OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

OTTAWA, 4th August.—The week has been given up very largely to the closing of Parliamentary business with a view to prorogation. Most of the estimates have been disposed of after long and arduous sittings, and there is now a reasonable probability that the session will be brought to a close on Monday or Tuesday next. There was nothing in the world to prevent prorogation two months ago. The session opened on the 16th March, and three months was ample time for a fair and full discussion of all measures and business brought before the House; but the distinctive feature of this session has been the assumption on the part of the Opposition that it is their duty to block any legislation which does not commend itself to their favour. It seems impossible for them to recognize the fact that the Liberals are in power, and that the Liberals have the right to carry out such measures of policy as they think best in the public interest. Acting on this notion the Conservatives have held Parliament together for a very long period, at great public expense and to no good purpose.

Looking back at the session now in its last hours, a great deal stands out in dark relief that is discreditable to the Conservatives. They began in an ugly spirit and kept it up, making the session one of the most acrimonious and disagreeable in the history of our Canadian Parliament. All notions of dignity have been cast to the winds, and the business of the House has been carried on very largely on the tacit assumption that the Ministers were a set of rascals and that those behind them were conniving at the rascality and sharing in the plunder. The Conservative newspapers persistently endeavoured to deceive the public by asserting that the trouble was occasioned by the refusal of Ministers to give information to the House, than which there could be nothing more absurd or misleading.

In striking contrast with the means warfare carried on by the Opposition has been the dignified patience of members of the Government. Very little was said or done by them in the way of retaliation, although at times the aggravation was extreme. To the unreasonable and imperious demands of the Conservatives for all sorts of information—which, of course, was merely asked for in order to delay business and annoy the Government—they made reply by bringing down wagon loads of returns. When plied with questions that were absurd and irrelevant they made every effort to give honest and straight-forward answers, although such efforts only led to fresh and more irritating demands. It would be difficult to present a picture which would adequately portray the situation of affairs in this regard at certain periods of the session, and it must be with a deep sense of relief that the overworked Ministers are now looking forward to at least a short period of relaxation.

From a political standpoint the Government emerges from the session with added strength. They have shown a statesmanlike appreciation of public needs in the remarkable period of prosperity and growth upon which the Dominion has entered. In the face of the bitter taunts of their opponents it has required more than ordinary courage to break beyond what they once regarded as the safety line in respect of public expenditure. Nothing would have suited the Conservatives better than to have had the Government exhibit a weak and niggardly spirit at this juncture, and with fine scorn they would have pointed to the incapacity of the Liberals and their failure to deal in a broad and generous way with public questions at this time. The success of the

Some of the cures effected by Dr. Chase's Ointment are more like miracles than anything else. The case recorded here was one of the worst ever brought to the attention of Toronto's best physicians, and when doctors gave up all hope of recovery Dr. Chase's Ointment was successful in producing a perfect cure.

Mr. James Scott, 136 Wright Ave., Toronto, states: "My boy Tom, aged ten, was for nearly three years afflicted with a bad form of Eczema of the scalp, which was very unsightly and resisted all kinds of remedies and doctor's treatment. His head was in a terrible state. We had to keep him from school, and at times his head would bleed, and the child would scream with agony. For two and a half years we battled with it in vain, but at last found a cure in Dr. Chase's Ointment. About five boxes were used. The original sores dried up, leaving the skin in its normal condition. To say it is a pleasure to testify to the wonderful merits of Dr. Chase's Ointment is putting it very mildly."

Administration may be measured by the ferocity of the abuse heaped upon them by the Conservatives, and Liberals all over the land may feel a peculiar sense of satisfaction in realizing that the men whom they elected to office have shown themselves capable of discharging the trust committed to their hands.

Of all the Ministers, Mr. Blair and Mr. Sifton were made the subjects of the fiercest attacks of the Opposition, and the New Brunswick friends of the Minister of Railways have probably felt more than pleased with the result. Mr. Blair had to bear the brunt of the ugliest blockade which the Conservatives set up during the session, and yet he more than held his own. Of course, he had a good and strong case. The extension of the Intercolonial to Montreal is a sore point with the Opposition because it is one of the best transactions ever carried out by any Minister of Railways in the history of the Dominion, and the more the Conservatives railed against it the better the bargain became. An analysis of all the objections and criticisms fails to reveal a single point established against the Government in that connection, and in their sweeping assertions as to what would follow upon the adoption of this line of railway policy the Opposition have been preparing a rod for their own backs. Time will show this to be the case.

The results of the past year's operation of the Intercolonial afford the most complete vindication of Mr. Blair's railway policy. It turns out that, after paying all the charges arising out of the extension to Montreal, the Minister has a surplus for the year ending 30th June last of $62,000, or double the sum of all the surpluses combined during the Conservative regime. This is really a splendid triumph. As recently as last week Sir Charles Tupper was making a speech in Toronto, and he declared with characteristic assurance that the result of the extension of the Intercolonial to Montreal would be to increase the annual deficits by $200,000. This has been the view taken by all the opponents of the measure. What will these gentlemen say to the people whom they have been misleading on the subject when, notwithstanding all the drawbacks incident to the inauguration of a large undertaking, Mr. Blair is able to show a large surplus for the first year's operation of the Intercolonial under the new conditions? No answer to the Opposition could be so effective as those definite results.

Sir Charles Tupper has left for England. He attended a political demonstration in Toronto on Monday last and delivered a speech of a thoroughly Tupperian character. It was full of boasts about his own marvellous achievements, and challenges to the Premier and all and sundry to show that the present Government had either kept one of its pledges or done a single thing for the country's good. Sir Charles began making these speeches immediately after the general election, and though he was answered a thousand times it would never cause him to modify his statements one whit. One cannot help but admire such consistent boldness and such absolute indifference to the facts. Even to Liberals Sir Charles never ceases to be entertaining, and all said and done, there are worse men in the Conservative party.

While the railway subsidies have been under discussion during the past week the Conservatives have shown how much at sixes and sevens they are upon this important question of policy. Sir Charles Tupper declared himself to be completely in favour of the subsidy system, while Mr. Clark Wallace, who poses as a Conservative leader, was most outspoken and sweeping in his opposition. Mr. Foster also had a good many things to say against railway subsidies, and a large majority of those who spoke on that side of the House expressed the conviction that these subsidies led to a great deal of corruption. Sir Wilfrid Laurier very properly pointed out that many of these gentlemen were in the House when much larger grants were asked from Parliament for railway purposes, and not one of them had raised his voice in objection thereto. It was only a corrupt thing for Liberals to grant railway subsidies. It would undoubtedly have given the Conservatives a great deal of satisfaction if the Government had refused all the applications that have been pressed upon them this year, and thereby checked the spirit of railway enterprise which is just now endeavouring to meet the general demand for increased transportation facilities.

The proceedings at the Huron election trial yesterday were enlivened by an altercation between Mr. Britton, the Liberal member for Kingston, and Mr. Sam Hughes, the pugnacious representative for North Victoria. Mr. Britton was cross-examining a witness and suffered a great deal of annoyance from the interjections made by Mr. Hughes, and one word leading another he implied that Mr. Hughes was a scoundrel. At this Mr. Hughes made a rush at his elderly antagonist, and but for the prompt interference of several members there would have been a hand-to-hand conflict. The matter blew over, and probably there will be no further trouble. The incident, however, brings to mind the fact that there have been several historic scraps with the presidents of Parliament, although we have never had any of the rough-and-tumble fights which have occurred in some of the Australian legislatures. A Port Hope Lady Undergoes a trying experience, from which she is at last freed by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mr. F. J. ARMSTRONG, one of Port Hope's best known citizens, speaks as follows:—"My wife has had a terrible time with her heart for the last fifteen months."

"The pains were intense, and she had a smothering feeling together with shortness of breath, weakness and general debility. Medicine seemed to do her no good, and we had about given up trying when she started to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They have toned her up wonderfully."

"She is stronger to-day than she has been for months, thanks to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I am sure there can be no better remedy from their remarkable effects in Mrs. Armstrong's case."

THE OUTLOOK.

The twelfth annual Educational Number of The Outlook has a group of articles on educational topics of decided timeliness and of equally decided general interest. The illustrations are numerous and excellent. Among the illustrated articles are: "American Education at the Paris Exposition," by the American Director of Education and Social Economy for the Exposition, Mr. Howard J. Rogers; an exceptionally scholarly and comprehensive paper on "The Educational Progress of the Year," by Professor Nicholas Murray Butler; portraits and sketches of three new college presidents—Faunce of Brown, Harris of Amherst, and Wheeler of the University of California; a well-written article by Arthur Reed Kimball on "Yale as a University," apropos of the choice of President Hadley and the approaching end of Yale's second century; another article by Hamilton W. Mabie in his "Famous Schools" series, on Edinburgh University; and one on "Vacation Schools and Playgrounds," by Seth T. Stewart, Associate Superintendent of Schools of New York. President Stanley Hall of Clark University writes with many practical criticisms and suggestions upon "The Line of Educational Advance." Mr. Charles B. Spahr continues his series on "America's Working People," with an article on the Pennsylvania coal-miners; there is a short story by the well-known Irish tale-teller, Seumas MacManus; and a charmingly illustrated article on "Pictures of Birds' Nests," by Mr. Ernest Ingersoll. The cover design of this Educational Number is from an artistic drawing by Mr. Harold Brown. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, New York City.)

A plan is on foot to form an elevator association in Manitoba or make arrangements similar to the one in force two or three years ago, but on a more thorough basis, to fix the price of wheat. The idea is to have an absolute price, ruled by a syndicate, for various points throughout the Province.

One of the cruellest remarks made by a musical auditor is reported from California. A vocalist was warbling, to her own great satisfaction, "Oh, would I were a bird!" when a rough miner shouted out, "Oh, would I were a gun!"
