Bill and Polly.

By D. V. Lucas, D. D. And, pray gentlemen, what will you do with the one on my left? "Do with him? Well, if we must, do anything with him, we will send him and his family to the poorhouse, and pay for their keep there rather than have the likes of him around our places of business."

Will you allow me, gentlemen, to suggest something which I think is a good deal better than that? I have known these two men from their childhood, and I can assure you that this man on my left has naturally fifty per cent. more brain than the other. He has more native wit; he has a larger heart; he is in every sense naturally a good fellow. You know as well as I do what has brought him to his present condition.

A vote is to be taken next week to abolish this community the liquor traffic, which has not only made this man—but cores and hundreds of others, useless and more than—useless, members of society, besides entailing on their innocent wives and helpless children want and squalor and wretchedness indescribable.

I am sent by a committee to ask you to join your votes with ours in stopping that which you know has made this man what he is.

Do you hesitate? You remember the story of the very rich man, who thought he was dying, and sent for his minister and asked him: "Do you think, dear sir, that if I should give ten thousand dollars to remove the debt on the church it would secure for me an entrance into heaven?"

The good orthodox minister replied: "Well, brother, I am afraid to preach that kind of doctrine, but it strikes me that there would be no great harm in trying the thing."

You have for a long time sanctioned that which has made this unfortunate man what you now see him, of no service to you, a curse to himself, his family and the community generally; and what makes it so serious a matter is that there are a great many more just like him, made so by your liquor traffic. Now, we propose to put a stop to this business. Surely there can be no great harm in trying the thing.

I assume that these tradesmen hearken to my appeal, and join with us in refusing to grant any more licenses for the sale of intoxicants.

A few weeks later Tolmie, the manager of the big iron works, meets my friend Bill in the street, and says: "Good morning, Bill; they tell me you're not drinking any now?"

"No, Mr. Tolmie; no, sir. I can't get it anyway, I am glad to say."

"Well, Bill, you know I often told you that you were one of my best men. You know that I did everything to encourage you if you would only stay away from those old chums of yours, and let the drink alone. I had to discharge you because you wasted your time and weakened your body by drink. I have often thought of you and your family. You have a good wife and a nice little girl if they had decent clothes and enough to eat."

"Yes, I know, Mr. Tolmie. It is all my fault. I am ashamed of it. I've a good wife, and I love my little girl, but it's awful hard work now to get anything to do. People don't seem to want me; I suppose they think I'm no use now. I can't blame them, Mr. Tolmie. I'd be glad if I was dead if it wasn't for Polly and our little Lily."

"Well, Bill, I guess I'll take you back. Do you think you would like to try again? I can't set you, for the present, at your old job, for I don't think your hand would be steady enough for that, and so I cannot give you as much pay as I used to, but perhaps you can get back into it by-and-by. Come Monday morning."

Poor Bill! he doesn't amount to much now. Weakened by the use of alcohol, and weakened by the want of food, almost a total wreck. He can only do odd jobs, but he is in the hands of a kind master, who will in every possible way encourage him.

At the end of the week Tolmie puts into Bill's hands eight dollars. Poor Bill runs all the way home, and calls out as he enters the door, "Polly! Polly! ho, Polly! where are you? Do you know, Polly, that Mr. Tolmie has given me eight dollars for my week's work. I don't believe I earned the half of it, but here she is."

Blissful Joys of Motherhood.

Isabel A. Mallon writes of "For His Royal Highness, the Baby," in January Ladies' Home Journal and discusses the infantile wardrobe, bed and all belongings, concluding her practical article with this pretty thought: "I wonder if those women to whom comes the great blessing of motherhood ever realize what it means not to have a child of one's own? At the mere hint of a baby's going from her the loving mother draws him closer and closer, and while his eyes close she dreams out what life is to be to him, and what he is to be to her. It may never be as she thinks—but oh, are any hours so happy, is life ever so full of bliss as when a mother holds her child in her arms and knows that she makes sunshine or shade for it, and that it is to her a joy forever?"

One pill a dose, one box 25 cents. One pill relieves constipation. One box cures an ordinary case. One pill taken weekly neutralizes formation of uric acid in the blood and prevents Bright's Kidney disease and Diabetes. True only of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

An Irishman by the name of Dan H., who had worked through the summer down in the valley and drank up his wages later in the season was at Pine Lake, and when it began to grow cold one day he expressed his feelings in this way: "The wind came up from below and telegraphed through me overalls, and it says, 'Dan! what did you do wid your summer's wages?'"

THE OLD, MIDDLE-AGED AND CHILDREN.

Are you an ill Curd of Kidney Trouble by South American Kidney Cure?

Kidney troubles are not confined to those of any age. The grey-haired suffer, and keenly sometimes. The man in the vigour of life has his happiness marred by distressing disease of these parts. Much of the trouble of children is due to disordered kidneys. South American Kidney Cure treats effectively those of any age. And with all alike relief is secured quickly. In the most distressing cases relief comes in not less than six hours. It is a wonderful medicine for this one specific and important purpose. Sold by W. W. Short.

"Times have changed," said old Hyson mournfully; "times have changed." "And as to wherefore?" asked the son. "In former times, said the old fellow, 'man ate the cream, and now they cremate the man.'" There was an awful pause, and young Hyson walked out of the counting-house on his tiptoes, and told one of the salesmen he was afraid the old man was breaking up fast.

A Remarkable Cure.—J. W. Jennison, Gilford—Spent between $200 and $300 in consulting Doctors; tried Dixon's and all other treatments but got no benefit. One box of Chase's Catarrh Cure did me more good than all other remedies, in fact consider myself cured, and with a 25 cent box at that.

The Nova Scotia government has offered a reward of $500 for information that will lead to the apprehension and conviction of the person who fired at and killed on the 15th December, Alexander Horne, while standing at the door of his father's barn at Howe's Bridge, Pictou.

"I say Blossom, how do you pronounce c-a-s-t-o-r-i-a?" "Why, castoria of course; how else could it be?" "Well, the doctors pronounce it harmless."

The London Telegraph tells of a boy, a smart little boy, who was ambitious to become a letter carrier. A short time ago he secured a bundle of old love letters that his mother had treasured since her courtship days, and distributed them from house to house throughout the neighborhood.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Crews of the German steamer Preussen and British steamer Rathmore became involved in a dispute at Brussels on Saturday over the message recently sent by Emperor William to President Kruger, of the South African republic. Words soon led to blows and a fight was progressing fiercely when the police intervened and arrested several of the combatants. One of the German sailors was probably fatally injured by the pounding he received.
