos lawyers is the biggest thieves among us.'"

"I can teach you law, sir, but I cannot teach you manners," said an exasperated counsel to a small, meek witness.

The latter quickly replied: "That is so, sir," and the people laughed heartily.

The offensively familiar witness is a sore trial. The dignity and erudition of the most eminent lawyers are thrown away on him. In an important case recently heard in the Chancery division a loquacious witness was asked the question:

"What sort of a man was he?"

The reply came swiftly: "Just an under-sized, red-faced chap, like yourself."

A Good Hit.

Police—Where are you going, Mike?
 Mike—O'm going out for a drive.

Colored Society Note.

Sam Johnsoning—Has yer darter made her debut?
 Mrs. Crow—Not yet, Mr. Johnsoning.
 "Dat's a great pity. Such a lubly flower was not born ter blush unseen and waste her fragrance on de desert air."
 "She can't blush any odder way except onseen, she an so dark complexioned; but her sister, Mollie, an she several shades lighter. Yer can almost see her blush on a dark day."—Texas Siftings.

Wanted to Help.

She was in the country for the summer, and was interested in everything she saw.

"Excuse my ignorance, won't you?" she exclaimed, as she went over to where Farmer Corntossel was working, "but I do love to pick fruit. These plants are very pretty, but I can't see what grows on them."

"No," was the reply, "it is purdy hard to see."

"But what do you pick out them?"

"Tater bugs."

Wanted to Help.

A gentleman at dinner ordered champagne. By accident an empty bottle was placed upon the table by the waiter. After examining it carefully, turning it round and round and upside down, the ding returned it to the waiter and calmly remarked: "I did not order it extra dry."

Famous People.

"It's all well enough to be one of them big bugs with lots of money," said Mr. Jason, "but I notice it ain't them kind of people who gits the chance of gittin' their name in the paper fer bein' cured of something or other by the patent medicines."

Another Thing.

Mrs. Hugly—Twelve dollars a dozen is a high price for portraits, isn't it?
 Photographer—Do you want them to look like you?
 Mrs. Hugly—Certainly.
 Photographer—Oh, in that case the price will be only $2 a dozen.

Sleighs, Pungs.

We invite inspection of our large and varied stock of PUNGS and SLEIGHS, which we guarantee to be first class in every particular. Our prices are so low, when the quality of our work is taken into consideration, that we are in a position to defy competition. Parties thinking of purchasing a Pung or a Sleigh would do well to buy the home-made article in preference to the imported, as the latter is usually slop made and inferior to the product of our factory in every way.

Farm for Sale!

That valuable farm at Bass River, Kent Co., known as the Robert Brown farm, is offered for sale or rent.

The farm contains about 188 acres of the best land in the County, over 100 acres of which are cleared and under a high state of cultivation.

There is a large first-class, two-story dwelling house, two large barns, one stage house, grainery and stable combined, and other out buildings. It is situated in the most thriving and popular part of Kent County, within two minutes' walk of the post-office, where a daily mail is received, and quite close to the superior school and within half a mile of Mr. S. Walker's lumber and glass mills.

For further information and particulars address the undersigned at Charlottetown.

JAMES BROWN.
