LIFE AND TIMES OF HON. JOSEPH HOWE.

We have received from Mr. Ed. S. Carter, Editor of Progress, a copy of the Life and Times of Nova Scotia's greatest statesman, written by Mr. E. G. Fenety. The author speaks from personal recollections of Mr. Howe. The style is at once simple and elegant, and the volume is copiously illustrated. Everybody takes an interest in the lives and works of great men, and when a man comes to the top by his own unaided efforts as Mr. Howe did, the interest is intensified. To Mr. Howe's efforts we owe the freedom of the press, responsible government and other enjoyments which the people of these provinces did not possess before Joe Howe came upon the scene. The volume is not only a biography but also history and an excellent work of reference. Every Canadian should read it. It is to be sold by all booksellers at $1.50 which appears to us a reasonable price when the high class of the volume and the neat cloth and gold binding is considered.

When we read of the terrible loss of life in the late earthquake in Japan, where ten thousand human beings were hurled into Eternity without a moment's warning; the great loss of life and property destroyed by the cyclone in St. Louis, beside other lesser calamities in other places, we should be glad that we live in a country where these things never occur. Divine Providence seems especially favorable to this Canada of ours.

THE MANITOBA SCHOOL MATTER

One fact has been much perverted and has given a wrong impression to thousands of people in the eastern section of Canada. It is in regard to the attitude of the Manitoba people toward the Greenway government and the school question. It has been sent forth to the world that Greenway carried his province by an overwhelming majority against separate schools at the last election. Such is not the fact, though he certainly did get a large majority of the new legislature. But here is how the people voted—

The total vote polled in the province was 25,507. These were divided as follows:

Liberal votes,	11,178
Patrons,	2,680
Independents,	930
Conservatives,	10,719

It will be seen at a glance that the Conservative and Liberal votes were practically about equal, while Patrons and Independents, with government influence and patronage, and the aid of the Greenway gerrymander served to give the majority which was found in the house. The vote serves to show how easy it was in the recent contest for the Conservative party to hope for a good account of the Prairie province in the federal election.

KENT COUNTY.

In the report published below the figures from the different polling districts of Dundas do not appear, but a total for that Parish. In our next issue we hope to be able to print a revised statement which may alter these figures a little. They are practically correct.

THE LIBERALS WIN.

The fight is over and the Liberals have won by a good majority. After eighteen years of Conservative rule the ship of state will likely be again manned by the Liberal party with the Hon. Wilfred Laurier at the helm. With the defeat which it has sustained it is not likely that the government will attempt to meet the house, and Mr. Laurier may be sent for at any moment. We trust that they will during the time they hold the reins of power, be it of long or short duration, govern the country better than they did when entrusted by the people with the management of affairs in 1873. The following is a list of the members elected for the different constituencies in New Brunswick:

Queens and Sunbury—King, Liberal.
Carleton—Hall, Conservative.
Charlotte—Ganong, Conservative.
Restigouche—McAllister, Conservative.
Kent—McInerney, Conservative.
Gloucester—Blanchard, Conservative.
Albert—Lewis, Liberal.
Northumberland—Robinson, Conservative.
Kings—Domville, Liberal.
St. John—Tucker and Ellis, Liberals.
Westmorland—Powell, Conservative.
York—Foster, Conservative.
Victoria—Costigan.

At this writing it would seem that Mr. Laurier will have a clear majority of at least thirty Liberals.

Archer's Favorite Horse.

Archer, the celebrated jockey, was riding in a steeplechase, his mount being a horse called Fatigue. The man was fond of the horse, which returned his affection with liberal interest. At the last fence the horse fell and broke his leg. Archer, though of course thrown, fell away from the horse, and was not badly hurt. The pathetic scene that followed is described by Vogue:

He started away to deliver news of the accident and arrange to have the horse shot, but was stopped by hearing a whinny. Poor Fatigue could only lift his head, but he was looking after and calling the rider he loved so well. Archer returned to the horse, and sitting down on the turf, took the poor creature's head in his lap, and sent a boy with a message for what was necessary. Meanwhile the horse lay still, except for an occasional spasm of pain.

No one wanted to shoot poor Fatigue. A small boy finally volunteered, if no one else would, but he'd "a heap ruther not." When the pistol was finally given him his small hands trembled so that Archer took the weapon from him, saying: "You're nervous, lad; you'll bungle it. He shan't have his pain added to. He'll never know what put him out of his misery." Addressing the horse, he added, "If I wasn't fond of you I couldn't bring myself to do it; but you shan't run risks of being hurt more."

With one hand he caressed the horse's head, with the other he put the pistol to the forehead. "Good by, Fatigue, old chap, good by," and he pulled the trigger. Fatigue hardly struggled, but settled down, dead, with his head still on his favorite rider's lap; and Archer sat quite still till the last quiver was over, his head bowed, and did not notice that the red was staining his clothes.

We clip the following from the report of the Marine and Fisheries department for 1895. The work of oyster culture was conducted by the department's expert:—

On the arrival of the steamer from her winter quarters, I commenced removing some of the stones and weeds from the inside edges of the bed, and dredged over the area generally, and found that after a little labor the ground was in good condition for the shells to be laid upon, and adapted for making an excellent foundation for an oyster bed. The oyster fishermen of the West Arm Tracadie Harbor were saving the shells for this purpose, but owing to the short time which they fished, I was unable to lay the quantity desired, but hope to complete the bed during the following spring. After these shells had been laid upon the beds, I received some young oysters for planting from Buctouche, N. B. The warm weather setting in so quickly I was unable to lay the quantity desired, and had to postpone laying the oysters until the following season. Unfortunately, two schooners arrived with their cargoes in very bad condition, and very few oysters were saved, although every effort was made. These two cargoes of oysters were laid at low water mark, the live oysters were separated from the dead ones, they were again placed at low water mark and recultured before being laid upon the oyster beds. The result being that only twenty-five barrels of oysters were saved from the above cargoes, the remaining shells, amounting to one hundred and thirty-eight barrels, were separated before being placed upon the bed. The number of oysters planted in Tracadie during this spring was one hundred and sixty-eight and a half barrels, and three hundred and sixty-two and a half barrels of shells. At the close of the season I again visited Tracadie, and found the oysters were alive and showed signs of growing.

West Galloway Notes.

We are having lovely weather and the farmers are looking cheerful.

Top buggys are out in full bloom this summer and we are looking for a ride at any time.

Mr. Sam Morton is one of the best cooks in the County, and any one in the lumbering business this winter would do well to have him.

One young gentleman of the back settlement goes over the river very often this summer. We have not found out where he goes but we would suppose it is to the river side down at the corner.

George Smith, son of J. W. Smith, of this place, got lost in the woods at school the other day, and while the people were hunting for him he got on a little path and went to East Galloway. Blessed is the boy that walks in the narrow path.
