

HIS FUNNY INTRODUCTION.

How a Down South Editor Sets His New Paper Going.

Bright and breezy, with sails all spread, and our colors nailed to the mast, we beat down on you this morning.

Here is news for one who wants to keep up with the times; social chit-chat for the gossip lover; points for the public minded; facts and fancies for the farmers; fun for the frolicsome and paths for the poetical.

It is chock full of readable matter, and must be an unappreciative cuss who fails to be amused and entertained, instructed and interested by perusing the columns of the day's best weekly in the smokingest town in Georgia.

The children cry for it, and the old folks are puckering up their mouths for a regular boo-boo because they haven't got it.

Along next spring, when you get bilious and wake up in the morning feeling swell-eyed and hateful, this paper will come to you with its sides bulging out with laugh and song, and you will grin so loud and so wide that you will have to carry an umbrella to keep the sun from shining down your throat and warming your ribs.

We don't mean to claim that this is a humorous paper, still it is a humorous paper, after all, but there is a heap of solemn features connected with it. (We put this in to catch the hypocrits who don't know any better.) There's many a laugh that sounds wildly hilarious, that if you but knew it, has a discordant ring as where some unseen hand strikes a cold iron railing around a tomb.

We will take almost anything, except contumely or cussing, in payment for subscriptions—corn, cotton, potatoes, syrup, cattle, hogs, horses, farm lands, city lots or general merchandise. Come in and see us, whether you want the paper or not, for we are worth looking at. Then you might give us some valuable hints and suggestions as to the best way to run a paper.

Now, we hope you feel better. We are done, and you can go ahead with your rat killing, but don't forget that the Guardian is your friend, and will love you when you are old and ugly, and everybody else hates you.

Adieu, ta-ta, nix cum a rouse.—Cedar-town Guardian.

"Noblesse Oblige" in Athletics.

To those who believe in the physical and disciplinary value of outdoor sports, it is not more gratifying to see their extraordinary popularity than to note the better standards which the most far-seeing, enthusiastic, and gentlemanly devotees have succeeded in establishing almost everywhere in the conduct of competitive athletics. Especially in colleges there has been an enormous stride forward in the matter of drawing clearly and exactly the lines of professionalism. To one who is a stranger to the inside of college competitive games it may seem at first thought that the efforts for such strict tests of professionalism are resulting in very hair-splitting arguments, but any one who has realized the dishonorable effects of mixing to the slightest degree the professional spirit with the amateur spirit will need no argument to understand how important it is that the colleges should cease playing on their teams men who are having their way paid through college, or who are playing for money, or who ever have played for money. A good fight has been made, and has succeeded not only in the East, where these matters have been under discussion for a very long time, but also in the South and West, which have come to the front in athletic competitions so rapidly that no time had been given to prevent these abuses.—From "The World's Sporting Impulse," by Charles D. Lanier, in Review of Reviews for July.

In the Branch.

They who are called upon to fill the gaps of life may find the experience at first hard and trying. Cherished plans have oftentimes to be abandoned. Selfish claims must be given up. Different relations have to be formed. Old pursuits have to be modified. Heavy responsibilities must be assumed. New duties must be undertaken. Naturally one shrinks from the task. But where there is the right stamp of nature, a responsiveness to need, and a trust in God, there is no hindering back, hope beckoning onward, and grace and strength proving equal to the duty. Many are the gaps in life to be filled. A father dies and leaves dear ones behind him, or a father and mother are both removed, and orphans must be cared for. Myriads are the gaps made by death in the laud. Sometimes they are filled by a loving relative, sometimes by an elder son or daughter, sometimes by an especial friend, and sometimes by a benevolent citizen. However filled, a noble duty is discharged. Some may be better qualified for its performance than others, but he who steps in and does the best he can is entitled to high respect, and shall not lose his reward.

Bullets Wear Out Rifles.

There is one thing which users of the new high velocity of 30-caliber have to consider, and that is the effect of the copper or nickel jacket on the grooves of the rifle. The new York Sun. A bullet that leaves the muzzle of a rifle at a velocity of 2,000 feet a second is so wearing on the rifling, especially near the muzzle, that the accuracy of even the hardest-core rifles is seriously impaired inside of 12,000 shots at the most. The lead bullets, or those but slightly hardened with a mixture of tin, do not wear the barrels to the same extent, and the barrels last far longer.

Helping the Fallen.

We ought to pray for and help all that we possibly can those fallen away from right living, and charity to those cast away is our bounden duty and the prompting of every merciful heart. Yet, no man will say in the face of the history of individuals, as each one of us has known them, but that to prevent wrong doing is more in keeping with God's commandments and His glory than even the reclaiming of those strayed from His service.

CONVINCED THE SCEPTIC

The Merits of the Great South American Nerve Withstand all the Assaults of the credulous and Sceptical—When they are converted to its use in their personal ailments they become its best Friend—For it never Fails Them.

Mr. Dinwoodie of Campbellford, Ont., says: "I recommend South American Nerve to everybody. I consider it would be truant to the best interests of humanity were I not to do so. In one instance I convinced an avowed sceptic to all remedies of its curative powers; he procured a bottle, and it has been of such benefit to him that he continues to purchase and use it, and has proved its great worth as a stomach and nerve tonic. It has done wonders for me and I keep it constantly in my house. An occasional dose acts as a preventive and keeps me well and strong. It is wonderful medicine." Sold by W. W. Short.

It is said that one pulp mill on the Hudson River uses 475 cords of spruce wood per day, which is estimated to be equal to 90,000,000 feet of lumber every year. Nearly the whole of this wood comes from Canada. There are many such mills in New York and other states working on Canadian wood. It would surely be better if Canadians worked up their pulp wood at home.

He tried to go up the second time, but had to come back. I do not know when I last saw the Dutcher dog. I never knew Mrs. Dutcher to drink liquor.

Belonie White, sworn. I reside quite near where the Dutcher house used to stand. I frequently worked for Mrs. Dutcher. I often had a drink with Mrs. Dutcher; I never saw Mrs. Dutcher drunk. I was at Mrs. Dutcher's the night before the fire with my son. I did not see the dog last. I did not know of the fire till it was over. My wife was jealous of Mrs. Dutcher, but without cause. Mrs. Dutcher was about five feet tall.

Thomas Dutcher, son of Mrs. Dutcher, testified that he was in Albert county when the fire took place. Three weeks previously he had been home. He gave his mother $100 in Bank of Montreal notes. His mother had $400 or $500 in the house. He did not know of her banking it. There were three rooms upstairs; when at home he slept in one of them. In warm weather the front door was used for ventilation, but seldom for entrance or egress.

The nurse, Miss Anna Croasdale was called, and a lengthy discussion arose between counsel as to the admissibility of evidence touching Maggie Dutcher's talk while delirious, all of which talk, Miss Croasdale says, she had written down. His Honor ruled that inasmuch as Maggie Dutcher was now convalescent and had testified, her utterance when delirious might be excluded.

Miss Croasdale was therefore examined only as regards the care of Maggie and the precautions taken to assure her not being tampered with. She had been almost constantly with the child since Sept. 17th. When she was not with her Muriel Croasdale, her sister, had been. No one except the prosecuting attorneys had ever held any conversation with Maggie regarding the events of the fatal night. On her recovering her reason Maggie had narrated her story to the Misses Croasdale's many times and it was essentially the same as given by her Saturday. Maggie did not yet know her mother and brother were dead nor that her old home was burned. Nothing of importance came out of the cross-examination of Miss Croasdale.

George Warren, of Peters street, St. John, was on the stand when the court adjourned for dinner.

Warren testified to the prisoner calling at his place on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 13th. Prisoner was an old acquaintance. They discussed the Meadow Brook fire and prisoner said he had been at Mrs. Dutcher's drinking on the Thursday morning previous. Prisoner had said his mother was anxious that he should go away to avoid getting mixed up with the affair, and he was then en route to his Uncle John's in Maine. Prisoner seemed nervous and anxious to get across the line. Prisoner had left Warren and his brother and walked towards the suspension bridge.
