FOURTH OF JULY By Rev. A.J. Mowatt, of Montreal.

We rejoice, this glorious anniversary day and we send our hearty congratulations, doubt theirs. Yes, they are doing more in view of the greatness of the American Nation.

In a family there are big brothers, and others that are not so big, and some that will never be as big. But there is no jealousy on that account. Well, there should be none. The little brother should be proud of the big brother, and he is to and then, on the other hand, the big brother, should feel, that if he is big, it is that he may be all the more useful to the family and especially to the little ones of the family.

And are we not proud of our big brother to the south of us? Are we not glad today that he has grown to such goodly proportions, that he lives in so fine a house, that he has so much money in his pocket, that he is so open-handed and free with it? Yes with all his faults, he is a noble fellow, and we are proud of him. I think that, at the bottom of our hearts, we are proud of him. And we aught to be. Every true Briton and Canadian should feel glad and proud that he has done so well, that he is so great and good. Surely it is for a great and good purpose the King of Kings has put into the hands of the American nation so much power, and into the heart of that great people so much of His grace. Yes, we praise the Lord for giving the world the great American nation, and Canadians should be the first to do so.

That people cannot be great and good without our being the better for it. If it is good times with them, we feel the benefit of them here. When want again comes to them, it is not far from us. In their joy we rejoice, in their sorrows we weep. We are too close to them, and they to us, as peoples, not to be affected by all that affects them. It is our interests therefore to thank and praise the Lord for any measure of success attending their efforts, for when it is well with them it is well with us, and when it is ill with them it is ill with us. The American people are indeed a great people. They have a great country great cities, great institutions, Great as Britain is in ships, they are still greater in railroads. If however you put ships and railroads together, I am not sure that they are greater than we are. Fast again as Britain and her colonies have grown during the last six :y years, they have grown even faster. Proud as we are of our educational institutions, they have better schools for the people, and they have more children going to school, and they are receiv. ing perhaps a better education. Their working-classes have upon the whole more advantages. They are better paid, better fed, better clad, better housed, better cared for perhaps. The poor and oppressed of many lands come to them, and they welcome them, give them work to do, make room for them, lift them up, teach them good citizen-ship, respect them and so they respect themselves. In all this they are to be highly commended. We like their push and energy as a people Their go-ahead and wide-awake characteristics are worthy of imitation. They turn everything to account. Every stream has a factory of some kind on it, or soon will have. Every smart little town has a railroad, a school-house and a church. Not a family from Maine to Oregon but is interested in the politics of the country, and not a boy but dreams of being president some day. They do little things over there as if they were great Eings and they are always happy and hopeful. They have unbounded faith in in themselves as in no others. They do not sit down and talk over set-backs and disappointments, but they are up and at it again. If they cannot have the president they want, they take the one that is given them' and h.y are sure their time will come and so they accept adverses with a good grace. We thank the Lord to-day too for their churches and Sunday Schools and Missions. They carry their push and pro-gress into their religion and church-life. Their Moodys and Clarks and Parkhursts and Neals and Miss Willards of to-day against the said David LeBlanc. are great moral and spiritual forces-with no small success.

They talk a great deal over there, have a lot to say about politics, but withal they are a busy people, one and all of them hard at it. Aristocracy is not their weekdess. Titles and decorations are not their temptations. It is rather democracy with them and plutocracy. Our public men are aping aristocratic ideas, and receiving old-world decorations, things that are out of place amid the stumps of Canada. Our prayer to Heaven should be to be kept from these vanities, for they are not going to help us. We all like titles, and ministers of the gospel are as weak in that direction as ministers of state, but we have not much use for these things in Canada. It is hard work we want here to make us. We want it in our churches. We want it all over the land. Let us not be above our position. How much it becomes us to be humble?
