In all the scientific books he had read,
And the whole mighty universe then would be dead,
And he worried about it.""And some day the earth will fall into the sun,"
And he worried about it."Just as sure and as straight as if shot from a gun,"
And he worried about it."When strong gravitation unbuckles her straps,
Just picture," he said, "what a fearful collapse!"
It will come in a few million ages, perhaps!"
And he worried about it."The earth will become much too small for our race,"
And he worried about it."When we'll pay thirty dollars an inch for pure space,"
And he worried about it."The earth will be crowded so much without doubt,
That there'll be no room for one's tongue to stick out,
And no room for one's thoughts to wander about,"
And he worried about it.

Truro News: The friends in Truro of "Willie" B. Crowe will regret to read the notice of his death. His demise was very sad and sudden. The deceased left Truro about two years ago and went to Saranac Lake, in the Adirondacks, for his health. He became quite strong and hearty, and on Oct. 19th last, at Syracuse, was married to a Miss Erhard, of that place. The young couple came on a wedding tour to Nova Scotia, to visit the deceased's relatives. Enroute to Truro they stopped at Stellarton, where Mr. Crowe was seized with pneumonia, contracted on the journey. He never left his bed, but passed away on the 16th instant.

To be entirely relieved of the aches and pains of rheumatism means a great deal, and Hood's Sarsaparilla does it.

"WINE IS A MOCKER."Only a glass of wine
When the tempter's power held sway,
But it led its victim down the path
Of sin's most deadly way;
It turned the channel of one young life
Into paths of deepest woe,
And blackened one poor heart that once
Was as pure as the whitest snow.Only a glass of wine, alas!
It was most a fatal start,
For it turned to a demon a fair young
lad,
And broke a fond mother's heart;
It darkened a young wife's happiness,
And gave her but a pain and woe;
It brought her, instead of a loving caress,
A curse and a cruel blow.Only a glass of glowing wine!
'Tis a little thing, but, then,
It turned a bright and sunny home
Into a drunkard's den!
It blasted forever a precious life,
And sounded a funeral knell;
It placed the wreck in a drunkard's grave,
And led to a drunkard's hell.THE DRINK WORLD.

BY MISS EVA BOOTH.

The address delivered by Commissioner Eva Booth, of the Salvation Army, was an able one. Her subject was: "(a) The Drink World, (b) The Drink Work, (c) The Drink Woe." There is a depth of pathos in the speaking of this Salvation Army Officer, shown with marvellous effect when she recites some of her experiences with the people who have come under her observation as an army officer, that touches most hearts, and the audience yesterday was markedly affected by her address.

The drink world, Miss Booth said, had no limitations. It touched the highest and the lowest in society. It dwells amidst the gorgeous tapestries and the spacious halls of the rich, and finds its way down into the alleyways of the most destitute. Where has this habit, its origin? was asked. "It rests," said Miss Booth, "in that damnable argument that there is no harm in drinking in moderation." What follows is known to every true-hearted man or woman. Home, money, children, virtue, reputation, joy—all go over the bar of the saloonkeeper. "Drink is a dragon with a thirst for human blood." "Drink is a flame scorching and shrivelling everything it comes in contact with. It is not only one sin—it is all sin." Reciting some of her experiences with people who had been dragged down by the drink traffic, Miss Booth dramatically asked the question, "Have you ever looked into the world of drink?"

"In the second place," said the speaker, "we have drink's work set before us. It is gradual, insidious, winding its coils around its victim often before they know it. Deemed harmless at first, it eventually and certainly conquers. The first glass is the match that lights the fire and consumes its thousands every year." Speaking with that womanly eloquence that is one of the charms of her addresses, and inveighing against the argument of moderation, she said: "Can hell be heaven because hell in little drops be given?"

"Then," said the speaker, taking up the third division of her subject, "we have the drink woe." She asked: "Can any lips tell it? Can any pen write it? And yet it is at our doors." Here Miss Booth narrated some recent experiences when in the city of Halifax, telling of a flying visit to her of a woman who had once held a high social position, but today had parted with everything that was most precious in a woman's life. Her thought of the drink woe was further emphasized by depicting a scene in the Toronto Police Court, where a little tot of four years of age was called in to testify against the cruelty of her own mother.

The pathos with which she told the story, picturing the little one, with its golden ringlets, and telling how the mother had actually torn the hair from the child's head when maddened with drink, was too much for the feeling of the majority of the audience, who were deeply affected.

"The encouraging part of the story," said Miss Booth, "was that the little one was taken to the army nursery and there cared for. When the mother came out of gaol, and became a convert, and to-day father and mother and child are living happily together in the reunited home."

NERVES ALL SMASHED

Indigestion and Dyspepsia are the Arch Destroyers, but South American Nerve Pills are the Never-Failing Nerve Builder.

Mrs. Ellen Butler, 37 Collahie St., Toronto, suffered from indigestion in a severe form for several years, was unable to eat meat or vegetables, was threatened with nervous prostration as a result of chronic dyspepsia. After many remedies had been tried and failed, she began using the South American Nerve Pills. When she had taken three bottles, to use her own words, "I can eat anything set before me, and enjoy it without any bad after effects. I think it a wonderful remedy for dyspepsia and nervous prostration." Sold by W. W. Short.

DYSPEPSIA CURE

HOW SHE PLAYED WHIST.

(New York Commercial Advertiser.)

"It's very unkind of you to scold me for the way I played whist," she said.

"I am not scolding you," was his majestic reply.

"It wasn't my fault you know that you didn't have trumps when I expected you to," she continued.

"No, of course, it wasn't. It was my fault."

"No. I didn't say that. I did my very best. It gave me quite a headache, keeping the rule in my mind—don't trump your partner's ace, 'when in doubt take a trick,' 'get rid of your hearts,' 'left bower is always the knave of the opposite suit,' and—why, how queer you look, dear, don't I know them well?"

"Wonderfully! Can't understand how you came to make a mistake."

"But I didn't make a mistake," she protested.

"Well, what was the matter?"

"I know. But first promise you won't call me superstitious. Just before we played the rubber—please don't think I'm silly, dear—I counted my cards and—"

"And?"

"Can't you guess? I had thirteen."

A RIDICULOUS AND FALSE CLAIM.

As a rule, modern newspaper advertisers endeavor to make their statements clear and truthful; they know that an intelligent public—especially the women portion—quickly condemn untruths and deception.

Some advertisers, intending to soar high suddenly fall from the sublime to the ridiculous in their statements. Such errors are promptly detected by the class of people the advertisers would influence.

Imagine an advertiser of dyes for home dyeing, after giving a long list of the virtues possessed by his products, remarking, "They cleanse and dye at the same time." This statement made to tens of thousands of intelligent women is so contrary to truth and common sense, that the advertiser is, without loss of time condemned as a simpleton or deceiver.

Diamond Dyes, that standard home dyes of the world dare not make any such claim. In their valuable book on Home Dyeing (sent free to all who send for it) they specially mention that "all goods should be cleaned before they are dyed." A Solon, however, arises in the land and formulates a new doctrine by asserting that—Dyes "cleanse and dye at the same time." Soon we will hear of some new starch manufacturer making a claim that his starch will cleanse and stiffen at the same time!

No wonder that many of our women show temper and suffer disappointment when they make use of dyes that pretend to take out dirt and re-color at the one operation. No wonder that deceived women complain of muddy and dismal colors after using adulterated dyestuffs.

Let it be distinctly understood that the inventive genius of man has not yet devised a dye that will take out grease spots stains and dirt, and at the same time give a decent color. The Diamond Dyes—the world's popular home dyes—give the fullest and richest colors on all materials when the goods are clean. They are the only warranted dyes on the market and always do what is claimed for them. Do not allow the false claims of any manufacturer of common dyes to lead you into trouble and financial loss.
