A new method of preserving timber has recently been tried. It consists in dissolving in naphtha the heavy oils and waxes left after the distillation of petroleum and forcing the solution into the seasoned timber in the same manner as in creosoting. The timber is then heated, when the naphtha evaporates and is recovered in a cooling chamber, while the waxes, etc., remain behind in the wood, waterproofing it.

How the Ancients Prevented Insomnia. From 80,000,000 to 100,000,000 men, in an age far surpassing the present era for health worship and sanitary insight, followed the plan of postponing the principal meal until the end of the day for more than a thousand years. From 800 B. C. to the third century of our chronological era the one meal system prevailed all over Europe and the Hellenized portions of western Asia, and that one meal was eaten at the end of the working day, and after the baths and outdoor sports that assembled pleasure seekers in the cool of the evening, Like the dinners of Frederick the Great, these symposia were something more than mass meeting lunches; the guests took their time, spiced their food with anecdotes, masticated at leisure and sometimes-too often in the luxurious era of the Roman empire-yielded to the temptation of dietetic excesses, but on rising from the banquet went straight to their dormitories and could sleep as only men sleep who have dismissed the cares of the day.

How to Make Hard Soap.

A good soap, which can be used in hard water without injury to the clothes or hands, is made as follows: Dissolve 2 ounces of borax and 2 of sal soda in a pint of soft water, then add a pound of hard soap cut, fine and stir over a slow fire till thoroughly dissolved. Do not boil, but melt well together. Stir while cooling, to prevent separating. When cool, it will be hard.

How to Prevent the Hands From Chap-

Melt together a dram of white beeswax, an ounce of spermaceti and 2 ounces of almond oil, to which add a small quantity of gum camphor. Pour, while warm, into small pomade jars and set away to cool. Use this at night and wear a pair of old kid gloves to bed.

How to Make Nut Cake. One-half cupful butter, 1 1-2 cupfuls sugar, 2 1-2 cupfuls flour, a cupful meat of the nuts preferred, one-half cupful milk, 3 eggs, 1 1-2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

A SEA ABOVE THE CLOUDS. Extraordinary Superstition Once Preva

The curious superstition that there is an ocean above the clouds is illustrated by the following strange story by an old English writer: "One Sunday the people of a certain village were coming cut of church on a thick, cloudy day, when they saw the anchor of a ship hooked to one of the tombstones-the cable, which was tightly stretched, hanging down from the air. The people were astonished, and while they were consulting about it suddenly they saw the rope move as though some one labored to pull up the anchor. The anchor, however, still held fast by the stone, and a great noise was heard in the air, like the shouting of sailors. Presently a sailor was seen sliding down the cable for the purpose of unfixing the anchor. When he had just loosened it, the villagers seized hold of him, and while in their hands he quickly died, just as though he had been drowned.

"About an hour after the sailors above, hearing no more of their comrade, cut the cable and sailed away. In memory of this extraordinary event the people of the village made the hinges of the church doers out of the iron of the anchor." It is further stated that these hinges "are still to be seen there," a bit of evidence much like Munchausen's rope wherewith he once climbed. to the moon. If you doubted the story, you were confronted with the rope.

There is another queer tale about this aerial ocean. "A merchant of Bristol," it is said, "set sail with his cargo for Ireland. Some time after, while his family were at supper, a knife suddenly fell in through a window on the table. When the merchant returned and saw the knife, he declared it to be his own and said that on such a day, at such an hour, while sailing in an unknown part of the sea, he dropped the knife overboard, and the day and the hour were found to be exactly the time. when it fell through the window." All of which was once implicitly believed by many and regarded as incontrovertible proof of the existence of a sea above. the sky. One is at a loss to conjecture how that "unknown part of the sea" connected with the rest of it. A physical geography showing this would be no small curiosity. - Boston Post.

SILKWORMS OF LEBANON.

How They Are Cultivated In the Mountains of Tripoli. Harry Fenn, the artist, has written a paper, entitled "Silk and Cedars," for St. Nicholas, describing his visit to the famous mountains of Lebanon. Concerning the silk industry, which plays such an important part in the lives of the natives, Mr. Fenn says: As the time approaches for the silkworm to hatch out the egg the family move out of the house and camp under the trees, giving up the entire establishment to the worms, after having placed the eggs on shelves made of a reedlike bamboo. At first the young worms are fed on finely chopped leaves, but as they grow larger the leaves need only be broken in two. The people have to during this period, and about 24 hours feed and watch the worms night and day, or they wander in search of food and get lost, and in the silence of the night the sound of the worms feeding is like a gently falling rain. "Six," said the younger one. The worms fast three or four times is the length of each fast. A curious feature about their fast is their posture. They assume the attitude of a cobra snake about to strike and remain rigidly fixed in that position for the entire period. When they are ready to spin, small branches are placed on the shelves, and as the cocoons are formed upon them the dead twigs seem to bear golden fruit. When the worms get through that part of the business, the neighbors are called in-something as to an old fashioned New England apple paring bee. They call it "qtaf" in Arabic-that is "picking," and soon you see piles of pale green, pure white and golden yellow cocoons heaped upon the floor. Later they may be spun into hanks, but usually the cocoons are sent down the mountains to Tripoli or Damascus, and after their 30 or 40 days of toil they, too, often have to sell the produce for next to nothing, as the Chi nese are always ready to undersell them. Another curious use Mr. Silkworm is put to is to soak him in vinegar for some hours, after which he is drawn out or leaders for fishhooks.

'nto so called "catgut" to make snell:

Serving Carrots. A way of serving carrets is the following, evolved by a cook desirous, a all cooks should be, of "something new." The vegetable is scraped, diced and boiled till tender. Meanwhile a lice of onion is browned in a tablepoonful of butter. With this one table poonful of flour is rubbed smooth and stirred until the flour is cooked. Then me cup of tomato juice, not heated, is edded to the mixture with a half teapoonful of salt and a dash of pepper. he whole is stewed together three or our minutes before being strained over the carrots, which have been drained. his dish is much more palatable than the creamed carrots because it adds a needed flavor and is none the harder to prepare than the better known preparaion. - New York Post.

A BIDDING RIVALRY.

AN INCIDENT OF AN AUCTION OF OLD CHINA AND BRIC-A-BRAC.

What Happened When Two Women Each Determined to Have a $5 Cup and Saucer-Hard to Tell Which Felt Worse When It Was All Over.

It was the third day of an auction sale of the china, bric-a-brac and furniture of the last representative of an old New York family, and the auction room was crowded to the doors with dealers in antiques, connoisseurs, speculators and people who had just dropped in to fish up a bargain in glass or china if an opportunity offered. There were a large number of women present, and they were principally bargain seekers. The auctioneer seemed used to such crowds and continued to call out the bids monotonously despite the amusing situation that arose every time he reached an article which one of the women had marked to buy for herself. Things had been quiet for a time when the auctioneer reached No. 706 on the catalogue, which was a cup and saucer of Sevres china. It was a very pretty bit of Sevres, cleverly decorated and frail enough to suit the most artistic fancy. It was such a piece as might be purchased at any fine china or glass store for $5, and it certainly would not have been reasonable to expect more than $4 for it at auction sale. The auctioneer didn't expect more, and under ordinary circumstances he wouldn't have got so much, but these were not ordinary circumstances. It happened that two bargain seeking women had marked that cup and saucer for themselves. They were only separated by a dozen seats and an aisle through the maze of camp stools, and, of course, neither had any notion that she would have very much competition for such a trifle. They were well dressed women, and one was quite young. They sat in their seats without a word, while a cloisonne jardiniere worth $100 was knocked down to a dealer for $20, and they never ventured a bid on bits of Worcester, Dresden, Coalport and other kinds of china, which were sold for ridiculously low prices. But when the auctioneer wearily remarked in his professional tone: "What 'm I offered for this cup and saucer? Guarantee goes with every piece. Gimme a bid, please," he was amazed at two shrill voices which called out simultaneously: "One dollar."

The two women peered across at one

Then the younger said in emphatic

"A dollar and a half." The auctioneer took in the situation. What more could an auctioneer want? Two women pitted against each other. Sleepy a moment before, he was all life

"A half more!" he exclaimed scornfully. "Really this is ridiculous. I cannot take less than dollar bids." "Two dollars," said the older wom-

"Three," said the other woman. The women sized each other up again while the auctioneer exhorted.

"I'll fix her now," said the older woman to a friend. "Five dollars."

"Why, the spiteful thing! I don't believe she wants that cup at all. Well, she just sha'n't have it. Seven dollars." This time the younger woman hesitated. Every eye was on her, for the whole crowd was interested. She pressed her lips together, and, assuming an indifferent expression, made the bid $8, while the auctioneer nearly fell off his chair. Every head in the room turned with the bid to the older woman.

"Don't you bid another cent," said "I'll just make this one bid. She doesn't want that cup. It's just spite, but I'll do her up now. Ten dollars, "she exclaimed, and with a triumphant smile she glanced across the rcom. That smile was too much for the other woman. It made her more determined. "Oh, she needn't think I'm afraid of a couple of dollars," she remarked in a husky whisper to the pale faced man who had come with her to the auction and had been trying to get low enough in his seat to be out of sight of the eyes focused on his companion at every oth-

"Let her have it," said the man. "It isn't worth the money."

"Let her have it? Well, I guess not. Do you think I'll let her beat me like that? Eleven dollars," in a shaky voice, Tribune. but with a sweet smile.

"Fine piece. Very fine Sevres. Worth big money," chanted the auctioneer. "Well, I never!" exclaimed the older woman. "Of all the impudence I ever heard of! Oh, I'll fix her now!"

"Let her have it," urged her friend. "Cora Stone, do you mean to tell me you mean that? Would you have me give in to that doll faced child? I'll show you how I'll give up to her. Fifteen dollars."

This was a staggerer. The young woman looked troubled. She raised the bid a half, and the auctioneer took it, because he saw the end was near. A point had been reached when bids were cheered, and the side remarks caused roars of laughter. The price reached $17, and the bid was the older woman's. The pale man urged his companion not 30 bid, but those cheers rang in her "And a half," she said.

"Then take it, you spiteful thing," suddenly yelled the older woman, right at her competitor. Then she rose to her feet. "Come, Cora! I shan't stay in such a place another moment." And she flounced out, followed by Cora.

The younger woman looked badly rattled. She handed out $17.50 to the lerk and took the cup and saucer. Then she went out, looking very much embarrassed over the affair and wondering, probably, what had ever made her pay such a price for such a thing. - Now
