Kent And Kings

Oct. 20.—The writer is always interested in reading THE REVIEW, but in glancing at it one is at once struck with the strong contrast between the two counties of Kent and Kings. The first things which strikes the casual glance is the extent of St. John advertising in THE REVIEW as compared to our local paper, the Record. This shows us that we are considered close enough to know very much about these St. John business houses without having it flashed before our eyes every week or the St. John papers are considered a sufficient medium for the purpose, they having a much greater circulation in Kings than in Kent.

The next thing to notice is the names of the places. The names predominating in Kings are of good English origin as Sussex, Hampton, Havelock, Studholm, with a small sprinkling of Irish names such as Donegal, Waterford, and quite a number of Indian names such as Apohiqui, Passakeag, Nauwigewauk, Quispamis; while in Kent the predominating names are probably French or a mixture of French and Indian, St. Louis, St. Antonio, Grand Digue, Notre Dame. The most common family names found in Kings show them to be either of United Empire Loyalist stock or of having come direct from the British Isles. Some of the most common are, McLeod, White, Secord, Ryan (two distinct families, one Catholic the other Protestant) Arnold, Fenwick, Robinson, Moore, Fowler, King Sharp, Parlee, while in Kent a person finds such names most prevalent as Le-Blanc, Legere, Cormier, Bourque, which marks the county as French.

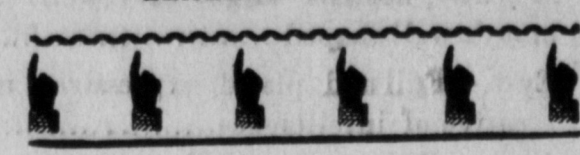

In religion the county of Kings have thick settlements and villages of Episcopal, Methodist, Baptist, F. C. Baptist, Presbyterian, with a few scattering members of the Roman Catholic church. As a result a man's religion seldom enters into matters political or otherwise, although it might if a Roman Catholic was to seek election but never within the knowledge of the writer has a Roman Catholic sought election to any higher position than Councillor, and then he and his running mate were very badly beaten, but religion never entered into the fight, the issue being the wisdom of the appointment of a Scott Act Inspector. This feature marks another distinctive feature between Kings and Kent. The time was when liquors flowed freely in Kings and men were licensed and dealing out damnation in small doses to their neighbors, it was considered an honorable calling, then the C. T. Act was placed in the statute book of Canada and by vote Kings decided to accept it. Some of the more honorable liquor dealers closed their place of business but others sold as of old and then it was decided that the County Council appoint an Inspector to enforce the law and the fight has been going merrily along ever since, but just at present the temperance body are having the advantage and "the boys" must be content with very bad liquors taken on the sly. But drunkenness has almost ceased as the dealers do not want to send any one out on the streets in a salubriously swipy condition; but the liquor sold is the very worst as they keep nothing good on hand for fear of seizure. A short time since a man swore he asked for whiskey and he got something which had none of the taste of the liquors known to common man, but it did its work. In Kent the traffic is licensed and as a result a great many take out licenses and as many more sell without any. Those violating the law by selling without license escape because there is no body to complain but the licensed seller and he dare not as he himself is violating the law daily. "So the good work goes on." Here public sentiment and the law are against the traffic, in Kent it is thought of by some as a curse, by others as a necessary evil, by many others almost a necessity. Here it is a disgrace to sell it, it is a disgrace to drink it, it is disgraceful stuff you get to drink; in Kent it is found in many a shop, in many a private cupboard, it fills a few pockets, it empties many pockets, and it makes many a desolate home, it causes joy to the few, much to the many, sorrow to many but it satisfies desire and fills the county coffers.

The two counties are yet to be compared in industries, products and politics. Let that be left for another letter.

A Lesson For The Weak.

Do you see that locomotive engine standing on the side-track? Something has broken down about it. There is not a his of steam from its valves; it is still and cold as a dead whale on a beach; it can't draw a train; it can't even move itself. Now, tell me, do you believe that any amount of tinkering and hammering at it would make it go? Not a bit. Nothing on earth will make it go except steam in the boiler, and even that won't unless the engine is in order. Everybody knows that, you say. Do they? Then why don't they act on this principle in every case where it applies?

Here is such a case. Writing concerning his wife, a gentleman says: "In the autumn of 1880 my wife fell into a low, despondent state through family disagreement. Her appetite was poor and no food, however light, agreed with her. After eating she had pain and tightness at the chest, and a sense of fullness as if swollen around the waist. She was much troubled with flatulence, and had pain at the heart and palpitation. At times she was so prostrated that she was confined to her room for days together, and had barely strength to move."

"At first she consulted a doctor at Ferry Hill, but getting worse, she went to see a physician at Newcastle. The latter gave her some relief, but still she did not get her strength up; and after being under his treatment for six months she discontinued going to him. Better and worse, she continued to suffer for over a year, when she heard of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, began taking it, and soon her appetite improved and her food gave her strength. In a short time she was a new woman. Since that time (now nearly twelve years ago) I have always kept this medicine in my house and if any of my family all a little low, a few doses put us right. Yours truly (Signed) George Walker, Green & Co., Ferry Hill, near Burnham, October 25th, 1893."

We call attention especially to those words in Mr. Walker's letter which are printed in italics. You can pick them out at a glance. They show how fully he understands where human strength comes from—that it comes from digested food and not from any medicines the doctor or any one else can give us. Let us have no mistake or confusion of mind on this important point.

For example, Mrs. Walker was ill with indigestion and dyspepsia. Her symptoms and how she suffered, her husband tells us. The disease destroyed her power to obtain strength from food, and Nature suspended her appetite in order that she might not make bad, worse by eating what could only ferment in the stomach and fill her blood with the resulting poisons. The only outcome of such a state of things must be pain and weakness—weakness which, continued long enough, must end in absolute prostration and certain death. Well, then, she failed to get up her strength under the treatment of either doctor or physician. Why? Simply because the medicines they gave her—whatever they may have been—did not cure the torpid and inflamed stomach. If they had cured it then she would have got up her strength exactly as she afterwards did when she took Seigel's Syrup. But the trouble is this: Medicines that will do this are rare. If the doctors possessed them they would use them, and cure people with them, of course. Mother Seigel's Syrup is one of these rare and effective medicines. If there is another as good the public has not yet been made acquainted with the fact. But even the Syrup does not impart strength; it is not a so-called "tonic"; there is no such thing. It (the Syrup) cures the disease, drives out the poison, restores the machine.

Then come the appetite (all of life) and digestion and strength. You see the order—the sequence. Yes, well, please bear it in mind. The machine sets the engine in order; then the steam gets up in steam.

And of the human body—the noblest of all machines—Mother Seigel's Syrup is the skilled mechanic.

It cures Constipation and Liver Ills. Dr. Agnew's Laxative is the most potent medicine ever made, it cures sick headache, constipation, biliousness, indigestion, and all Liver ills. 19 cents a vial 40 cents a box. Sold by W. W. Scott.
