Greece Prefers War.

PHARSALOS, May 8.—When the Turks entered Pharsalos Thursday morning they found the place utterly deserted. The Turks are beginning to believe the Greeks are not serious in their fighting, as Pharsalos was so strongly fortified that they believed its capture, if resolutely defended would have been impossible. The Greek artillery fire during the Turkish advance was wonderfully accurate. Nevertheless the Turks advanced singing and without heeding the shells.

During the attack on Vasilis some of the Turks picked up stones, saying: "These are good enough for the Greeks."

The scene half an hour before darkness was most impressive. The Turks had determined at all costs to drive the Greeks out of the town. The constant flashes of the field pieces illuminated the faces of the gunners, who were eagerly watching the effect of each discharge through the gathering darkness while on the opposite side was a long thin line of spluttering infantry fusillade. As night fell the firing gradually ceased, and by 7 o'clock all was quiet. The Turks threw themselves on the ground and slept. Only thirty Turks were killed and 200 wounded during the fighting.

The carrier, which will be 24 inches long, will make the journey across the river in 34 minutes under an air pressure of six pounds to the square inch. One of the tubes will be for dispatching and the other for receiving. A regular series of carriers may thus be kept going in both directions. Each carrier will hold 600 ordinary letters. It will therefore be possible to despatch 346,000 letters each hour in each direction.
