Permanent Cure of Cancer.

MRS. GILHULA.
Some twelve years ago Mrs. Elizabeth Gilhula, wife of the postmaster of Buxton, Ont., was taken ill with an obscure stomach trouble which her physicians pronounced cancer of the stomach and informed her that her lease of life would be short. On the advice of friends she commenced taking Burdock Blood Bitters. The results that followed were little short of marvellous. Her strength and vigor returned and in a short time she was completely cured. Mrs. Gilhula is to-day in the full enjoyment of good health, and in all these years there has not been the slightest return of the trouble.

Here is the letter Mrs. Gilhula wrote at the time of her cure:
"About four years ago I was taken sick with stomach trouble and consulted several of the leading physicians here, all of whom pronounced the disease to be cancer of the stomach of an incurable nature, and told me that it was hardly to be expected that I could live long. Afterward the two doctors who were attending me gave me up to die. By the advice of some of my friends, who knew of the virtues of Burdock Blood Bitters, I was induced to try it, and I am now happy to say that after using part of the first bottle I felt so much better I was able to get up. I am thankful to state that I am completely cured of the disease by the use of B.B.B., although it had baffled the doctors for a long time. I am firmly convinced that Burdock Blood Bitters saved my life."

Here is the letter received from her a short time ago:

"I am still in good health. I thank Burdock Blood Bitters for saving my life twelve years ago, and highly recommend it to other sufferers from stomach troubles of any kind." ELIZABETH GILHULA.

MILE A MINUTE ON A BICYCLE.

THAT IS WHAT A NEW YORK MAN WILL TRY ON JULY 1st, PACED BY A RAILWAY TRAIN.

NEW YORK, June 1.—For years Charles M. Murphy, a member of the King's County Wheelmen, and a veteran racing man, has been confident that he could ride a mile in a minute on his bicycle with proper pacing. By proper pacing Murphy means the assistance of a railroad locomotive cutting the wind for him. But as a specially prepared track and temporary suspension of train service are necessary for the trial, the cyclist has heretofore tried in vain to get an opportunity for his dangerous experiment.

Last week the Long Island Railroad finally concluded to give Murphy the assistance he needs, and the trial will be made June 29th or 30th or July 1st, during the State meet of the League of American Wheelmen at Patchogue. A two-mile stretch of perfectly level road will be prepared by laying a smooth board surface between the rails. One of the company's fastest engines will be attached to a passenger coach carrying timers and officials. On the rear of the coach a wind shield, almost touching the rails, will be built. In the centre of the shield will be painted a broad horizontal line of vivid color to guide Murphy. The cyclist will ride as close to the shield as possible, in order to get the full benefit of the suction.

The ride will be an exceedingly dangerous one. A breakdown would be likely to result in a fatality. Nevertheless, Murphy and his friends are confident of success. They claim during Murphy's performances on a home trainer that he has often pedaled a mile a minute on the stationary machine, thus showing that he can pedal fast enough to stay in the powerful suction of the train.

In 1896 E. E. Anderson was credited with riding in the West a mile in 1m. 13.5s., paced by a train. The record was not generally accepted, although it was known that the trial was actually made.

200 LOVE LETTERS A DAY.

RUSH, Pa., May 30.—Miss T. A. Roberts of Rush, is receiving some 200 proposals of marriage a day in spite of every effort to discontinue them. There is a matrimonial journal in Milwaukee. Its editor obtained Miss Roberts's address and announced that she was a wealthy unmarried lady with $20,000 in her own name and more in prospect, and that she desired a life partner.

The first intimation Miss Roberts had of the matter was when marriage proposals came pouring in through the mails. She was besieged with petitions for her photograph, and some of the missives were tender in the extreme.

The postal authorities have begun a suit against the Milwaukee publication, and Miss Roberts has gone there to testify but the flood of proposals still continues.

"And let us not be weary in well-doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."—Galatians 6: 9.

"From o'er the land there comes a wail of souls to bitter anguish given; Through demon drink, with subtle power, hath every cherished hope been riven; And shall not we, who name the name of Him who died to save the lost; Unite with those who bravely fight against the traffic's cruel host? Arise, ye valiant men, arise, and onward hasten to the fray; The temperance banner wave on high, till glorious victory crowns the day."

PROHIBITION.

REV. WILLIAM RYAN.

The fabled Hydra of the ancients was a many-headed monster which it was very difficult to kill. As soon as one head was cut off another head grew on; and it was found that the only way to destroy the monster was to cut off all its heads at once and immediately sear with a hot iron all the wounds to prevent new growth.

The liquor traffic is such a Hydra. It is many headed; and no sooner do you cut off one head than another appears. It cares very little about your restrictions, so long as you do not annihilate it. It will develop new heads and open up new avenues and carry on its nefarious work of human destruction so long as it is allowed to live. This is why it is in our midst, desecrating homes, breaking hearts and ruining souls, at the close of the nineteenth century. It has succeeded all along down the ages in getting a few interested people and narrow party politicians to plead for its life. Those have stood with tearful eye and eloquent tongue and cried, "Spare this Hydra! You may cut off a few of its heads, if you please, haggle round it, hobble it, fight with it; but do not annihilate it. Let it live in some form; and we will bury the men it kills, nurse back to life the women it maims and be messengers of mercy to every class that may come within its relentless grasp. But let the Hydra live!" Through the patronage of those mistaken advocates, who put "evil for good and good for evil," this monster has been allowed to live from generation to generation and carry on, with increasing power, its work of human destruction. Where the gin head has been knocked off the beer head has been put on, and where the whiskey head has fallen the cider head has grown. The experience of the past forces all thinking men, except its advocates, to the conclusion that the only way to free our nation from the dire calamities which this monster creates, is to cut off all its heads at one stroke and so effectually cauterize the wounds as to make new growth impossible. Annihilate the liquor demon at once.

Men with the keenest intellects and the very best opportunities for observation have declared against this nefarious traffic. About 1880 when the Hon. W. E. Gladstone was Prime Minister of England, he declared in the House of Commons that the liquor traffic produces evils more deadly, because more continuous, than those caused by the three great historic scourges, war, famine, and pestilence combined. The statement was not original with Mr. Gladstone. It was first made by Charles Buxton, a wealthy brewer and a member of Parliament. Let this be remembered. It is not the statement of a temperance crank, but the well weighed judgement of a brewer who made a fortune in the liquor business; and who has a better right to know than he what his own labor produces? Mr. Gladstone endorsed the statement and gave it the weight of his great influence. Have you considered what this statement means? Think of the blood and carnage of earth's battle fields: the slain men, widowed homes and orphan children; husbands, brothers and lovers prematurely cut off and families plunged into the agonies of a bereavement which death only can relieve. Think of the devastating famine which turns men into wild beasts and makes parents ready to devour their own offspring. Think of the decimating pestilence which turns brave men into cowards and causes them to flee for their lives. How risen fly from the pestilence stricken city! Think of the millions of human lives which have been sacrificed by these three historic scourges, war, famine, and pestilence. Then ask shall there be in our midst a preventable evil, upheld and perpetuated by my influence and vote, which is more destructive in its ravages than those three great historic scourges combined? If in time of war, blessed are the peace-makers; if in time of famine, it is praise-worthy and Christ-like to feed the hungry; if in time of pestilence, it is divine to stand by and nurse the plague-stricken and dying, what must it be to blot out forever a national curse which is more destructive in its sweeping ravages than war and famine and pestilence combined? The grand opportunity of a human life is the chance to help annihilate such a monster evil. The man who fails to embrace it and to use his vote and his voice in favor of a prohibitory law, will lose the one grand opportunity which God gives him to vindicate the cause of the oppressed and declare for mercy, justice and righteousness. The lover of his country and his race will allow no partisan influence or personal sacrifice to keep him from improving such a God-given privilege.

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

An old lady called at a store and asked for a bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; the clerk said "they were out, but could supply her with another just as good." The engaging smile that accompanied this information was frozen stiff when she replied:

Young Man, there is only one Liniment, and that is Johnson's.

Originated in 1810 by an old Family Physician. There is not a remedy in use which has the confidence of the public to a greater extent. Could a remedy have existed for nearly a century, except that it possess extraordinary merit?

FIGHT IS THE WORD.

OTTAWA, June 3.—Conservative caucus was held to-day. The subject discussed was the redistribution bill. It was decided to oppose the bill at every stage. One of the Conservative men said after the meeting was over that every constitutional means at their disposal would be taken to block the measure, so as to prevent its going through this session. The meeting was without doubt unanimous on this point, and those who predicted that Parliament would not be prorogued before the snow flies may have known what they were talking about.

Some time ago the Canadian Pacific purchased the Great Northwest Central Railway. Their charter expires and they asked an extension of one year. It was opposed by the western members unless work was started at once. Finally the company agreed to spend $20,000 this year and the extension was granted.
