PROPHETIC VISION OF THE FIRST NAPOLEON.

The following copy of a letter written by Napoleon I to the "Kubluscher," a Dantzig Jew, during the famous campaign of 1812...

Who could have deemed it possible that in the year of grace 1812 there should still exist animosity against the Jews?

Were I the ruler of the world the Jews would have their freedom. Yes, I confess I like your nation.

Already too many nations who have been guilty of the grossest cruelty to the Jews, have been justly punished for their misdeeds...

It has been publicly alleged that I, speaking of the Jews, have termed them the modern knights of the road.

(Signed) NAPOLEON. Kovno, 18th May, 1812

A TRUE STATEMENT.

By Foreman White, of the Hamilton Screw Works

HAMILTON, March 6.—If a vote of the people were to be taken to ascertain which is the most popular medicine on the market, Dodd's Kidney Pills would lead by a large majority.

One of the latest cures by that grand remedy is that of foreman T. H. White, of the Screw Works, who testifies that he was cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills of Kidney Disease of eight years standing...

Mr. White says: "One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills relieved me, four boxes cured me. Publish this statement if you wish. It is true in every particular."

HIGH LIGHTS.

All mankind does not love a lover; the postman frequently hates him.

In case of war some kind-hearted man could help the country by getting up a dialect regiment.

Robins are all right; but spring isn't really here until your neighbor hangs her Canary out of doors.

Failure is sometimes more profitable than success, because we don't waste any time bragging about it.

A woman is profoundly interested in man when she remembers how many lumps of sugar he takes in his coffee.

EVERY SPRING.

Miss Maggie Barnes, Lunenburg, N. S., writes: "I have taken B. E. B. every spring now for some years, to purify my blood and keep my system in good order, and can honestly say I do not know of its equal anywhere."

SHE CAUGHT ON.

Jopkins had read somewhere that if a woman got hold of a newspaper with a clipping cut out of it, she would never rest until she had procured a complete paper and read the missing item.

So that night, when he went home from the office, there ostentatiously protruded from his coat pocket the day's paper, from which he had neatly cut a paragraph referring to the rings of Jupiter, or some such matter.

He threw the paper to one side in a careless way, and after supper he noted with an unholy glee that Mrs. Jopkins had secured it, and was running her eye over the bargain ads, and working away, after the manner of her sex, through the personals, marriage notices, and back to the telegraphic despatches.

Presently Jopkins observed a sudden and suspicious frown overcast her face.

"My dear," said Mrs. Jopkins, laying the paper gently aside. "I'm going to run over to Mrs. Hopkins a minute. I won't be gone long."

She went over to the opposite neighbor's and while she was gone Jopkins had lots of fun.

"Best joke I ever got off," he said to himself. "Won't she be sold when I tell her!"

Mrs. Jopkins remained upstairs about twenty minutes, and when she came down Jopkins felt his knees shake when he looked into her eyes.

"Wh—where are you going?" he asked. "Where am I going?" said his wife. "You want to know where I am going, you deceitful, disreputable, underhanded, depraved, villainous, brutal, wicked, unprincipled monster! I'm going home to my father."

"Wh—what's the matter?" said Jopkins. "Look at that!" said Mrs. Jopkins, thrusting the paper in his face. "Cut it out to hide it from me, didn't you? To think that I should ever have married such a ruffian!"

Jopkins looked where her finger pointed and read: "After the performance of 'The Devil's Auction' last night quite a recherche little supper was given to the leading lady actresses by a few of their admirers. A prominent merchant, whose name we withhold, is said to have cut up some rather high jinks on the occasion. We wonder if his estimable and charming wife knew of his whereabouts?"

A cold shiver ran over Jopkins. He was innocent, but he had neglected to read the other side of the clipping when he cut it out. He began to explain and the milkman says he was still at it when he called with his regular morning supply of chemicals.

As Mrs. Jopkins was seen a week later wearing an elegant new silk dress, to say nothing of a "dream of a bonnet," it is presumed that the matter was satisfactorily arranged.

THE PRINCE OF WALES AND HIS CHARITY SCHEME.

LONDON, March 4.—The Prince of Wales went to Paris this week and visited the exposition grounds. He proceeds to Cannes on Sunday. The Prince's wonderful scheme, known as the League of Mercy, in connection with which a new order has been established for those who collect and promote the collection of subscriptions for the Prince of Wales hospital fund, five years' work being required for admission to the order, is severely criticized in several quarters.

MORAL OF A SCARE.

I have not the least doubt that the celluloid comb is as bad as they say. For that, and other reasons, I seldom, if ever, wear a celluloid comb myself.

But I should like to point out that the human hair is also inflammable. Apply a lighted candle to it, and it will burn freely. Yet there are many people still going about with this dangerous material on their heads.

This involves a moral of a slightly different order—that, so long as you don't put your head in the fire, or the gas, or a candle, you may possibly get along all right; but if you are in the habit of putting your head in any of these places, you should not wear a celluloid comb, and you should shave your skull completely, and wear a tight-fitting asbestos wig.

No; these scare people really go rather too far sometimes.—To-day.

STOWAWAYS IN STYLE.

Two small stowaways, who came before the Melbourne city court for stealing passages from West Australia by the S. S. Barocco, reversed the usual tactics of their class.

Instead of spending a week squatting in several inches of bilge water and subsisting on tinned meats broached from a convenient case, they strolled into the saloon, took possession of an unoccupied cabin, and lived on the fat of the land—or, rather, the sea—until the fatal hour when tickets were collected.

At the moment the officer demanded the ticket one of the youngsters was in the act of ordering a steward to bring him an extra allowance of beef tea, while the other was borrowing a cigar from a genial passenger. The bench looked on the lads with a lenient eye, and find each $5, in default three days' imprisonment.—British Australasian.

If your dealer has ever tried them himself he will certainly recommend Magnetic Dyes for home use.

SOME CLOSE CALLS.

INSTANCES OF NARROW ESCAPES TOLD BY RAILWAY MEN.

A Locomotive's Remarkable Jump—The Sleeping Car Passenger on a Rough Road—Trains That Left the Track and Returned Running at Full Speed.

There is no question that well authenticated cases are on record where disastrous wrecks of railroad trains have been averted by almost seeming miracles.

While none of the local railroad men knows of any locomotives that are as good jumpers as Whites' or that do the bounding jockey act, some of them know of miraculous and hairbreadth escapes.

"The road was about the roughest at that time I had ever ridden over. There were only a few passengers on the train. Swift and I were in the forward coach talking to the conductor when the solitary sleeping car passenger came staggering in and said: 'Mr. Conductor, your road is so rough I can't sleep in my berth. I have been pitched out of my berth twice in the last quarter of an hour. There must be something the matter.'

"The conductor picked up his lantern and said, 'Come on, and I'll go back with you and see what's wrong.' Swift and I sat where we were talking, and very soon we saw that the bellcord was being very violently pulled and the engineer was whistling for brakes.

"The conductor and trainmen were grouped about the sleeper with their lanterns, and we soon found out that the sleeper had left the track and had been running over the ties for how far we never knew. The night was pitch dark and it was raining very hard. It took the men at least three hours to get the sleeper on the rails again.

"I remember of a disastrous wreck being almost miraculously averted on the Memphis and Little Rock road along about 1888. A passenger train was traveling at a high rate of speed when the engine threw a piece of rail about three feet long out of the track.

"I remember two instances when the lives of engineers and firemen were saved by a seeming intervention of Providence. A number of years ago a new trestle was being put in, and false works had been erected to permit of the temporary passage of trains.

"The other case I know of is that of a train running at a good speed when the engine ran into a large rock that had fallen on the track just at the mouth of a tunnel.

"When I was a sleeping car conductor on the Old Bee line, about 80 years ago, the train was late, and we were going along at a pretty lively gait. We were within about five miles of Indianapolis when the engine and four cars jumped the track, and we thought there would be a smash up, but before the train could be stopped every wheel was again on the rails without the least damage being done to any part of the train or any of the passengers, barring the freight we all had."
