The June number of The Delineator is called the early summer number and combines an immense amount of authoritative and applicable advice as to what is newest and beautiful in the world of Fashion-including special illustrations of Bridal Costumes-with a profusion of sparkling Literary features, Social, Household and Departmental hints annd suggestions and Fancy Word detail. The story, A Box of Oranges, by Anna Robeson Brown, recounts in sprightly fashion the exciting incidents attending the solution of an enigmatical gift. A graphic picture of Eastern conditions is presented in Marriage in the Orient, by Laura B. Starr. The origin and treatment of Cancer are lucidly discussed by Dr. Grace Peckham Marray in the second of four papers on The Great Scourges of Humanity. The concluding chapter in the development of a Boy, by Alice Meynell, is a child study of uncommon depth. In this number also is completed the series on the cultivation of the Voice by Eleanor Georgen. The sixth of the New Kindergarten Papers, Home Work and Play for June, by Sara Miller Kirby, will appeal to Natureloving instincts, as will also the instrucive sketch Wild-Flower Hunting. Michigan clubs are discussed in Club Women and Club Life, by Helen M. Winslow. A perfect Travelling Outfit, by Clare Bunce, is a particularly seasonable topic. The descriptions of Commencement Days in College News, by Carolyn Halsted, are filled with a delightful college atmosphere. Girl's Interests and Occupations, by Lafayette McLaws, is characterized by the usual zest and good humor. The puzzeling complications of A Slip Hunt make it a model entertainment. Of a more distinct Domestic character are the articles A Talk to Mothers, by Edna S. Witherspoon, and Frozen Noveltics, by Amelia Sulzbacher. The Departments Fancy Stiches and Embroideries, by Emma Haywood; Social Observances, by Mrs. Frank Learned; The Dressmaker, The Milliner, Crochetting, Knitting, The Latest Book, etc., etc., yield a rich grist of indispenable information.

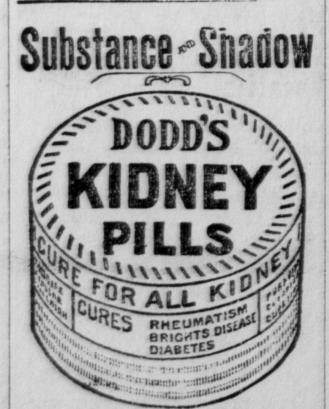

The Delineator may be ordered through the newsdealer or the local Butterick Pattern Agency, or may be obtained direct by addressing-The Delineator Publishing Co. of Toronto, Limited 33 Richmond Street West, Toronto, Ont. JUST A CURTAIN FIRE. It Was In a Girls' Boarding School and Did Complicated Damage. A fire in a skyscraper may be thr 1-

ing, but for dramatic episodes and unexpected complications a fire in a girls' boarding school surpasses it. The boarding school fire is usually what is known among insurance men as a curtain fire, but a curtain fire in a girls' school is more exciting and causes more casualties than an ordinary blaze anywhere

One evening last week two girls, who occupy a microscopic hall bedroom in a swell up town school, took the globes off the gas fixtures for hair curling purposes and left them off, because it was easier to do that than to put them on again. Then the girls raised the window a trifle in order to cool the room and dutifully sat down to write home letters. The inevitable happened, and when girl number one poised her pen in the air and glanced around the room in search of inspiration she saw the curtains in a blaze. She screamed. Girl number two looked around and echoed the scream. Then, with promptitude and discretion, both girls fainted. The screams had attracted the attention of the other girls, who rushed to the scene and then did various and sundry stunts, according to their several dispositions. One fainted, several wept, a few ran out of the house, and the rest shouted for the one man on the premises. When he arrived, things looked rather hopeless. Curtains and woodwork were blazing finely. The floor was littered with prostrate forms, and when three girls have fainted on the floor of a hall bedroom there isn't much space in the room for promenading. The man picked his way across the prostrate forms and ordered all the girls who were not in a dead faint to leave the room, but they didn't go until he lost his temper and spoke with a force which isn't common in boarding school circles. Then they fled: but, unluckily, there was an enemy in the rear. A vigorous and practical woman from Texas had been inspired to go after some water. Returning in mad haste with a large pitcherful of water borne triumphantly aloft, she collided with the retreating forces at the door. The pitcher struck the leader of the retreat squarely in the face and knocked out two of her front teeth, whereupon the injured girl made the fainting trio a quartet and the water carrier dropped her pitcher and went into violent hysterics. Hysteria, as boarding school teachers know to their sorrow, is contagious, and the one case touched off the crowd. By the time teachers arrived upon the scene the fire was out, but the survivors were in a bad way. It was necessary to put nine-tenths of the school to bed and order wholesale doses of bromide. Even now the girls insist that they haven't recovered from the shock sufficiently to do hard studying, and the victims of the water pitcher are both under the care of trained nurses. As for the man, he gave up his place the next day and confided to the cook that he was going to look for a job in a lunatic asylum, where his boarding school experience would be of value to him. -New York

The type is clear, and the covers might even be called "artistic" in the catholic sense of the term. The inferior kinds are indifferently printed "on gray paper with blunt type," and there are many degrees of excellence between the two extremes. All except one have illustrations ranging from the rudest of woodcuts to the smudgiest of "process" plates. Of course the artist selects the most sensational incidents for his pencil to adorn. The stabbing of the heroine's father by the villain disguised as the hero, the kidnaping of the heroine by Black Tom and his gang of gypsies at the instigation of her jealous rival, the horsewhipping of the villain by the hero in "faultless" evening dress-these and their like naturally present themselves as thoroughly suitable and congenial subjects. -Blackwood's Magazine.

TRAMP PROVES A HERO.

SAVES A WOMAN'S LIFE BY STOPPING RUNAWAY HORSE AT CHASM'S BRINK. TRENTON, May 19 .- William Martin, a holo, saved the life of the wife of Freeholder Dennison, of Windsor Township this morning by stopping a runaway

The Freeholder and his wife were preparing to visit Trenton, and while Mr. Dennison was locking up the house Mrs. Dennison climbed into the carriage and picked up the reins. The horse immediately took the bit in his teeth and dashed down the road at breakneck speed.

A quarter of a mile down the road a bridge was being repaired. The planks were up, and the bed of the stream twenty feet wide, yawned across the road. As new coat! I don't think it is the slightest she realized her great danger Mrs. Dennison became panic-stricken and screamed at the top of her voice. A STRANGE LAWSUIT AND A STRANGE CASE.

(Binghamton, N. Y., despatch to New York World.) A sait which Mrs Charles C. Ackley, of Sabinsville, Tioga country, has just begun to recover a portion of her late husband's estate reveals a story which reads more like fiction that the revelation of an episode in real life. In her complaint Mrs. Ackley admits that after marrying the late Charles C. Ackley she not only condoned in him the offense of openly falling in love with another woman, but actually of her own volition stepped aside and gave her rival the place which under the law she alone was entitled to fill. It is alleged by the defendants that she even did more than that. When it became obvious that her husband's happiness depended upon the birth of an heir the wife not only permitted him to marry another woman, but was actually present at the ceremony. Mrs. Ackley's maiden name was Jessie Hamblin, and she was married to Mr. Ackley in February, 1893. The ceremony took place in the office of Dr. Wm. Wey, and was performed by Justice of the Peace James H. Hardy. After marriage she and her husband lived in Elmira, but Mr. Ackley was frequently called to Sabinville. Apparently, as a result of these absences, Mrs. Ackley noticed that her husband's love for her was obviously on the wane. She soon discovered that the cause for this was Miss Mary Higgins. Without any scene, and apparently in a perfectly amicable way, Mrs. Ackley called her husbaud to account. He frankly admitted that he did not love her and that he did love Miss Higgins.

Mrs. Ackley faced this crisis in her domestic life with the utmost philosophy. She told her husband that she was willing to step aside and give Miss Higgins her place by his side. The defendants in the present lawsuit relate that Mrs. Akley was even present at the ceremony when her husband and Miss Higgins were

By his first wife Ackley had no children. By his second wife he had a son, whose interests, as well as his mother's are gravely involved in the issue of the pend-
