Permanent Cure of Chronic Constipation.

Perhaps you've suffered with constipation for years, tried all the pills and purgatives you ever heard of or read of, without getting any more relief than the one dose of the medicine afforded.

Then you were left worse than before, bowels bound harder than ever, the constipation aggravated instead of cured. All the miseries of constipation—Headache, Sick Stomach, Biliousness, Pimples, Eruptions, Blood Humors, Blotches, Piles, and a thousand and one other ills crowded back on you again with redoubled severity.

Wouldn't you consider it a blessing to be cured of your constipation so that it would stay cured? So that a repetition of all the suffering you have endured would never come again? Burdock Blood Bitters can cure you—cure so that the cure will be permanent.

That's where it differs from all other remedies. It makes a thorough renovation of the whole intestinal tract, tones the bowel wall, acts on the liver and stomach, and causes all the digestive and secretory organs to work harmoniously and perform their functions properly and perfectly that constipation, with all its attendant sickness, suffering and ill health, become a thing of the past.

Miss Arabella Jolie, living at 99 Carrière Street, Montreal, Que., bears out all we say in regard to the efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in curing constipation permanently. This is her statement:

"For over a year I suffered a great deal from persistent constipation and could only get temporary relief from the various remedies I tried until I started using Burdock Blood Bitters. I am thankful to say that this remedy has completely and permanently cured me and I have had no return of the constipation."

BUCTOUCHE NOTES.

BUCTOUCHE, Mar. 9.—At a large meeting of the Agricultural Society and of the Farmers' and Dairyman Association held in the Farmers' hall Monday evening the following gentlemen were appointed as delegates to the farmers meeting in Fredericton:—Mr. Michael McLaughlin, Mr. Henri Berthe, Mr. Joseph Michaud.

Rev. Father Michaud announced last Sunday in his church that the dedication of his new church and the blessing of a chime of bells will take place on the 9th day of August. Right Rev. Bishop Blais, of Rimouski, and a class mate of the Rev. pastor will preside at the office. Already three or four high dignitaries of the church have expressed their intention to be present. The fete will be made the occasion of an immense gathering of prominent men of Canada who seem to be anxious to visit the Acadian population in one of the most important localities of the old Pays D'Evangeline. It is even rumored that Sir W. Laurier and some of his friends will take advantage of this opportunity to meet his many cousins down by the sea.

The steam saw mill of Mr. McLaughlin started yesterday. The object is to give employment to the people who are idle during the winter.

The roller mills of Buctouche give entire satisfaction to our farmers. As a proof your correspondent may say that last week he counted, in one day, forty-five grists of wheat in front of Mr. McLaughlin's combined factory; and went home much pleased with the result. Good yield and first class article.

THE DEATH BADGE.

Is Spared to Many a Home, Because Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart Never Fails to Cure Heart Disease—Relief in 20 Minutes.

The pall of death has hovered over many a diseased heart, looking for the last flicker of the candle, and Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart has stepped between the patient and the grim hand, and nursed the sufferer back to perfect and permanent health. Thos. Petrie, of Aylmer, Que., had heart disease for five years, was unable to work. The doctors gave him up to die many a time. Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart gave him relief in thirty minutes, and four bottles cured him. Sold at Short's Drug Store.

Elizabeth Cromwell.

Cromwell legends are so ubiquitous in England that it is a real relief to lay one's hand upon a bit of solid fact relating either to the protector or his family. Elizabeth, the second and favorite daughter of Cromwell, married John Claypole of Northborough, and appears to have spent a considerable portion of her 12 years of wedded life in his substantial fourteenth century house. Carlyle asserts Elizabeth Claypole to have been "a graceful, brave and amiable woman," and of her home that it is "now ruined—patched into a farmhouse."

The second statement is not characterized by his usual accuracy, and the first probably needs some modification, for Elizabeth Claypole is credited with some turning of her head over her father's elevation, and at a wedding feast is reported to have exclaimed, when asked why the wives of the major generals were absent, "I'll warrant you, washing their dishes at home, as they used to do." Not a particularly "amiable" sentence that.

Cromwell seems to have had some insight of her little weakness. "Tell her," he wrote once, "to take heed of a departing heart and of being cozened with worldly vanities and worldly company, which, I doubt, she is too subject to." It is agreed by most authorities that John Claypole himself was little enough of a Puritan, but let it stand to his credit that, after Oliver died, he provided a haven for his widow for the rest of her life in this manner house.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Barbers on the Ocean.

One of the most important persons on board a well equipped ocean liner is the barber. If he is gifted with a good business instinct, he is in a position to make a good deal of money.

To the average man shaving while at sea is a difficult and hazardous operation. He therefore calls into requisition the services of the ship's barber, a man who by long training is qualified to wield the razor with skill and safety, no matter how much the vessel rolls or pitches.

He is always one of the most heavily "tipped" officials on the ship. If the ship travels on a route with interesting ports of call, the ship's barber makes it his business to lay in a stock of native knickknacks and curios of all kinds.

The inexperienced traveler is naturally a little suspicious of the native peddlers who swarm on board with their wares directly the ship is at anchor. He prefers to purchase his mementos of foreign travel of the barber, who, having bought his stock at wholesale rates, is able to retail the various articles to passengers at prices little if at all higher than those charged by the native tradesman.—Exchange.

Goldsmith's Actor.

Lord Nugent was one evening very eloquent to Goldsmith in praise of M. (a bad actor). "But, my lord," said Goldsmith, "you must allow he treads the stage very ill—he waddles." "Waddles?" said Lord Nugent. "Yes, he waddles like a goose. Why, you know we call him Goose M." "Well, and then, you know, when he endeavors to express strong passion he bellows." "Bellows?" said Lord Nugent. "To be sure he does—bellows like a bull. Why, we call him Bull M." "Well, then," continued Goldsmith, pursuing his triumph, "his voice breaks and he croaks." "Croaks?" said Lord Nugent. "Why, the fellow croaks like a frog. We call him Frog M. But M. is a good actor."

"Why, yes," said Goldsmith, "barring the goose, and the bull, and the frog, and a few other things I could mention, and not wishing to speak ill of my neighbors, I will allow M. is a good actor."—"Memoirs of the Earl of Nugent."

The Sea Gull and the Fisherman.

In the fishing village of Auchmithie (the Musselcraig of Scott's "Antiquary") you may frequently witness sea gulls flying into the houses of the fishermen and partaking of food from their hands. One of these sea birds was in the habit of staying in a fisherman's house all the year round except at the breeding season, when it left. Quite recently, while the gull was away, the fisherman removed his home from Auchmithie to Arrochar (the Fairport of Scott's "Antiquary"), distant some 8½ miles from the former place, taking up his residence in South street of Arrochar. The fisherman never expected to see his old friend the gull again. It was therefore much to his astonishment that he beheld a fortnight later the sea bird come walking into his new residence with steady steps to resume his old familiarities and household ways with his housekeeper.—London Lady.

The Better Drawer.

"Your money or your life!" cried the robber.

"Ha, ha!" laughed the artist, and drew a pistol. The artist had no money, and, according to the critics, not much life, but that was not why he laughed. He laughed because he belonged to the school which draws rapidly and boldly rather than the school which draws laboriously, with great attention to detail.—Detroit Journal.

London Landlords.

There is perhaps no tenant who is so completely at the mercy of his landlord as the occupier of a house in London which belongs to one of the great ground landlords. He is an absolute prisoner within the four corners of his lease. The slightest deviation is accompanied with pains and penalties, but, on the other hand, the landlord reserves all kinds of privileges to himself.

Very little furniture is used in the bedrooms of Turkish houses. Rarely is a chair seen in any of them. A few mats adorn the room, and the bed is stretched on the floor.

COLD CURE

PORTLAND, MAINE.

FEBRUARY, 1899.—A gloom has been cast over a large circle of friends by the very sad and very sudden death of John Montgomery. Few had more friends, at least few had friends more true, for he was one who to know was to respect.

Mr. Montgomery was born in Stornaway, Lewis, Scotland, in 1871, he moved with his parents to Canada when but a child and made his home at Milan, Quebec. Showing an ambition for an education beyond that obtainable in the public schools, he was aided by the Rev. Hugh Lamont to a course in higher mathematics and a preparatory course in Greek and Latin.

Coming to Portland in 1890, he became an employee on the Grand Trunk Railway and was in time promoted to the position of Car Inspector, and it was in the performance of his duty, as such, that he met his death on Saturday, Feb. 4th. He was examining a car and had just marked a defective wheel, when on stepping backward from beneath he came in contact with another car moving down and had both legs severed between the knees and body. He was carried into a car shed, the ambulance sent for and a doctor summoned. He was then taken to the Maine General Hospital, ether was administered and he never awakened, but as the day grew near its close and the sun slowly but surely sank behind the purple hills, so John sank into the chill arms of death, and so shall he, we believe, rise in the splendour of a glorious resurrection.

He had been quite conscious until the narcotic was administered, and by his words, showed his kindness, his thoughtfulness, his filial love more truly than pen can paint them, for his last words were of his aged parents and nothing could be more pathetic than his words, "This will kill Mother." No thought of himself, no fears apparently as to Eternity, ah, no! Jesus was surely there and "Jesus can make a dying bed seem soft as downy pillows," but his one agonizing thought seemed, "Who will take care of Mother." Faithful in life, faithful in death, and however poignant the grief may be, however undying the regret, there may ever come to that Mother the sweet thought of a faithful boy waiting just over there.

His funeral took place on the following Tuesday and was very largely attended. Rev. Mr. Wright of St. Lawrence Church officiating. The flowers were very beautiful, "Star and Gates Ajar," from Grand Trunk Railway, Star from the Orange Lodge, of which he was a very highly respected member, and several beautiful pieces from friends. He leaves a father and mother both aged, an aunt, Miss McKenzie, and an affianced bride Miss Maggie Callender, a very highly respected young lady of New Brunswick, but who has for several years made her home in Portland. To each of these we offer our sincere, our heartfelt sympathy, we realize that they have lost one who can never be replaced but may it cause them to draw nearer to that friend that sticketh closer than a brother and remembering the words, "Whom he loveth he chasteneth," look upward, press onward—Life is short at best, a few short years at most and all will be over, severed here, united there, aye, united through a blessed eternity.

The International Congress of the Catholic Order of Foresters will meet in Burlington, Vt., on June 6, the session to continue for three days.
