Life Was a Burden.

OUR YEARS OF ACONY AND MISERY.

Marvellous Cure By Paine's Celery Compound.

force Bottles Suffice to Make Mr. Finter Well and Strong

The hopeless, despairing, and all who magine they are lost, because the doctors have failed, should rejoice to know that Paine's Celery Compound meets the worst cases and never fails to restore lost

It is no vain or idle boast when the declaration is made that Paine's Celery Compound cures when all other means fail. To-day a grand army of men and women in our own Canada can vouch for the truth of the statement made.

As a proof that Paine's Celery Compound cures in the darkest times of disease and misery we give the testimony of Mr. F. Finter, of of Ottawa, Ont., who was saved at almost the eleventh hour.

I consider it a duty to acknowledge the great good that I derived from your valand misery owing to the pains in my head and chest. Life was a burden to me, and no living mortal could describe my sufferings. I was treated by doctors and, used many patent medicines, but nothing gave me relief till I tried Paine's force against the body and of a fact against tles of the medicine, and today I can man's experience. truly say that I feel a new man. I feel "In June, 1887," she says, "my son certain that if the suffering people of died. After his death I felt nervous, Canada would only try Paine's Celery weak, and depressed. Indeed my nerves Compound they would be cured. I will recommend the temedy whenever I have the opportunity, as it is the best ever given to sufferers.

It Makes Him Homesick

[Chicago Post.]

The burglar had entered the house as quietly as possible, but his shoes were not padded and they made some noise.

He had just reached the door of the bedroom when he heard someone moving n the bed, as if about to get up, and he

The sound of a woman's voice floated to his ears.

"If you don't take off your boots when you come into this house," it said, "there's going to be trouble and a lot of it. Here it's been raining for three hours and you dare to tramp over my carpets with your take them off this minute."

He went down stairs without a word, but he didn't take off his boots. Instead, he went straight out into the night again, and the "pal" who was waiting for him you must try to imagine it.

saw a tear glisten in his eye. "I can't rob that house," he sald. "It reminds me of home."

When Children Ask Questions, A lawyer in high standing, and thoughtful father, says that whenever he can give a simple explanation he does so; that if he cannot he confesses frankly that the matter is too difficult for him to explain and too hard for the child to understand. If he does not know he admits his ignorance promptly, but adds that he will try to find out. James Sully mentions the case of a little girl four and a half years old who chased her mother into one of the most abstruse problems of metaphysics. She saw a wasp on the window pane and desired to touch it. Her mother said. "No, you must not; it will sting you." The child queried, "Why doesn't it sting the glass?" The mother answered "Because the glass can't feel." Again the child queried, "Why doesn't the glass feel?" Again the mother answered, "Because it has no nerves." And again the child queried, "Why do nerves feel?" Sully fails to give the mother's answer at this most critical point; he merely adds that children must be exercised in taking some truths on trust without the asking why of everything, and quotes Geo. Eliot who says somewhere, "Reason about everything with your child, you make him a monster, without reverence, without affections."

Recreations of English Authors.

In a biographical annual published in England and entitled Who's Who, appears a series of answers to questions addressed to literary men and women as to their favorite pastimes. If the best index to one's character is what one most enjoys, some light on the character of English writers may (but we doubt it) be extracted from the following facts. Marie Corelli seeks recreation in music and reading and playgoing; Miss Braddon in riding, gardening, music, and literature; Sarah Grand in music, country life, and sociology; John Oliver Hobbes plays music and chess; Mrs. Meynell finds recreation in music; Mrs. Molesworth in flowers, in the country, and in little children; Sir Edwin Arnold yachts, travels, and cycles; the poet-laureate gardens; he also rides and fishes. Mr. Robert Barr finds recreation in cycling, photography, and eucre; Mr. Barrie in cricket; 'Ian MacLaren' in golf; Mr. Birrell in walking, golf, and book-hunting; Mr. Oscar Browning in swimming, cycling, and mountaineering : Mr. Buchanan in shooting, fishing, yacht ing, and horse-racing; Mr. Hall Caine in mountaineering and riding; Mr. Sidney Colvin in novels, travel and cycling; Mr. Crockett in mountaineering, cycling, and golf: Mr. Hardy in forestry, architecture and cycling; Mr. Haggard, like the poetlaureate, in gardening, and also in shooting, fishing, and cycling; Mr. Kipling cycles and fishes . Mr. Lang fishes and plays cricket and golf; Mr. Le Gallienne cycles; Mr. Lilly rides, cycles, and plays racquets; Mr. Meredith reads French Sir Lewis Morris names poetry as his recreation; Mr. Arthur Morrison collects Japanese prints; Mr. James Payn plays whist; Mr. Shaw finds recreation in cycling and showing-off: Sir Walter Besant in looking on, and Dr. Jessopp in visiting his parishioners, growing apples and potatoes, grumbling at the weather, and driving an old horse as far as he will go. Dr. Martineau, who is nearly ninety-two gives rowing and walking."

Blows and Shocks.

WHEN one person strikes another with his fist or with any instrument or weapon, the person struck is said to receive a uable remedy, Paine's Celery Compound. "blow." Also when a person becomes For four year's I endured terrible agony the subject of a sudden calamity, as for example the loss of a large sum of money or the treachery of a trusted friend, that person is said to receive a "blow." My point is , that we use the same word to express the effect of the impact of physical Celery Compound. I thank God for the the mind. There is something deep in day it was brought to my notice in the this. Let us talk about it for three Ottawa papers. I have taken three bot- minutes, prefacing the debate by a wo-> were completely shattered. My appetite failed, and what food I took gave me great pain at the chest and side, and between the shoulders, also a sense of tightness around the waist, as though a cord were tied closely about me. I had a horrid sinking, all gone feeling at the pit of the stomach, as though the life and power were ebbing away from beneath me. In other years I had been a good sleeper, but now I was restless at night, tossing on the pillow like a ship on the sea. The result was, of course, that I missed the refreshment of sleep and arose in a morning more weary and tired than when I went

"In time I became so sensitive to outside influences that I could not bear noise of any kind, even the ordinary sounds that go on constantly in every house. As to society or company I had no desire for muddy boots on. Go down stairs and it, yet I felt wretched when left alone. Presently I had grown so weak that I was unable to ge out alone. and so was led about like a little child. What I suffered with all this I have no words to describe ;

"I consulted four doctors in Peckham (where I then lived) and also attended the dispensary at Greenwick, but no treatment I underwent, or medicine that I took, had any real effect. In this condicion, almost as much dead as alive, I continued for three and a half years; and at the end of that time had given up all hopes of ever getting any better.

But (I may say with reverence) man's extremity is God's opportunity. In July 1891, a book was left at my house telling of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup and containing letters and statements; from people it had cured. I cannot say I thought it would do any good in a case as bad as mine; but, as I knew nothing else to do, I got a bottle from Mr. Brooks, chemist, Grayshott Road, and began to take it. The first bottle produced a little improvement; my nerves were not so bad and I could eat without feeling the pain and distress from which I had suffered so long. To be brief, I was so heartened and cheered by this that I kept on taking the Syrup, growing stronger and better in mind and body. Soon my health was restored, and I have since had no return of the disease. (Signed) Mrs. Selina Gardner, 143, Elsley Road, Lavender Hill London, S. W., January 25th, 1895."

The effect of a blow whether on mind or body depends on the "condition," the power of resistance in the person who receives it. The loss of a loved relation always produces what the medical men call a "shock," yet the results are by no means the same in all cases. At the time of her great loss this lady undoubtedly was, without fully realising it, the subject of digestive weakness-incipient dyspepsia. The unhappy experience which she was called upon to meet at once prostrated the already feeble nerves that control the digestive process, and the malady assumed full sway over her. Then followed action and re-action (nature's law), until Mother Seigel's Syrup did some radical work; toning the stomach, expelling the impurities from the blood, feeding the nerves, and setting every organ on the road to healthy operation. Life is full of the possibilities of blows and shocks. We cannot prevent them, but we may be prepared for them.
