

Harcourt.

SEPT. 10.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Buckley was the scene of a very happy event on Tuesday, 8th inst., the occasion being the marriage of their daughter, Miss Lizzie Buckley and Conductor B. Barrieau, of the I. C. R. Only the relatives and immediate friends of the bride and groom were present. The rooms were prettily decorated with flowers and evergreens. The alcove, where the altar stood, was draped with white net, looped with flowers. The arch under which the bridal party were grouped was composed of white and crimson flowers and looked particularly nice. At 9.30 the groom and Mr. Quilam, of Campbellton, who acted as groomsmen, entered, and took their places and immediately after came the bride leaning on the arm of her father and attended by her sister, Miss Minnie Buckley. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father Hebert, of St. Paul.

The bride, who is one of Harcourt's most popular young ladies, looked charmingly pretty in a very handsome travelling suit of grey and brown mixed with velvet and brown velvet and cream lace. Her bouquet was of white and pink.

After the ceremony a very dainty and elegant breakfast was served, at which about twenty were present, among the guests was the bride a few weeks ago, Mrs. Herbert Buckley, of Bathurst. She wore a lovely gown of pale grey silk, with trimmings of blue green chiffon, very becoming to her brunette beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Barrieau departed on the noon train amid showers of rice and the hearty good wishes of their many friends here, for a two weeks tour through the Upper provinces, during which they will go as far west as Toronto. Their future home will be in Campbellton. The groom's gift to the bride was a very beautiful gold chain and bracelet, and to the bridesmaid a lovely opal ring.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents. The following is a somewhat incomplete list:—Silver tea service, W. F. Buckley; mantel clock and easel, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Buckley; silver butterdish, James E. Buckley; oil painting, Mr. and Mrs. R. Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Miracle Boy.

From the south of France there comes a story of the wonderful and startling things being done there by a boy who seems possessed of supernatural powers.

He is mere a child in years, and already his fame has spread abroad through France and the inhabitants are flocking to the town in which he lives to witness the strange doings. The peasantry swarm after him and regard him with awe and veneration.

The boy though whom these remarkable manifestations have been made is Paulin Delmont. He is but nine years old and lives at Laroque, in the remote wilds of Cevennes, in one of the most out-of-the-way places in the country.

This boy, never having been away from the hamlet for a single day, and using only the patois of the district in communicating with those about him speaks perfect French, and, more wonderful still, the purest Latin.

Not at any and all times can he do this. It's only when in a peculiar state in which he seems to completely lose his personality and identity that he can do these things.

When in that state he has told also of visions of saints that he has had. St. Joseph occurs frequently in the visions, according to the boy's narrations.

As an example of his peculiar powers is his settling as a fact what has been a tradition of the town for centuries. In the town is the old church of St. Amans, and surrounding the structure a tower in which bells had once summoned the worshippers to service.

The bell-tower has been silent for a century or more because the bells had been taken out. The town folk had long been divided on the question as to whether the bells had ever swung in the tower.

On one occasion, when in an exalted state young Delmont announced that tradition was right, and that not only had bells been rung in the old tower, but the very bells that had swung there had been buried in the ground near the church. He indicated the spot where they had been buried, and almost immediately men were digging at the spot.

Delmont told them that in digging they would first encounter two skeletons, and the bells would be uncovered a little farther down. True to his predictions, the diggers unearthed the skeletons just where Delmont said they would be found. They continued the work with feverish eagerness, and soon the bell, as described by the child, were exposed to view. The peasants fell to worshipping him on the instant.

"DUNN MEDICINE CO.,

Harcourt, N. B.

I purchased a bottle of your Beache's White Liniment and found it to be all you claimed it to be. It is the best liniment I ever used. One thing it did for me for which I am very thankful, that was the removal of a very bad corn on my toe that had troubled me for years.

JAMES STAPRAK.

Peter Warner, a well-to-do farmer, living near Edwardsburg, lost considerable money recently by the failure of a bank in that place. A few weeks ago he disposed of some real estate for $12,000. The money which was in bills of large denomination, he placed for safe-keeping in a stove of his house in the parlor, having lost confidence in the banks. The other night his wife, who did not know the money was in the stove, built a fire there and the money was burned.

Captain Renaud, who makes for the French government at Mendon experiments in balloon construction, is not sanguine about the proposed balloon journey to the North Pole. The dangers, he says are endless. The worst is the sea that must be crossed. Most balloonists who have been above the sea can speak of the vertigo it causes. Captain Renaud sometimes experiments with captive aerostats cabled to warships. They are mounted by specially trained men. Nevertheless, the aerostats come down in an exhausted condition. It is not the hardship that affects them, but the shock at finding themselves suspended between sky and sea. There is a terrible impulse to jump out.

CHILDREN'S CORNER.

PITFALLS.

(BY AUNT ZOE.)

'Do come, Mamie! We haven't been to the pond for a long time,' coaxed Madge Martin, as she and her chum, Mamie Blake, were walking slowly home from school one afternoon.

'I don't see how I can,' replied Mamie. 'I forgot to ask mamma about it last night.'

'I don't believe she would care,' urged Madge.

'I am not sure about it,' said Mamie, slowly. 'She told me once not to go without permission.'

'But that was a long time ago, almost a year, and I think we are old enough now to do a few things without asking our mothers,' said Madge, fretfully.

'Mamma says that is not the right way to look at it. She says at twelve we are old enough to be intelligently obedient,' replied Mamie.

'I don't know what all those long words mean, and I can't wait any longer. If you are going to the pond come along,' and Madge started down the lane leading to Willow Pond, a small lake, one mile wide by three miles long, almost surrounded by a cranberry bog in which were numerous mud-holes.

Some of these holes were quite shallow, while others were so deep that long poles thrust into the mud would not touch bottom. The bog was considered unsafe for children, and this fact, added to the knowledge that many kinds of flowers grew thereon, exerted a kind of fascination over the more venturesome ones.

'Wait a minute, Madge! I wish I was sure that mamma wouldn't care,' and Mamie walked along to where Madge stood waiting for her.

'Well, you can walk a "piece" with me and then get home in time. You know school was let out early to-day.'

They walked along, talking and picking flowers, until Mamie suddenly exclaimed, 'Why, Madge, there is the pond! I didn't know we had come so far. I must go right home.'

'You might as well go to the edge of the bog, and I will get you some of those pitcher plants you wanted for your garden. Your mother won't care about that,' urged Madge.

This sounded very plausible, so Mamie went to the edge of the bog and busied herself picking flowers, while Madge followed the path into the bog.

'Come along, the path is hard and dry,' she called, and Mamie followed, for after the first step in disobedience is taken, the others are easy to the feet.

They dug pitcher plants and picked flowers, each trying to outdo the other in finding new kinds, until at last Mamie saw a lovely scarlet cluster growing beside a drooping bush. She ran close to the bush and reached for the coveted prize, when the ground gave way beneath her feet and she slipped into a mud-hole up to her waist. She screamed and caught hold of the bush which had hidden the hole, but the earth around the roots had been loosened by her fall, and as she tried to pull herself out of the mud, the roots gave way and she sank deeper into the mud.

She screamed for help and heard Madge answer, but the voice sounded far away, and she was gradually sinking down into the mud.

She grasped the grass and vines, but they came up by the roots; and then she did the only thing left to do, laid her arms straight on the top of the ground and waited for Madge, who soon appeared.

'Oh, Mamie!' she cried; then taking hold of a sapling which grew near, with one hand, she reached the other to Mamie and by exerting all her strength, succeeded in drawing her out of the clinging mud.

'I wish we hadn't come,' said Mamie, as they walked slowly towards home.

'So do I,' replied Madge. 'I tell you, Mamie, I thought it all over while I was holding on to you and that sapling, and I guess I know now what intelligent obedience means. It means doing what our mothers would call "right," whether they tell us or not. And I'm going to do it. I won't lead you into any more pitfalls. See if I do!'

'Mamma says there are pitfalls of temptation,' said Mamie, and I guess we both got into one of them to-day!—The Christian Work.'

Weak

Worn out, nervous women, receive criticism where they should have sympathy. They cannot help being nervous, if their blood is impure.

When the blood fails to feed the nerves upon proper nourishment what can you expect but nervous prostration, debility and nervous headaches?

If the cause is found in impure blood the cure must be in making the blood pure. This is just what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, and it has proved the true nerve tonic because it is the true blood purifier, and the solace, comfort and defender of thousands of housewives.

Nervous

teachers, clerks and other sufferers of both sexes. Just read this letter:

'I think it is my duty to tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and my family. Two years ago I was in a weak, nervous condition and had dreadful palpitations or jumping of my heart, followed by sinking spells, which would last for several minutes. Sometimes it would seem as though I would never come out of them. I was treated by the best physicians, but only for a little time did they help me. I seemed to be growing worse instead of better. I would often seem hungry, but when I ate, no matter how little, it would cause me such misery that I was often wicked enough to wish myself dead. I had that languid, all-gone feeling and suffered awful distress in my stomach. I had given up all hopes of ever being well, when my mother wished me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I consented, to please her, and before I had taken the whole of one bottle I could see I was improving, and soon was indeed very much better. Its effects have been truly wonderful and I hope this letter may be the means of helping other suffering men and to try Hood's Sarsaparilla and be benefited by it. We have used Hood's Pills in our family and find them very excellent, especially for constipation. We give Hood's medicine great praise, and if anyone complains of feeling badly, I say "You should take Hood's and only Hood's." Mrs. KITTY SMITH, 326 Dane Street, Waterloo, Iowa. Remember that
