Spring.

'Twill purify the system-Give you strength and energy.

Very few people escape the enervating influence of spring weather.

There is a dullness, drowsiness and inaptitude for work on account of the whole system being clogged up with impurities accumulated during the winter

The liver is sluggish, the bowels inclined to be constipated, the blood impure, and the entire organism is in need of a thorough cleansing.

Of all "Spring Medicines," Burdock Blood Bitters is the best.

It stimulates the sluggish liver to activity, improves the appetite, acts on the bowels and kidneys, purifies and enriches the blood, removes all poisonous products, and imparts new life and vigor to those who are weak and debilitated.

7 Big Mr. Wm. J. Hepburn writes from Centralia, Ont .: "I can sincerely say that Burdock Blood Bitters is the best spring medicine on the market. Last spring my blood got out of order, and I had seven or eight good sized boils come out on my body, and the one on my leg was much larger than an egg. I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and inside of six days, when only half the bottle was taken, there wasn't a boil to be seen. I have recommended B.B.B. to different people in our village, and all derived benefit from it. I wish B.B.B. every success, as it is indeed a great medicine for the blood."

B.B.B. is a highly concentrated vege-table compound—teaspoonful doses—add water yourself.

OVERCHARGED HEART OF PENT-UP EMOTION.

Pinkie Billmore, remarks the Chicago Tribune, sat with her face half averted

In the young man's flushed cheek, trembling lip and agitated manner there were unmistakable signs of a coming out-

The emotions of an overcharged heart could be crushed down no longer.

Flavius Josephus Millsap was no strang. er to the Billmore mansion. He pervaded it three or four evenings every week, as a rule, and oftener still as a frequent Everybody in the house, from the aged grand mother to the kitchen lady, knew he came to see Miss Pinkie.

Even Miss Pinkie knew it, despite the fact that he had never explicitly said so. In like manner he knew she was perfectly willing for him to pervade the mansion, according to rule or exceptionally, though she had never actually expressed herself to that effect.

Yet she sat with her face half averted from him.

Such is the contradictory, tantalizing, exasperating habit of the young woman of all climes, kindreds, tongues and periods of the world's history.

Young woman! Young woman! What an abject fool thou hast made of the worshipping young man from time immemorial, even when-but this is a digres-

"Yes," she replied softly. "I know. You want to tell me that this style of wearing my hair isn't becoming to me. That's because you're not used to seeing it. When you become accustomed"-"You know well enough it isn't that! "You want to ask me why I didn't

But she still sat with her face half averted from him.

"Pinkie, why do you think I've been coming here for the last six months?"

"Seven months," she murmured. This was not encouraging, on the face of it, but he went ahead:

"The fact of the matter is, Pinkie Billmore, I have been coming here because I can't keep away. Ever since I met you -do you believe in love at first sight? I do!-ever since I first met vou I have known you are my fate! Dearest and best"---She put up her hand.

"Oh, not now, Flavius! Not now!"

She still sat with her face half averted from him.

"Why not, Pinkie? Why not? What is the matter?" "Flavius"-it was almost a sob-"have you been eating onions?"

He Obeyed Orders.

Years ago, when Clemenceau was the mayor of Martre and at the same time a deputy, he opened a dispensary in the quarter, where advice was given free, for Clemenceau is a specialist in skin diseases. One day he noticed that he had just one hour in which to get his luncheon and go down to the chamber, where he had to interpellate the government. He called his assistant and said, "How many more patients are there waiting?"

"Six," replied the man. One after the other had his case diagnosed, and Clemenceau, after another glance at his watch, said, "Tell the other two to undress at once, as I have only two more minutes to wait." One entered, and Clemenceau wrote out a prescription in the twinkling of an eye.

The last man came in as naked as the day when he was born. Clemenceau eyed him for a minute and then said: "You are suffering from no skin disease. What have you come here to worry me for?"

The man looked at him aghast for a minute and replied: "Skin disease?] never said I had a skin disease. Your man came in and told me to undress, M. le Depute, and I did so. All I wanted to ask you was to use your influence to get my sister a place in the postoffices in Algeria."

Clemenceau smiled, took his name and did use his influence. - Today.

How Far Can Quail Fly? A number of sportsmen have been discussing the question of how far a quail can fly. There are a good many contingencies to be considered in arriving at a definite conclusion of the question, the which cuts no inconsiderable figure in the distance one of these birds can fly. If there is a stiff wind blowing and the bird's course is with the wind, a full grown quail could certainly go more than a mile with ease and doubtless a much greater distance.

Those who have noticed quail trying to fly across the Missouri river, where the distance is about a mile, recall that not all the birds make the trip safely. They usually pick a spot where they can make a halt on a sand bar in midstream, and thus cross the river in two flights. But sometimes they make the distance at a single flight, and this seems to be their full limit under normal conditions, for when they alight they are completely exhausted.

It is generally believed that on an average a mile is about the limit of the flight of a quail where it is neither favored nor retarded by the wind. It happens very often that in crossing the Missouri river at a single flight quail drop exhausted into the water. Probably these are young birds.-St. Louis Republic.

Raising His Fare.

A certain board school teacher is responsible for the following little story, which is not without its pathetic side. He was endeavoring to explain the term "booking" as applied to our rail-

"Now," he was saying, "can any of you tell me the name of the office at which railway tickets are sold?" "The booking office," replied one of the lads.

"Right," responded the teacher. At this moment his eye fell on a small boy at the end of the class, who was evidently paying very little attention to what was said. "Did you hear that, Dowser?" he "Wot, sir?" asked that youth inno-

"As I thought, you were not listening. We will suppose that your father decided to have a day's holiday and visit the seaside. What would he have Standard. An Odd Collection.

One of the most remarkable collections of souvenirs ever made is a collection of male opera hats by one of the actresses of a London company. She owns no fewer than 216 of these articles, for it was her whim to make every young man who was introduced to her give her his opera hat as a souvenir. She not only keeps them in their pristine condition, but converts them into all sorts of other things, such as photograph frames, workbaskets, and some are even used for the purpose of holding flower pots.

Golden Silence.

Emerson at the house of a friend tells of the characteristic way in which the Concord philosopher blunted the edge of a compliment.

"Oh, Mr. Emerson," said a young woman of the party, "it must be so delightful to know that people all over the country are grateful for the things you have said!"

"Thank you," said Emerson slowly, "but it is for some of the things I have not said that I feel most grateful."

A Story of George IV.

In Lady Gregory's newly published reminiscences she says of George IV's trip to Ireland in 1821: "The king arrived after a good passage, during which much goose pie and whisky had been consumed. Word had just come of the death of Napoleon at St. Helena. The story goes that 'Sire, your enemy is dead,' were the words he was greeted with. 'When did she die?' was his re-dead." The Gambling Bacillus.

Successful sports know that in the highways and byways are countless idiots who skimp their families, borrow, beg and even steal in order to bet on horse races at odds of 4 to 1 against them in the long run, on stocks at 20 to 1, on slugging matches at everything to nothing. CURE FOR LOVE. Take a grain of sense, half a grain of prudence, a dram of understanding, one ounce of patience, a pound of resolution, a handful of dislike, intermix them all together, and fold them in the emblick of your brain for twenty-four hours, set them on a slow fire of hatred and strain clear from the dregs of melancholy, sweetening them with forgetfulness, then put them in a bottle of your heart, corking them down with a cork of sound judgement, then let them stand fourteen days in the water of cold affection, this rightly made, and properly applied is the most affectual remedy in the universe, and was never known to fail.
