THE YANKEE DRUMMER'S STRAIGHT TALK ABOUT EUROPE.

Information About London, Paris and Germany From a Big, Red Haired Man-He Says He Kept His Eyes Open-Do You Think He Did?

"Greater New York is going to be bigger than London," remarked the little man in the cross seat with an air of

"No, siree, it isn't!" said the big red naired man who sat alongside of him as he dusted an invisible speck from his new coat. "It won't be a marker to London. I've been there."

"What-to London?" "Sure, I have. It was three years ago, and I know what I'm talking about. Now, it's a strange fact that there are some fellows in our business that'll travel all around and never see anything. I always keep my eyes open in strange towns. It gives a man things to talk about and it broadens him." The little man began to eye his companion with new interest. He pondered his sage words for a minute and said:

"How'd it happen?" "Why, it came about just after I left you at St. Louis. I returned to New York and brought back with me $60,000 worth of orders. That pleased the firm, I can tell you, for no one was doing any business in those days. Our foreign buyer was ill and as I was pretty well posted on what the trade wanted the firm

"Here, Jones, you go over to the continent and do our buying this winter.' Did I go? Well, does a duck swim?" "Where did you go?" asked the little

"London, Paris and Germ'ny." "Say, what kind of a town is London anyway? I've always wanted to know." "Well, I'll tell you on the level. It's a bum, two for a cent place. It's no good, and that's straight. I've been about it. You can read all of this jubilee stuff you want, and if any one tells you London is any good you just tell him that Jones said it was on the bum.'

The little man's face brightened up, evidently from the delight of getting authoritative statements first hand, and, with the air of a man who wanted to improve each shining hour and add to his stock of knowledge, he said: "Tell me about London. Is it anything like New York?"

"Not a bit. I know all about the town. It's 25 years behind the times. It's like New York was before the war. Why, honest, now, there are whole rows of houses that look like they were falling down. The streets are dirty and crooked, and all houses are built flush with the street. I couldn't do any business there at all. They are a saving lot, those English."

"Did you see any fine buildings?" "Not one, except a church or two. Now what I'm telling you is honest. There isn't a building in the whole town worth seeing, and if there was you couldn't see it half the time. It's a dirty, foggy place and not fit to live in. It's an old apple woman of a town. Everybody in London drinks ale or gin. I'm telling you straight, it's on the "Paris is bigger, isn't it?" "Well-er-no. Not exactly bigger. London is a whaling big place and don't you make any mistake. I rode right straight ahead one day from 7 in the morning until 2 in the afternoon, and I was in London all the time. Paris is different. I got some great bargains there." "Did you take your wife with you to

"No; she staid in New York because was going on business. I can tell you all about Paris, and you can rely on it, for I've been there.

The little man's eyes brightened in anticipation, and he said:

"Tell me all about it-everything." "Paris," said the big man in the tone of a platform orator, "is all right, and you can say that I said so. You can live there and see the town on 16 tranes a day—that is $2—good living too. Sleeping costs you 40 cents a night, and you get a room that would cost you $1.50 in New York. Interpreter? Now, that's nonsense that you've read. There | the dealer are usually the real thing. were four of us in the party, and when we started out we hired an interpreter. When we'd taken about two of them French drinks-cognacks they call 'em, sort of brandies they are—we gave the interpreter the grand bounce and we didn't see him again. Three of those cognacks will make you talk French like a native. Fact, because I tried it. Four had taken a $10,000 order for goods that the firm wanted to get rid of.

"Did you see any interesting buildings or places?" "Saw the whole outfit, and it's no great shakes. The Paris boulevards are pretty fine, though. The little man looked disappointed at his friend's meagerness of detail. Then he remembered Germany, and he sked his friend what he had seen there. "Now you are getting right into my stamping ground," said the big man. "Germany beats them all. I went to Berlin, and, say, I bought a line of satinets there that netted the firm $70,000. Now, what do you think of that? Was not that a good stroke? Oh, I tell you Germany is my stamping ground!" "What interested you there?"

"Why, I saw everything, and how the Germans drink beer! If I hadn't been afraid that those satinets would go · out of fashion, I'd have made a bigger stroke on them. Now, don't you let any one fool you about those places. Just come to me and I'll put you straight. I tell you I believe in traveling with my eyes open. What's the good of traveling if you don't learn something? I'll be out on the road in a month, and perhaps I'll run across you. Here's my station. Goodby, old man."-New York Sun.

BIG EXPORT OF CATS.

WATERVILLE, Dec. 16.—Ered D. Nudd proprietor of the Linda Vista Angora Cat ranch, has recently made the largest single shipment of coon cats ever made by any man in Maine. The lot included 100 ca's all thoroughbred animals from the best imported strains. This lot went to a large cat store in Philadelphia, Pa.

They were all the very finest cats that can be raised, and included white, buff, black, white with blue eyes, tiger, coon colored, jet black, seal brown and fox cats. Besides, there was one fancy manx Angora cat, the first one ever shipped from Maine. Mr. Nudd is probably the largest breeder of coon cats in Maine and has a very handsome lot of cats and kit-

CASTORIA.

THE GHOST OF SIR JOHN.

FAITH FENTON, a Toronto journalist, publishes a story relating how the late Sir John A. McDonald, some time after his death and when the lamented Sir John, Thompson was Premier, appeared on two different occasions to a young man in one of the departmental offices at Ottawa and instructed him to go to Sir John Thomson and deliver to him certain messages from the dead Chieftain relative to matters political and financial. The story goes on to say that Sir John Thompson consulted the lawyer who had charge of the financial arrangements in connection with the dead Premier's will, to which the first message had reference, and this man eclared the suggestions from the land of shodes were excellent. He declared moreover that no living person but nimself could possibly know about the matters in question. On the second occasion that the young man presented himself to Sir John Thompson, he told the latter that his dead predecessor in the Premiership recommended certain changes in the Cabinet. Thereupon Sir John Thompson sub jected his visitor to a very severe scrutiny but was convinced he was in good faith. The Premier then called his colleagues together and submitted the matter to them. The dead Chieftain's old colleagues at once recognized in the suggestions the sagasity of the grand oid man. So strict were they with what they heard that Sir A. P. Caron exclaimed, "Great Heavens, is the man at it again!" The stery goes on to say that Sir John Thompson acknowledged the changes suggested were excellent and just such as he would like to make if it were practicable. Whether or not this recital is true, it appears to be just about what might be expected from the old Chiefton. If he is in a position to inwe may be very sure he would devote his thoughts to State craft and Cabinet making, and we may be sure that his plans would be good and for the benefit of Canada. It is quite evident that, nead or alive, his delight is cabinet making.-Ex
