YOUNG KERN CONFESSES TO HIS FATHER'S MURDER.

WATERLOC, Ia., Dec. 4.-William Kern has made a confession implicating his sweetheart, Delilah Fales in the murder of Jerome Kern and has confessed himself plice. He says he loved her. He had no particular enmity against his father save that his father objected to his attachment to Miss Fales. Such was the strength of his tascination for the woman who tempted him however, that when she unfolded to him the details of a plot to slay both his parents, take possession of their property and get married, he consented to assist in the slaughter. A plot was laid to lure Jerome Kern Sr., into the timber land and then make away with him. The murder of the mother was to be accomplished at a later cate. On the morning of the murder the elder Kern was induced to leave the house. Dealah Fales lay in wait for him and after engageing the un suspecting man in conversation, fired the fatal shot. According to young Kern's confession the two then saturated the clothing of the dead man and set fire to them, the object being to conceal the manner in which he died. He alleges that the oil can and revolver were buried by the Fales woman in the woods.

man to haunt him in the guise of the ghost of the murdered father. The ghost worked on the young man's nerves to such an ex tent that he finally weakened.

"I think it is just awful the way wine is served to young men by some of the society women of Topeka. One young man has been ruined by this practice and others are on the road to ruin. These society young women are responsible for their downfall. It is amazing that so many of the young women of this town do not object to the young men drinking liquor, and it is still more shocking to know that many of the young women drink liquor

The Magazine Number of The Outlook for December is its ninth annual Book Number. It contains a great variety of illustrated matter relating not only to the boks of the season but to topics of general interest to all who care for books and reading. A leading feature consists of three articles grouped under the title "The Making of books." In these articles Mr. Theodore L. DeVinne, of the famous firm of printers of fine books known as The DeVinne Press, writes of "The Printing of Books;" Mr. Ernest D. North, an expert bibliophile, of "Bookbinding as a fine Art." and Mr. George Wharton Edwards, the artist, of "The Illustration of Books" The pictures accompanying these articles include some unique types, and fine buildings, both ancient and modern, while as illustration to Mr. Edwards's article there are printed ten full-page pictures showing by fine examples the typical work of many successful American illustrators Pyle, Edwards, Pennell, Vedder, Herter, COMMERCIAI and Hopkinson Smith. Many pages are devoted to a consideration of the important holiday books of the year. Other illustrated articles are the final instalment of Mr. Justin McCarty's "The Story of Gladstone's Life," which contains several recent photographs of Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone and their family; and an extremely readable paper on Miss Jane Barlow, the writer of Irish stories, illustrated from photographs taken near Miss Barlow's home by the author of this article, Mr. Clifton Johnson. In fiction the notable feature of the month is a story of Western life by Mr. Hamlin Garland. An important paper of serious interest is that by the Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon, called "The Theological Problem for To-day." ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 13 Astor Place, New York.

STYLES IN PARLOR STOVES. The Evolution of the Self Feeder-"High Art and Low Feed."

The modern American self feeding parlor stove, which also was originally made cylindrical in form, is now almost without exception made square. The self feeder commended itself at once upon its introduction and it soon came into wide use. Its utility was everywhere recognized. It was not then, however, so perfect in detail as it has since been made. The magazine was at first made larger than was really necessary, even for the purpose of such a stove. In a large size self feeder, standing pretty high generally, the opening into the magazine at the top, through which the coal was poured, was so high that it became quite a task to lift a scuttle of coal up to it. This was not so much noticed at the very outset, when people were more impressed by other features, but it speedily became a consideration of importance. It was said at the time that in feeding some of the stoves a stepladder was needed. It certainly did require a considerable degree of exertion. The ornamentation of the stove at that time consisted of moldings and relief, cast upon the upper part of the cylinder, looped around the top, and the stove was often surmounted with an ornamental urn. All this made a handsome stove, as stoves went, but it was felt that something better might be produced in the way of style and finish and that it was practically essential that something should be done to lower the feed. These two requisites to the highest development and greater success of the self feeding parlor stove were formulated in the phase "high art and low feed" once familiar in the trade. The demands were promptly met.

To bring the feed lower, the whole stove was lowered wherever it could be done, a trifle being taken here and there, the grate was lowered a little, and the magazine was reduced in size where that could be done and still leave it of ample size to meet essential requriments. The effect of these changes | McDonald, John, estate 1.48 was to bring the feed down to where it | McDonald. John A, estatel. 48 is today, within convenient reach, and | Pineau, Andree B the general lowering of the structure of | Richard, Camille the stove was in keeping also with the Richard, Placide new outward shape that was adopted, square instead of round, the fire pot, however, remaining round.

At first in the ornamentation of stoves of the new design tiles were used freely and some of the parts of the stoves or their trimmings were nickel plated. Tiles are still used to a considerable extent. Nickel plating is more freely used than at first, and bronze is now used also. While the stoves are in outline and effect square it does not follow that they are flat sided. Some are recessed, some have swell sides. They are made in various modifications of shape and in a great variety of styles of finish as to ornamentation in tires and stoves are tasteful as well as elaborate. "High art and low feed" are combined in them .- New York Sun.
