Bill and Polly.

By D. V. Lucas, D. D.

Ah! where are we now? "Cross roads, One or the other, quick. Tom's no slow coach. It won't do for Bill to hang fire. What he does must be done at once.

If Bill had signed a pledge, and got into a new world of teetotalism, and made new companionships, he might have had strength to have said so, but he has not formed new companionships. He has not reached that new social world. He has not signed any pledge. If Polly and the little child were now at his side to remind him of his promise and tell Tom what he had promised, it might be very different.

If he should hesitate even for a few seconds Tom's quick eye would see it and he would say, "Bill, what's the matter with you? I hope the W. C. T. U. hasn't got hold of you, eh? Ha, ha, ha! Where's your blue ribbon?" Poor Bill has no power to stand any such banter as that. He now hates the grog as never before. He wishes the whole of it was in the depths of the sea. He wishes Tom hadn't asked him. He loves Tom. Always did, and drunk with him many a time. He would not offend him for the world. What he does now he must do very quickly.

He would not like his old friend to think he has changed toward him in the least degree. It is so with all of us. There is nothing pleases us more than to hear an old friend say in the most familiar tones, "Well, John, you're the same old John you always was, I don't see that you've changed a single bit."

Bill thinks, "I'll just take one glass; she won't know anything about it."

That's Tom's treat. When Bill has that glass to his face it occurs to his mind that if he don't offer to treat in his turn, Tom will be sure to think that he is not what he used to be. Now perhaps Tom might not think it at all, but so it appears to Bill. How do you account for it? The fact is, there never was a glass of intoxicating beverage yet turned to a man's mouth, without a devil was in it.

I cannot flatter myself that such an idea is original, it occurred to the shrewd mind of England's greatest poet hundreds of years ago. The devil in the glass told Bill that if he didn't treat too, Tom would be sure to think that he is not as generous and as large-hearted a friend as he used to be, and Bill could not bear to have Tom think that. So it is Bill's treat.

Bill is just in that stage (a sort of transition condition) as a drinker, that while not tempted he cares very little for it, but is so affected by it physically, that if you can get the alcohol of two glasses into him, he is ready to forget all promises to his wife and child, to tread all good resolutions, all self-esteem, under foot, and the man who came from home intending to return at night a sober husband and a loving and proud father, returns a week hence with a heart full of remorse and hate, ready far to kick his child than to receive her kisses.

The supper prepared was not eaten, for even the poor wife could not partake of it, and the dear little one went to bed sobbing because papa had not returned.

Here is a home made more wretched than anything else can make it by the drinking of a man who is not so much a slave to a vitiated appetite, as he is a slave to bad companionship.

The social element in his nature is perverted. The gun has been taken by the enemy and made to fire on its owner.

One of the warmest friends I have in Quebec is an Irish Catholic priest. He said "Do you know, Mr. Lucas why I work so hard to carry the Scott Act in this country? I will tell you. There is my brother Frank, one of the kindest and largest-hearted men that ever lived. He had become tied up with drinking companions to such an extent that he could not keep from drinking, although he cared but little for the taste of it. He lost his place, he was not earning anything for his family, till at last he made up his mind to leave his family under my care and go down into a Vermont town where no licenses were granted for the sale of liquor. He got a good situation, was well clad, regained his self-respect, and sent home regularly a part of his earnings for the support of his family. At Christmas-time he got off for a week to come home to spend the Christmas holidays with his wife and children. He had purchased a lot of candies, toys and picture books for presents for his little ones. In changing cars at Lennoxville he met with several of his old cronies, who, made as much fuss over him as I have represented Tom to have made over Bill. The curtain falls; when it rises some days after Christmas, Frank is sitting in the midst of his family with his elbows on his knees, and his head between his hands, and he is crying like a whipped child, saying, "I am ashamed to look at you, I came to Canada to spend a merry Christmas with you. I brought a lot of presents for the children, but I don't know where they are. I suppose they are somewhere about the tavern in Lennoxville. When I am in Vermont at my work I never think about the drink, nobody ever says 'Frank will you come and take something.' I do not care for it, and I never see it for sale anywhere; but when I get back here among these old cronies, and they say 'Frank come and have a drink,' it seems as if some demon gets a hold of me; I do not understand it."

Death Seemed Preferable to the Agonizing Pain.

Mrs. Roadhouse, of Williscroft, P. O., Ont. writes: "I have used Dr. Agnew's cure for the heart since last fall, having taken in all nine bottles, and I now feel entirely like another woman. I am 54 years old, and have been troubled with heart disease for more than twenty years; sometimes for five hours at a time suffering such agony that death seemed preferable to the pain. The cold sweat would stand out in great beads upon my face. The Heart Cure gave me relief from almost the first dose and has proved a great blessing.

"You are at liberty to publish this letter if you think by so doing any good may be accomplished." Sold by W. W. Short.

Death of Hon. James I. Fellows.

The death is announced in London of the Hon. James I. Fellows, formerly a member of the legislative council of this province. Mr. Fellows was at one time an active merchant in St. John, and inventor of Fellow's Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. From St. John, Mr. Fellows went to Montreal, afterwards to New York, and finally located in London, a number of years ago, where he placed his business in the hands of a company, making London the headquarters of the world for handling the gigantic business which he had worked up. Mr. Fellows since his residence in London has taken a deep interest in New Brunswick and was agent-general of this province, an entirely honorary office. His illness was of short duration and his death will be regretted by a large circle of personal friends.

RHEUMATIC PEOPLE

EASILY CURED IF THE PROPER REMEDY IS USED.

The Most Common—The Most Acute
Miser—Dodd's Kidney Pills will Cure it Without Fail.

This has been the experience over and over again by users of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Valentyn Falher, of Collingwood, was twisted out of all semblance of physical manhood.

Yet he commenced to mend before the first box of Dodd's Kidney Pills were all taken—and he got as well and strong as ever he was. How wonderful, how simple the cure is—Let us learn something from this.

No matter what may be the secret action of Dodd's Kidney Pills the moment the kidneys are helped, ever so gently cure commences that instant.

And if the kidneys resume kidney work the poison may all be arrested and turned out of the system in twenty-four hours.

Therefore the only cure for rheumatism is by kidney treatment.

All this explains the rapid cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, and sciatica made by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Think of all the methods that have been tried to alleviate the miseries of this disease.

"Zeal, but not according to knowledge,"—all of it.

Uric acid remaining in the blood crystallizes in the muscles and joints, and the pain produced is called rheumatism.

There is but one way—a single means—by which uric acid can be removed, and the blood made pure.

The kidneys do this work or it never can be done at all.

A party that went in search of Eyvind Astrup, the Norwegian explorer, who was with Lieut. Peary on his first expedition to Greenland, found him dead in the Doverfjord mountains, Norway. Astrup left Jerkin on Dec. 27th, and it is supposed he became fatigued and was overcome by the cold.

The Breath Of The Pines.

Coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, sore throat and lung troubles are cured by Norway Pine Syrup. Price 25 and 50 cents. It breathes out the healing virtues of the pine forests.

Rev. Father McKee, who some time ago renounced the Catholic faith, has gone back to it again and is now at the monastery at Tracadie.

Catarrh can be successfully treated only by purifying the blood, and the one true blood purifier is Hood's Sarsaparilla.

DEAR Sir.—My family have received great benefits from the use of the PEELEE ISLAND GRAPE JUICE during the past four years. It is the best tonic and sedative for debility, nervousness and weak lungs we have ever tried. It is much cheaper and pleasanter than medicines. I would not be without it in the house.
