The things we do not understand, The mysteries here we cannot solve, But point us to the better land Where earth's deep shadows shall dissolve.

Till then we must be satisfied, Nor murmur at His chastening rod, His way will all things rectify, And bring us trusting back to God.

Then cease our troubled hearts to fear, Though oft the way seem dark and lone, His presence will the pathway cheer Till this life's pilgrimage is done.

Then we shall know as we are known, When we shall see Him on His throne. A. LAMONTE, Someville, Mass.

GROWLERS AND GROWLING.—An empty head and a big mouth are the qualifications for professional criticism. When a man's ideas are sufficiently numerous to hold themselves together without rattling, the world has peace and preachers have sunshine, but every fool must express himself. If you are to believe some people, the whole world is wrong and they are the only ones who know it.

SEVERE SALT RHEUM.

"Burdock Blood Bitters cured me of Salt Rheum 3 years ago, and I have had no return of it since. I was so bad with it I could not sleep. It only took two bottles of B. B. B. to effect a cure." Mrs. Welch, Greenbank, Ont.

A specialist in diseases of the eye and ear who has been a successful practitioner in Montreal, Friday performed an operation upon a young man named Thomas Stewart. One eye had been injured seven years ago, and was sightless. It was deemed wise to remove it, but by an inexplicable error the wrong eye was removed, leaving the patient perfectly blind.

ONLY A GLASS OF WINE.

Only a glass of sparkling wine, When the tempter's power held sway, But it led its victim down the path Of sin's most deadly way;

Only a glass of wine, alas! It was a most fatal start, For it turned to a demon a fair young lad And broke a fond mother's heart;

Only a glass of glowing wine! 'Tis a little thing, but then, It turned a bright and sunny home Into a drunkard's den!

WHY A TEETOTALER.

Edward W. Bok, editor of the "Ladies' Home Journal," gives the following among other reasons for having never tasted liquor:

Another thing which led me to make up my mind never to touch liquor was the damage which I saw wrought by it upon some of the finest minds with which it was ever my privilege to come into contact, and I concluded that what had resulted injuriously to others might prove so to me.

Then cease our troubled hearts to fear, Though oft the way seem dark and lone, His presence will the pathway cheer Till this life's pilgrimage is done.

AN INTERVIEW WITH CONSCIENCE.

Well, justice was not thwarted this time. I declare, I never read of a more hardened criminal." So soliloquized Banker Goodman, as reclining in his easy chair in his cosy library, he had finished reading the account of the execution of Harry Hayward, and with the paper still held in the hand which had dropped to his side, he reviewed the details of the awful tragedy.

While lost in reverie he was startled by the question, "And how much better are you?" So plainly did the words sound in his ears that he assumed an upright posture and glanced around expecting to see some intruder. Finding himself alone, he sank back to his comfortable chair, realizing it was only that inward monitor, called conscience, that had spoken.

"Of course he was." "Did he kill anyone?" "Well, not personally, but as really by proxy, for Blixt was merely his tool and carried out his plan."

"Yes, you know he has; and would be recreant to his name, his church and his God, if he failed to apply such a lesson to these times, just as Isaiah did to his time. But the point he made is what I want to revive, of the five woes against intemperance, only two were against the drinker and the other three against—"

"But he made it almost a political sermon and I don't like politics in the pulpit." "Well, Isaiah preached that way occasionally."

"Neither does he, but true to his convictions and the resolutions of his church, he protests against it at the ballot box as well as abstains from it personally. Do you?" "But there are other important questions that must not be ignored. There's the tariff, and the finance and—" will not help close the trap, why should you not be willing to help supply the boys. She and others like her have no voice in the matter. They can only weep and suffer. So you must bear the blood guiltiness."

"There you come again, with you murder charge, I declare—"

"I wish you would declare you would be free from it. But you only try to shirk your share of the responsibility and go on in your sin, but your Blixt the saloon keeper, will not suffer for his crime without testifying to your share in the guilt. He will turn states evidence and show that he could not have carried on the legalized liquor traffic without your help in voting him the license, so like Nathan of old, I am doing my duty by saying, 'Thou art the man,' although like David you are far from the scene of murder, and have no direct hand in it, you are as truly 'guilty,' and unless you repent, as he did, you will share the murderer's fate."

"Will you never give me any rest? Here's another evening spoiled by your eternal upbraiding. Can't I ever silence you eternal—"

"Yes, you can, but not in this way. Cease to do evil, learn to do well, and I will give you peace instead of unrest. Will you do it?"

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN.

Most a Physical Collapse. But Completely restored by South American Nerve. Mrs. Geo. F. Quackenbush, of 340 Victoria street, Toronto, was gradually breaking down under an attack of extreme nervous prostration. Her appetite had left her; she suffered from insomnia. Here are her own words as she wrote them: "I took doctor's advice, but received no benefit. I commenced using South American Nerve, and three bottles worked a marvellous change in me. My appetite came back, I sleep soundly, and my general health is as perfect as ever it was. It is a pleasure to recommend so worthy a remedy." Sold at Short's Drug Store.

BOY JOKER POSED AS BRIDE ELECT.

BEARDESS YOUTH IN SKIRTS IMPOSED ON MR. REED.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., April 25.—William Reed, a farmer, of Villa Park, near Spring Lake, who owns many acres of the Manasquan road, is in search of a wife. He has been corresponding with what he supposed to be a young girl at Long Beach, and last night the practical jokers who had been conducting the affair sprung the trap.

Through a previous arrangement Reed met the supposed young woman with a carriage at the Manasquan Station. The "girl" wore a brown dress and carried a gripsack. Reed introduced her to several friends as his prospective bride. Together they drove to the farmer's home where an elaborate supper had been prepared.

Shortly afterward a hundred or more persons appeared in front of the Reed house, forced an entrance and devoured all the delicacies which Reed had purchased especially for the bridal occasion. The "bride to be" rode away on a bicycle in the confusion. "Her" countenance was readily recognized as that of a beardless youth who holds a position with a local insurance company.

Reed was seen this afternoon and vows he will use a shot gun if another invasion of his house is attempted under similar circumstances. He still believes that the person he corresponded with is a young woman and is preparing a statement of his courtship up to date.

MAN'S WOMAN AND WOMAN'S WOMAN.

"Is there any difference between a man's woman and a woman's woman; and if so, what?" was the question discussed yesterday by the Eclectic Club meeting in Delmonico's. The verdict was that there is, but should not be. What the difference is was told in papers and discussion which put the members at once in the class of wits.

Mrs. Richard A. Stearns had the task set before her of defining the man's woman. "I am to depict," she began, "that power behind the throne which, through the ages, has ruled the world—the man's woman. Eve was the first. Lacking our modern enhancements of dress, she managed still to keep for herself the whole attention of the only man present. Impelled by the feminine instinct to minister to his comfort, she gave him something to eat, and established a precedent which has been followed ever since by wise women.

"She might have gone on holding him indefinitely if she had not thirsted for knowledge—that element so fatal to the man's woman. Curiosity is the motive that has been ascribed to her by the unthinking, but it was really a desire for wider knowledge. The dice far niente of the Garden of Eden palled on her restless spirit; the topics of conversation were naturally limited, and she tired of her environment—perhaps of the one man.

"That man's taste in women has broadened is shown by what they require now. They want a woman, not the wholly feminine type as portrayed in 'Sweet Alice,' who 'wept with delight when he gave her a smile.' Nowadays it is the man who feels a proper gratitude for women's smiles.

"The nineteenth century man's woman must have intuition. She must show a deep sense of man's superiority—a harmless deception. She must possess charm, which David Dudley Field described as the ability to place yourself and others at the best. Intelligence she should have, but not too much of it; not enough to overshadow man's.

RECIPE FOR MAN'S WOMAN.

"Possibly the following recipe will briefly epitomize the man's woman: Wit, mildly flavored with wisdom; tact, imagination and sympathy in equal quantities; the essence of cheerfulness used freely; intelligence, according to taste; admiration for man alibitum; flavor sparingly with common sense; add a flash of coquetry; mix well with milk of human kindness; mould into graceful shape and serve with sauce piquante."

"If woman could realize that her mission in the world is very different from man's," was the verdict of Mrs. Patterson, who undertook to define the woman's woman, "there would be much less jealousy and discontent. Woman is more subtle, more fine than man, her feelings are better developed. She is more keen to see life's deeper meaning."

"When a woman wants to please the men," Mrs. Russell Leeds said, "she keeps her common sense in the background. It does not pay to be substantial for men."

"The typical opposite is the woman who is always fighting her sex's battles, for suffrage or something. That surely isn't attractive to men." Mrs. George Winkler said.

"That's often because they don't want to be asked embarrassing questions about what they don't know," Mrs. Joseph Bradley Reed, the president, retorted.

Mrs. George Finck kindly explained for the men that when they come home after a day of business they like to take up lighter subjects.

"Well, I notice that the men I know are not too tired to stop at a cafe on the way up town and spend two hours discussing over long cold drinks the timely topics they are too tired to discuss with us. And then they come home and say, 'Little girl, what games have you played with your dolls to-day?'"

"And what woman, when she's told all she has done, finds out in return anything her husband has been up to?" came a weary wail from a corner.

"Men don't believe in knowledge for women," was Mrs. Clarence Kip's bright way of settling the subject. "According to Adam apple sauce was the source of all evil."
