

HEROIC ONTARIO WOMAN!

DIED CLASPING HER BABES TO HER BREAST.

An Ottawa despatch says: "The burned area on the line of the Canada Atlantic Railway from forest fires covers a distance of about 25 miles. Three villages—Casselman, South Indian and Cheney—have been swept. Four persons were burned to death. At South Indian there are only two or three houses standing of what was once a prosperous village. The saddest part of the day's work was the finding of the burned bodies of Mrs. Frank Leveille, her two children, aged eight months and twelve years respectively, and also that of her sister, Miss Stiles, aged 30, who lived with her. Mrs. Leveille was a widow, her husband having died quite recently. Her dwelling was on the north side of the track, just opposite the Canada Atlantic station, and in a locality where the fire was last in reaching. Several of the men of the village, whose own homes were in ashes, helped the poor widow in her efforts to save her home. When the men saw her home out of danger they left, after advising her to keep a good watch about the place to prevent any sparks from igniting it, and also to stay in the building as there was little or no danger. Wednesday morning at an early hour several of the villagers thought of her lonely position and went to see how she fared. The place was intact, but what was their surprise to find that

THERE WERE NO INMATES.

The only trace of them found was a nursing bottle, which was recognized as belonging to the widow. About 10 o'clock another search party was formed. After going down the branch line to Rockland, a short distance, on a hand-car, the party separated, one party going along the track and the other going through the bush. The four bodies of the unfortunates were found in the bush about one mile from South Indian Station, and within a short distance of their home. The mother had the remains of her two children clasped tightly in her arms, burned into almost unrecognizable cinders. A short piece away lay the body of her sister, which was not badly disfigured. Her hair and clothing had been burned off, but otherwise she was scarcely marked. Their fate is additionally sad, owing to the fact that they would have been perfectly safe had they remained in their house. Their tragic death throws an additional gloom over the already sorrowful hearts of the residents. The fire is supposed to have commenced by farmers who were clearing their ground near French Village, which lies about six miles back of South Indian.

CHILDREN IN TERROR.

Mr. Belcourt, M. P., interviewed said: The full force of the desolation struck me when I saw the poor, homeless people huddled together by the Nation River. They had, after heroic efforts, saved nothing and were forced to stand by and see their homes burn. The children clung to their mothers in absolute terror. The women did their best to quiet them and to make the bare rocks more endurable by spreading over the rock what few pieces of cloth they had saved. The men stood by passively watching the flames leap from house to shed, and then from there to the mills. Everything is gone. Houses, mills, grain, implements, live stock and the products of the year's harvest, have all been destroyed, and these people will suffer. The scene was an awful one. The flames rose high above the burning woods and buildings, great volumes of smoke poured from the places, and above all the steady, terrible roar as the fire rushed on awed the beholder. Never have I seen anything like it."

A TRAIN IN PERIL.

Mr. J. M. Sage, of Ottawa, described the whole scene as follows: We left Montreal yesterday morning and reached Casselman Station a few minutes before noon. We crossed the bridge to the station about two miles this side of the village, and had left it on the way to Ottawa, thinking to make the through run to Ottawa. About two miles on this side of Casselman Station a flagman rushed from the woods and flagged the train. He reported that the tracks ahead were all destroyed, and that the flames were rushing west towards the train. As he told the story we could see the fire burning fiercely in the woods all around us, and then it approached the train. Immediately the engineer backed up and thought to cross the bridge again and return to Montreal. This was not to be. When we came in sight of the bridge we were horror-stricken to see that it had caught fire and was burning fiercely. Then across the river the flames were pouring from the burning mills and houses of Casselman.

When it was found we could not escape across the bridge and could not come on to Ottawa, the train kept moving up and down the two miles of track attempting to escape the flames. It is an experience I never wish to repeat. The train would move a few hundred yards and then stop. In a few moments dense clouds would envelope it, tongues of flame dart around, and we would be forced to move again. For over two hours we were in a regular trap. The train had to keep moving for eight hours to avoid the flames. The conductor, seeing the imminent danger, sought for a place near the Nation River in which to place the passengers should it come to the worst. Finally, we moved into the clearing near the station. And there in a train length between the station and the bridge kept watch. On the opposite side of the station is a large bush. Had that caught the station would certainly have gone, and I fear the train would have been entirely destroyed where it stood.

THE SUMMER GIRL.

(Chicago Post.)

"As sure as you live, there's another man!" cried the girl in white delightedly, as a man with a valise came up the steps of the summer resort hotel.

The girl in the yachting suit looked at him intently for a minute, and then shook her head earnestly.

"Don't go near him!" she exclaimed. "Don't let anyone introduce him to you under any circumstances! Don't have anything to do with him at all!"

"But there are thirty-eight girls and only five other men in the hotel," protested the girl in white. "We can't afford to be too particular."

"Well, you can't afford to have anything to do with him," persisted the girl in the yachting suit.

"What do you know about him?"

"I know all about him. I met him in the mountains last summer, and I tell you he's dangerous."

"Dangerous!" exclaimed the girl in white scornfully. "He looks about as harmless as anyone I ever saw."

"Well, he isn't," asserted the one in the yachting suit. "He's dangerous; and in addition to that he's the biggest fool that ever put on a flannel tennis suit and went to the seashore."

"One of the kind that rocks the boat?"

"Worse than that. He can't tell a summer flirtation from a case of genuine love."

"Really?"

"Yes, indeed. That's what makes him dangerous. Why, what do you think he wanted me to do last summer?"

"I'm sure I don't know."

"He wanted to hold me to a summer resort engagement—actually wanted me to marry him, just because I said I would one moonlight night up in the mountains, and couldn't understand it when I refused to recognize him after we got back to the city. Oh, he isn't a safe man to have anything to do with. He lacks experience."

The girl in white turned away with a sigh.

"It seems too bad to let any kind of a man escape," she said; "but, of course a man who is absurd enough to look upon a summer resort engagement seriously might be very troublesome."

TENNISON AND THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The biography of the late Lord Tennyson, which is attracting so much attention just now, is contained in two thick volumes full of interest and repeatedly emphasizes the poet's regard for the United States and his earnest desire that the parent country and offshoot should ever dwell in unity. Writing to Longfellow Tennyson said: "We English and Americans should all be brothers as none other among nations can be, and some of us, come what may, will always be so, I trust."

Tennyson's biographer writes that Emerson, Whitman, Walt Whitman, Lowell and Oliver Wendell Holmes were counted among his friends and that through them he kept alive a spirit of kinship with their countrymen. Americans, the biographer farther says, not only loaded him with appreciation but also loaded him with pipes. Writing to the Duke of Argyll, in 1867, Tennyson said: "I am sorry I did not see the Marquis of Lorne; but I'll call for the calmest sent me by Longfellow. It is odd that Americans always send me pipes and tobacco. As if I cared for nothing else in the world, and their tobacco is not my tobacco, nor are their pipes my pipes, bird's eye and cutty being more to my fancy than the costlier things. But, however, I do not mean to undervalue Longfellow's gift."

When Doctors Failed.

Codd's Kidney Pills, as Usual, Worked a Cure.

STRAFORD, Oct. 11.—There are few people in this city who do not know Mrs. R. Roberts, Downie Street. She had been an invalid for some years, and her case awakened the sympathy of her neighbors, who were confident there was no cure for her. Judge of their surprise and delight on hearing what Mrs. Roberts told thus: "I have been afflicted during three years, with kidney disease. Have used doctors' medicine but could not get cured. I have used five boxes of Codd's Kidney Pills and am now cured. You may publish this if you choose." This is a short statement, but it tells a great deal.

PECULIAR AFFAIR IN ST. JOHN.

JOHN MEAHAN DIES FROM A CRUSHED SKULL.

ST. JOHN, Oct. 11.—John Welsh is in custody "for cutting and wounding John Meahan on the head with a rock with intent to do grievous bodily harm in an office on Douglas avenue on the 5th inst."

Thursday afternoon John Meahan staggered into his home with a large cut in head. He was under the influence of liquor and refused to say how he came by the injury. A doctor was called in and ordered his removal to the hospital. The police went to work on the case and found that he had been in company with John Walsh and Thomas Rooney. Rooney admitted being in their company and took the officers to the place where he left them being chased away by Walsh who threatened to do him injury with a stone. The police have found a bottle and fragments of another one. After a search all night the officers found Walsh. Meahan died at an early hour this morning. His skull was fractured and injury was such that nothing could be done to save him. Walsh has a very bad reputation, having frequently been in the police court for breaking windows with stones and other charges of a similar character. The police think Meahan and Walsh had a quarrel and Walsh threw the stone which caused Meahan's death. Up to the last Meahan refused to tell who hit him.

HOW TO KEEP YOUR NEIGHBOR'S HENS AT HOME.

The agricultural editor of the Portland, Me., Express thus answers a correspondent who wants to know how to keep his neighbor's hens out of his garden: "Take a lot of small, stiff cards, about 1x2 inches write on them, 'Please keep your blamed old hens at home,' tie a short string to each card, with a grain of corn at the other end of the string, and scatter them where the hens congregate. When the hungry biddy gobbles up the grain that draws the prize she follows up the string, stowing it away until she comes to the card. Then you will see her pull out for home, carrying in her mouth your polite request."

Klondyke Gold

Is "not in it." If every man and woman in this fair Dominion of ours would buy as much HIGGIN'S BRITISH LINIMENT as we believe would be best for their their own welfare we would not sell our interest in it for the best claim in the Klondyke region. "Distance lends enchantment," and we are liable to ignore the blessings that lie about our feet; hence we are urging you to buy "Higgin's British Liniment" while all the unknown terrors of the journey will not keep many of you from the Klondyke gold fields.

Buy a bottle and keep it by you and there will be money in it for us and many blessing for you. It speedily cures all troubles for which Liniments are generally used.

Read what people are writing to us about it:—Mrs. Robinson, Hopewell corner, writes.—Dear Sir, I have used your British Liniment for one year and must say it surpasses all the Liniments I have ever used for Sore Throats, Lame Back, Pain in the Side, and all complaints for which a Liniment is needed. I had had a pain in my side, so bad that I had to give up work. I gave my side a good bathing with your Liniment and it gave me immediate relief, so that in twenty minutes I was able to go about my work.

Mrs. A. Hamilton, Brookfield, writes.—Dear Sir, I cannot speak too highly of your excellent Liniment. There was a lump growing on the inside of my eye for nearly two years; it grew as large as the end of my finger. I tried to drive it away with iodine, to no purpose; the doctor said that they were no remedy but to cut it out. I told him that was the last alternative, as it would destroy my eye. I then tried the British Liniment; after applying it one month the lump entirely disappeared, so my eye is as well as ever. I have found it to surpass anything for cramps and diarrhoea.

Captain Bishop, Hopewell, writes.—Dear Sir, I have suffered with a constant pain in my breast day and night for nine months. I tried every Liniment I could get, to no purpose. By three applications it was perfectly cured.
