A TERRIBLE TIME!

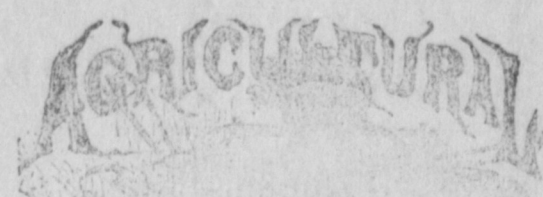

A Port Hope Lady Undergoes a trying experience, from which she is at last freed by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. F. J. ARMSTRONG, one of Port Hope's best known citizens, speaks as follows:—
"My wife has had a terrible time with her heart for the last fifteen months.

"The pains were intense, and she had a smothering feeling together with shortness of breath, weakness and general debility. Medicine seemed to do her no good, and we had about given up trying when she started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They have toned her up wonderfully.

"She is stronger to-day than she has been for months, thanks to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I am sure there can be no better remedy from their remarkable effects in Mrs. Armstrong's case."

FOOD FOR YOUNG TURKEYS.

The first month with young turkeys is when the most care should be given. As a diet for them prepare the food so as to have it nourishing. Into a shallow pan placed over the fire pour one pint of sweet milk; into this drop two eggs, well beaten, add a little cornmeal and chopped onion tops, and stir the mixture until it boils and assumes the consistency of thick jelly. It should be made fresh every day, and in warm weather kept in a cool place to prevent its becoming sour before eating. After the first few days, and the young turkeys have learned to eat the mixture, it should be seasoned with a pinch of black pepper. When they are ten days or two weeks old the mixture, after it is thoroughly cooked, may be thickened with stale bread and corn-meal and after the turkeys are a month old put a pan of fresh milk on the stove, and when it comes to a boil add also potatoes with the bread and meal, and let it cook until quite thick. The onion-tops finely chopped, should always be included.

GOOD COWS.

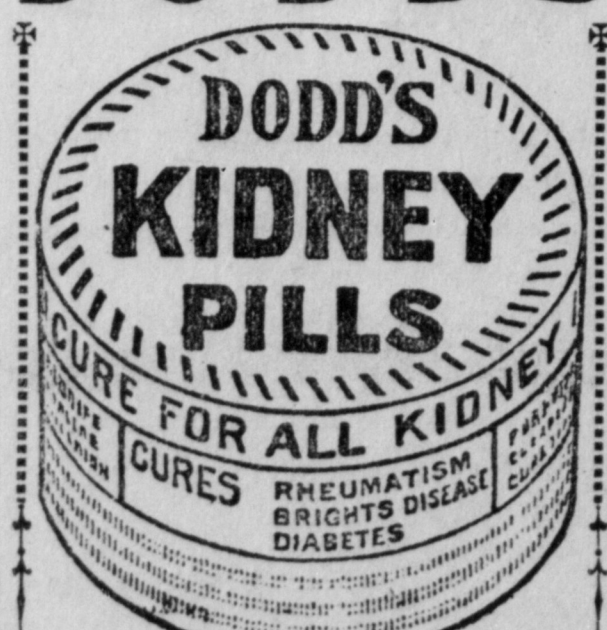

There is considerable in a cow's possibility to give a good quantity of rich milk but it is easy to have that possibility ruined by poor feed and lack of care in bringing up and developing. On the other hand, no amount of feed and care will induce a cow that naturally gives thin, poor milk to turn about and give milk that is rich in solids. Good feed and good care will help develop many cows that have been neglected, but if there is any decided improvement it will be made with cows that are born to be good, but have not had the opportunity. To get the most out of any cow, good or bad, good feed and care are necessary, but it is the good cow that gives the best returns when well fed and cared for.

QUEEN VICTORIA.

BY THE POET LAURATE.

Springtime was flowering in your fair young face
When first the sceptre laid on you its load—
Springtime and seedtime—and how well you sowed
In the rough furrows life's long duties trace,
Scattering with lavish heart the smiles of youth and grace.

Though April sandalled with its flowers your feet,
And sang its amorous descendant in your ears,
You, with a foresight wiser than your years,
Bethought you of the time, more serious, sweet,
When mellow fruit is stored, and stacked is ripened wheat.

With heart as tender as the bud half blown,
Yet in the very season of young love,
Kneeling, you sought its impulse from above,
Choosing for consort of your earthly throne
A soul akin to yours, a mind to match your own.

So that when glowed your summer o'er the land,
You, with your people round you, could forecast
Rich-fruited future planted in the past,
Engaging promise of rule rightly planned,
Of freedom round your shores, and on the sea command.

Then slowly comes the time when summer's wane,
And from the sunshine something seems withdrawn,
As pensive shadows lengthen on the lawn,
The one sweet thing that then unwithered doth remain.

But there is beauty in autumnal bough,
No less than in dear April's dewy leaves,
When, with its store of golden girdled sheaves
Piled, stands the wain where one time passed the plough,
And ripened labor reaps fulfilment of its vow.

For though no more the oblivious cuckoo calls
From land to land, nor longer on the spray
Of yellowing elm the throats vaunts his lay,
The ringdove's mate, as fades the leaf and falls,
Reiterates its note of love that never palls.

From hamlet roofs blue spires of smoke once more—
As dies the day in mist along the dale
And widowed evening weeps behind her veil—
From log-replenished ingle heavenward soar,
And lamps are early lit and early latched the door.

Season it is less earthly than divine,
When love's rich gerdons with the day's increase
And cares are softened 'neath the crown of peace,
When all we have won 'twere easy to resign—
A season like to this, loved Lady; now is thine.

Through life's successive labors, one by one,
Still moving on to-day, no more you roam,
Seeking fresh tasks, but fruit of harvest home;
Fruit blent with flowers, warmed by October's sun,
Are round your throne entwined, and harvest hymns begun.

Oh, what a harvest, Lady, now is yours!
Empire and fame and glory, and above
Glory and fame a universe's love—
Love rooted deep in reverence that insures
Remembrance of your name as long as time endures.

Long may the Indian summer of your days
Yet linger in the land you love so well,
And long may we, who no less love you, dwell
In the reposed radiance of your gaze,
A golden sunset seen through autumn's silvery haze.

ELOPED AT NINETY.

BINGHAMPTON, N. Y., May 25.—An elopement, which is a record-breaker as far as the ages of the principals are concerned, has just occurred at the village of Franklin.

The pair who have outwitted their objecting relatives are James Crawford and Miss Edith Johnson. Each is 90 years old and wealthy. They had been engaged for some time.

Miss Johnson's relatives objected to the proposed union, and, it is said, recently started a movement to have a guardian of her person and estate appointed.

This fact reached Mr. Crawford, and he lost no time in telling his fiancée about it. He easily persuaded her that he would prove the best guardian she could find, and that an immediate marriage would enable her to escape the domination of one appointed by a court.

In the same buggy in which he drove to Miss Johnson's home he took her round to the home of a minister, and he married them at once.

The aged couple are enjoying the honeymoon at the residence of the husband. The bride's relatives are said to be furious at being so cleverly hoodwinked.

DIGS GRAVE TO SCARE WIFE.

THEN HE THREATENS TO PUT HER IN IT IF SHE CONTINUES TO DRINK.

TRENTON, May 25.—Mrs. Annie Hopkins of No. 1,030 Lambert street, Trenton, N. J., appealed to the police yesterday to protect her from her husband. He was going to murder her and bury her in the back yard, she said.

Policeman Shannon went to the excited woman's rescue. When he entered the small home he found her husband, Frank Hopkins, and William Rulon the only occupants. They were not agitated by the officer's entrance.

"You don't believe me? Well, come out into the back yard and I will show you that I am speaking only that which is the truth," said Mrs. Hopkins. She led the way to the back yard and Policeman Shannon, the husband and Rulon followed. In a remote corner of the yard there was a newly dug grave, five feet in depth and six feet in length.

At the head of this grave was a roughly hewn stone made to represent a tombstone, and near the hole was a piece of carpet, in which, ostensibly, the body was to be wrapped.

Policeman Shannon gazed in surprise at the grave, and then turned to Hopkins for an explanation. The husband then said that he had threatened to kill his wife and bury her in that grave if she did not stop drinking, and that was all there was about it. He said his wife had been drinking to excess and was neglecting her family, and that he was going to try a new plan of curing her of her ways.

Investigation by the police developed the fact that Hopkins had the reputation of being quiet and not quarrelsome. Last night the police induced the woman to take the pledge, and the grave has been boarded over temporarily.

Every one suffering with a bad cold, or cough should be in earnest about having it promptly relieved. No medicine of modern times has been found so effective as Dr. Cook's Sure Cough Cure, the old English remedy. It will break up a cold with a few doses. Sold by all dealers 25 cents.

William H. Bauld, one of the best known citizens of Halifax, died suddenly last Wednesday. His family were all out. When they returned his body was found lying in the hall at the foot of the stairs. Physicians said he had probably been stricken with apoplexy while coming down the stairway. There was a slight mark on his face where it had struck when he fell.

THE MOTH AND THE FLAME.

A SONG WHICH GIVES THE WOMAN'S SIDE OF THE INTERRUPTED WEDDING.
(New York Sun.)

Considerable popularity was gained a few years ago by a song, the title of which was "Those Wedding Bells Shall Not Ring Out." It told the somewhat unusual story of an abandoned husband who visited a church about the time a marriage was to be performed whereat his wife was the bride. The abandoned husband, surcharged with emotion over the guile of his spouse, stalked down the main aisle of the church, and, first addressing the clergyman and then the sexton, exclaimed in what are known in popular novels as stentorian tones: "Those wedding bells shall not ring out!" The effect of this manoeuvre (if the unwelcome intrusion of the husband may be so described) was to prevent a bigamous marriage and thus relieve the criminal courts of a case, the sensational possibilities of which could not possibly have occurred to the writer of the words of the song. As may naturally be supposed, the spectacle of an abandoned husband, though interesting and not devoid of sentimental features, is by no means so attractive as the spectacle of a wife abandoned by her husband and present unseen at his projected marriage with another. Therefore it need be no cause for surprise for anyone familiar with such matters to learn that there is a song giving, so to speak, the woman's side of the case, the wife's side, which, as all human experience shows, is usually the right side. The title of this song, now quite popular, is "The Moth and the Flame," and it is a variation of the situation described in "Those Wedding Bells Shall Not Ring Out"—the other side of the wedding picture. This is the first stanza of the song:—

At a gay reception given in a mansion old,
A young man met a girl he used to know,
And once again the story of his honest love he told,
The love he'd cherished since long years ago.

But she sighed and sadly murmured that her childhood love was past.
That soon another man she was to wed.
The lover knew the other man already had a wife,
He bade farewell, but as he went he said:

These words are designed as preliminary to the real episode of the song, prophetic, as it were, of what is to follow and of which the first hint is contained in the chorus:

The Moth and the Flame played a game one day,
The game of a woman's heart.
And the Moth that played was a maid, they say,
The Flame was a bad man's art.

The Moth never knew as she flew so near,
That Flame was the light of a shame,
But she fluttered away just in time, so they say,
That's the tale of the Moth and the Flame.

The second verse recites in detail the episode of the interrupted marriage wherein the discarded wife of the bridegroom, summarily interrupts the nuptials and puts the husband in what in military tactics would be called an untenable position. These are the words of the verse:

The maiden did not understand the fable that he told,
A church was soon arrayed in holy state,
A couple at the altar stood before the crowd of guests,
When a woman screamed, "Stop ere it is too late!"

The villain turned and saw his wife and rudely struck her as he down,
Denouncing her as an impostor bold;
But the girl threw off the bridal wreath.
"You coward," then she cried,
"My true love warned me when this tale he told."

Such is the end of the Moth and the Flame, such is the form in it of the marriage interruption, differing in some particulars from the customary marriage interruption on the stage, which is, usually, of what may be called a forceful character, at the conclusion of the episode there being what is technically known as a quick curtain. In the act succeeding there are no criminal proceedings taken against any one. Everything is explained satisfactorily.

MANILA, May 24th, 6.25 p. m.—The companies of the Twenty-second Infantry, forming General Lawton's rear guard, returning from San Miguel to Baling yesterday, escorting a signal party which was picking up wire laid with General Lawton's expedition, found that the insurgents had reoccupied the country and had fighting followed from daylight until the Americans camped at night. But the troops completed their work, though harassed by the enemy.

One American was killed and fourteen were wounded. The troops captured twenty prisoners and thirty rifles.

It developed to-day that five men instead of one man were drowned by the sinking of a raft loaded with soldiers of the Fourteenth regiment at the Pasig Ferry yesterday.

Twenty insurgents were killed and 40 were wounded in the engagement with Major Bell's reconnoitering party in the vicinity of Santa Arta yesterday. General Lawton, with most of his troops has arrived at Malolos. His remarkable expedition marched 120 miles in 30 days, had 21 fights, captured 28 towns, destroyed 300,000 bushels of rice and only lost six men killed and 21 wounded. On the other hand, General Lawton estimates that his troops killed 400 insurgents and wounded double that number.

The United States commissioners and many American officers celebrated Queen Victoria's birthday to-day on board the British first-class cruiser Powerful.

The production of youthful criminals seems to be growing in Canada. The latest story, from Montreal, is about three small boys, aged respectively 14, 16 and 17 years old, and all sons of respectable parents. They forged three cheques, two of which were cashed at the Bank of Nova Scotia, for $74.14 and $195. A cheque for $104.47 was presented at the Dominion Bank and was apparently good, but the manager thought it advisable to communicate with the gentleman whose name was at the bottom of the piece of paper. As soon as the boy divined the manager's intention he fled. All three have been arrested and are now in jail awaiting examination. They pleaded guilty. Of course they spent their ill gotten gains in Diamond rings, watches and jewelry.
