The Victorian Age.

(Montreal Star.)

A writer in the Edinburgh Review charges down upon the pessimists of the day with a clear-toned song of triumph over the achievements of the Victorian reign. He begins by telling of the marvellous growth of the British Empire, a subject quite germane to his task, for the growth of British power has been one of the first civilizing agencies of this century.

In India, in Egypt, in Africa, in Australia better condition of life have grown up under the shadow of the flag; and there is no guarantee that they would have reached these countries had the flag never been planted there. Canada as we know it, has practically come into being during the reign of Victoria. In '37 we were a few detached settlements, torn by civil war. In '41 came the Union of the Canadas; in '67, the federation of the four provinces; and at this day we own half a continent, magnificently equipped with railroads and canals, where there is use for them, and offering the best opportunity for civilized settlement in the world. The Edinburgh Review writer points out that the population of the United Kingdoms have increased during the present reign by one-half; while the addition of territory to the Empire has been tremendous. "Two hundred and seventy-five thousand square miles have been added—a territory larger than Austria—in India; 80,000 square miles—a space as vast as Great Britain—in the rest of Asia; 200,000 square miles—a region as large as Germany—in South Africa, and in East Africa 1,000,000 square miles—or about half the extent of European Russia." The area now totals something like 10,000,000 square miles, and nearly every person on earth "owes allegiance, directly or indirectly, to the queen."

Coming to the condition of the people the advance is, when measured by the progress of the past, nothing short of marvellous. Railroads in the modern sense of the term, are the products of this reign. In 1844, we are told that a third class railway ride from London to Exeter took sixteen hours and a half. Steamships, too, developed into usefulness since the Queen's accession. The Sirius and the Great Western crossed the Atlantic in 1838. It took the Sirius 18 days to travel from Cork to New York. The record now is nearing five days. Telegraphing, cabling, cheap postage, are all Victorian to say nothing of the wonders of these last days, in which the human voice may be stored up in a box or carried across a continent, in which electricity pulls loads and lights houses and streets, in which disease is tracked to its lurking places and killed.

Some very suggestive figures are given too, bearing on the financial position of the people. "Paupers in England and Wales numbered, in 1839, 1,137,000 and in 1842, 1,459,000, but now only 800,000 with a population nearly doubled there are only two paupers for every three at the queen's accession." The convict population in 1833 was 50,000 in 1894 it had fallen to 4345 prisoners, and about 2000 ticket-of-leave men. As for education, the first annual grant in Britain for that purpose was made in 1839, and amounted to $150,000. Now the grant totals $45,000,000. In 1850 one child out of every 80 people was at school, but one person out of every 20 was a pauper, and one out of every 700 was a criminal. In '90 one child out of every eight was at school but only one person out of every 36 was a pauper, and only one person out of every 2400 was committed for trial.

In the face of such facts who dare talk of the degeneracy of the times? It is only by imagining certain features of a past imbedded amidst modern conditions that plausible case is sometimes made out for them. In such parts of the world as have been caught in the sweep of what we call civilization, the condition of man has been immensely bettered in the last half century. If any injury has been done us as a race, it is due to the fact that science has been too kind—has surrounded us with so many of her good gifts that we are cut off from nature and her streams of vitality. But if this be true, it is our own fault, and constitutes an abuse of genuine benefits. The time will come, too, when we shall learn better. An age of rapid change or advance must bring forth a host of fresh difficulties and new evils which "the common sense of most" will in time overcome. A boy may cut himself with his first knife, but that does not make a knife a bad thing or render it desirable that the lad should always be kept knifeless.

The speed at which we are progressing turns the marvels of one year into the commonplace of the next. We are no longer very much surprised at anything. Reality is perpetually tripping on the heels of the most agile imagination. The novelist who would have trapped his villain six months ago, by photographing proofs of his guilt through an opaque substance, which would have been credited with a daring fancy, but he would have barely "arrived" before the man of science it would be bravado to-day to declare anything impossible, short of a revision of multiplication table. One cannot be sure of what man has not yet done until he has seen his evening paper. What an age to sit in the whispering gallery of the world and listen to the news!

A Lament Cry.

Journeying on in the sorrowful gloom, Cramping our spirits in narrowest room, Caught in the whirl of its turmoil and strife,

"Hear us!"—we pray thee in bitter accord,—

"Thou seest our peril—and thou art our Lord,"

We are thy servants,—yea set here by thee! Only the coward can falter or flee— Facing the world with its pitiless glare, Dazzled, yet striving the pressure to bear, Oh, what can we do but cry unto thee? Yes, help us, dear Master, for helpless are we.

Ever the brambles, the dust and the heat Show us the love of thy travel-worn feet, As Galilee's flints lay for ever downtrodden And a glorified earth sprang in splendor to God. Amid our disasters thy coming we greet! We love thee! We love it,—thy service is sweet.

Come to us, Lord, with thy touch of relief! Let thy love shade us! Consider our grief! Thou hast redeemed us! Thy grace overflows, Silvery, tender, its blessedness glows; Send it, soft shining, adorn the hot sands! Help us, uplift us, O love-pierced hands!

Let thy redemption enoble our souls, Strengthen and save us! Its wonder-tide rolls Into our feebleness, over our shame, Touching it all with the might that o'er-came; Pouring the Precious Blood over our sins Till Jesus, our helper, the victory wins

TAINTED BLOOD.

Scrofula Almost Universal—Some of its Many Forms.

Scrofula taints the blood of almost every one, and it is the cause of much of our ill health. If it attacks the breathing organs, the issue is consumption; if the digestive apparatus, the issue is dyspepsia and debility; if the muscles, the issue is rheumatism; if the nerves, the issue is paralysis; if the glandular system, the issue is in boils and other superficial exhibitions of corruption. It is a mistake to characterize it as unseen. What festers your skin on every little abrasion? Scrofula. What gives that back to your cough on exposure to the slightest damp and cold? Scrofula. What makes your food an oppression? Scrofula. What racks and twists the bones and sinews as you grow old? Scrofula. It operates by withholding nutrition and defeating all efforts toward nourishment; life becomes a burden, and the victim knows not the blessing and happiness of health. It is your duty to yourself, your family, and your race, to manfully oppose and dislodge this demon. How? We can only say, that others, who were afflicted as you are, have found relief and a cure in a moderate use of Hood's Sarsaparilla, that compound in which the skill of the modern pharmacist and the science of the most advanced medical knowledge unite for the benefit of suffering humanity.

A Remarkable Cure.—J. W. Jennison, Gilford—Spent between $200 and $300 in consulting doctors; tried Dixon's and all other treatments but got no benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all other remedies, in fact I consider myself cured, and with a 25 cent box at that.

We are pleased to hear that Mrs. J. Walker, has quite recovered from the effects of an accident, which she met with a week ago.

Several travelling men made things quite lively at the "Bay View" a few nights ago. One of them afforded the onlookers much amusement by hypnotizing some of our prominent citizens, but the latter, however, were unable to see the joke.

E. G. SCOVILL, AGENT PELEE ISLAND GRAPE JUICE. ST. JOHN, N. B. MARCH 18th.
DEAR SIR—My family have received great benefits from the use of the PELEE ISLAND GRAPE JUICE during the past four years. It is the best tonic and sedative for debility, nervousness and weak lungs we have ever tried. It is much cheaper and pleasanter than medicines. I would not be without it in the house.
