

THE LAST WEEK For Bargains.

We call the attention of the public that we are going to stay here for only

ONE WEEK MORE.

Everyone who is interested in the economical question which has been lately resolved by a large majority—"BUY WHEN YOU GET THE BARGAIN," must come at once and purchase before our stock is cleared. We are determined to sell our entire stock even if the reduction should be too considerable.

FOR TESTING PUPILS.

ERGOGRAF, TO INDICATE ABILITIES OF CHILDREN.

CHICAGO, Ill., Mar. 11.—Tests psychological in their nature are being made in the public schools here for the purpose of determining the comparative ability of the younger pupils to stand the fatigues of study.

These tests have for their ultimate object the reduction of the ordinary common school or public school education to a scientific basis, and are made through the medium of the ergograph, an invention of Professor A. Mosso, of Italy, which has never been tried, it is understood, in this country before.

The experiments are under the direction of Professor Frederick W. Smedley, lecturer on Pedagogy at the University of Chicago, and Mr. Victor Campbell the principal of the Brighton evening school. As not more than one hundred persons have been examined, while it is the intention to experiment with fully one thousand, it is too early to speak of results. Both Professor Smedley and Mr. Campbell, argue that if a child is backward in his studies there is some cause for it that the instructor should determine and for which he should find a remedy.

The ergograph consists of two main parts one of which is a cylinder, revolved by means of clockwork, about which a paper string is pasted, on which the records are made. The working portion of the second part is a small sliding carriage to which is attached a stylographic pen, the point of which rests upon the paper covered cylinder. To one end of this carriage is attached a weight and to the other a cord made of twisted wire. The arm of the child to be examined is strapped into a rest—that has no connection with the ergograph, however—so that it is possible to move only the fingers. The second finger is then hooked into a loop in the end of the wire cord spoken of, and the pupil is required to work the finger back and forth with a metronome, which is a contrivance for marking time.

This moves the carriage and the pen attached back and forth, and on the paper of the cylinder, which has been set into a barely perceptible motion, the pen records an unbroken line that weaves from side to side on the paper, forming an outline something like the teeth of the saw.

Naturally as the finger of the person weakens from fatigue, the distance he is able to pull the carriage forward grows shorter and shorter, until he cannot move it at all. Corresponding by the teeth of the saw made by the pen grow shorter until the jagged line becomes almost perfectly straight.

The physiological principle upon which the operation of the ergograph is based is that one set of muscles is an index to the general condition of the body. It is agreed that in the majority of cases there is a physical cause for the bad standing of a child at school. If he grows thin and sallow it is probable he is not cared for properly and that some tonic or physical remedy is necessary. Possibly the cause of the failing health of a child is overwork.

This does not necessarily cause a breaking down, but it certainly proves a menace to health. The stupid boy or girl in school is, no doubt, crowded with work, and derives no benefit whatever from any of his studies. It is for the purpose of combining physical and mental training that these tests have been inaugurated in the public schools of Chicago, under the auspices of the board of Education.

As to the test of the ergograph, as these may be called, recorded on the paper indicates the nervous condition of the pupil, and the length of time the child can continue pulling the carriage with his finger is an index to his physical condition.

From this record the length of time the child can work to advantage, and the period of fatigue, and the period when the child is at its best mentally, can be learned. When these are found out the teacher is in a position to instruct the pupil to the best possible advantage.

In addition to the ergograph record, the height, weight and lung capacity of each pupil was noted.

A Haunted House.

"The haunted house in this case," said the old college man, "was occupied by a very estimable and intelligent gentleman. He did not believe in ghosts, but two nights had made him look old and careworn, and there were certainly loud, strange and startling noises in his attic. They would continue right up to the time that some one entered the haunted room, but the opening of the door was the signal for a most oppressive silence.

"Half a dozen of us college fellows asked permission to investigate, and it was gladly granted. We waited till we heard the noise, and I assure you that there was plenty of it. It continued until we had crept up stairs, but ceased when we entered the attic. We waited there without result till big Hicks of the football team, carried out a plan. We closed the slide to the dark lantern, slammed the door noisily, as though leaving, and then settled down to wait. Presently the noise began. We flashed the light in its direction, and there was a jug rolling back and forth rapidly, the handle striking the floor with a loud thud.

"Must be spirits in that jug," laughed big Hicks, but his laugh was a tremolo. 'We'll see,' and he let go with one of his famous kicks that shattered the uncanny vessel. Then every fellow let out a yell and jumped as though trying to knock a hole in the roof. A rat had crawled into the jug, and had been frantically trying to get out."—Detroit Free Press.

The Platform Woman.

"The platform woman never has been a credit to, but ever a blot upon, American womanhood. I make this emphatic statement from a personal knowledge of the homes which these women leave behind when they go to their meetings," writes Edward Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal.

"I have seen the rooms of their homes left in wild disorder; I have seen their servants sitting in idleness with work on every hand to do; I have seen the children neglected and left to their own devices; I have heard husbands speak in derision of the motives of their wives. No woman in a happy American home can ever afford to listen to these parasites of her sex.

"Fortunately, the platform woman's influence is steadily on the wane. She was never a power. She was never even picturesque. Her worst injury was wrought upon certain weak women who for the time she deluded. But even with them she was soon regarded with wonder rather than with interest; with suspicion rather than with confidence. The disappearance of the platform woman is a case of a blot being blotted out."

Successive Steps In Success.

The ambitious amateur went to see the experienced theatrical manager. "I want to be a star actress," she said. "What do you advise me to do?" "H'm—have you ever had an affair of the heart?" he asked. "Well," she smiled, "two or three young fellows are breaking their hearts about me." "That won't quite do. Go and get your own heart broken," he said, "and then come again."

She had heard something like this before, and she went away with her chin in the air.

A year later, however, she returned. "Well," she said, choking down a sob, "I have come back to you—heart-broken. I married one of those young men. He treated me shamefully and has deserted me!" "Ah, that is something like," said the manager, rubbing his hands together. "We are getting on. Only one thing more is necessary, my dear young woman—get your divorce, and then we shall want you."

Landmarks.

Every town has a liar or two, a smart Aleck, some pretty girls, more loafers than it needs, a woman or two that tattles, an old fogey that the town would be better off without, men who stand on the street corners and make remarks about the women, a man who laughs an idiotic laugh every time he says anything, scores of men with the caboose of their trousers worn smooth as glass and men who can tell you about the weather and how to run other people's business, but who have made a dismal failure of their own.—Northport News.

Wanted Something Quicker.

Some few years ago I issued a policy on the life of a man who was far from being a model husband. I called for the premium every week and rarely got it without a grumble from the wife. The last time I called she said:

"I ain't going to pay you any more. There's Mrs. Smith only had her old man in M.'s society three months, and he's dead and she's got the money. I'm going to put my old man in that, so you needn't call again."—Liverpool Mercury.

The Time It Worked.

Little Johnny always wanted to sleep in the morning, and finally Papa McSwatters wondered how he would ever get the boy up betimes. At last he struck upon the following:

"Johnny, the furnace fire is all fixed, and the ashes have been carried out, and the leaves raked. Breakfast is almost over and only three pancakes left."

Johnny forgot his ablutions in his hurry.

An Antique Weapon.

"You are an iceberg!" exclaimed her elderly but well preserved adorer, pale with anger and mortification. "A dozen Cupids, with a hundred arrows each, could never find a vulnerable place in your flinty heart!"

"Not if they used an old bean to shoot with, Mr. Wellap," coldly replied the young and beautiful Miss Flyppe.—Chicago Tribune.

TO KILL MCKINLEY.

MONTREAL, March 13.—Frank Muller, German, an old United States soldier, was arrested here to-day, charged with threatening to kill President McKinley. Muller has been here for some time. Some time ago he wrote President Angell of the University of Michigan that he was going to Washington and if he could not slay anyone else, he intended to kill President McKinley. Angell sent the letter on to Washington, and the result was that Consul General Bittinger received instructions from Washington to look into the case. He did so, and Muller was arrested this afternoon. The man is crazy. He says McKinley is antagonistic to the German element. He also wants the Canadian government to compel the United States Government to take back the pension they are paying him and send him back to Germany.

A PHRENOLOGIST SPEAKS.

Prof. J. W. Crouter writes from Penetanguishene: "I was troubled with palpitation of the heart which became very severe. Hearing of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills I determined to try them, and after taking them for about a week I was cured."

There is a big sensation in Ottawa civic circles. Mayor Payment having suspended City Engineer Galt for having usurped the authority of council by calling for the resignation of Assistant Engineer Perrault. When Galt was appointed the council gave him full power over his subordinates. It looks as if the mayor was animated by national prejudice.
