DEATH OF PATRICK CAVANAGH.—We have this week to record the death of another old landmark. Patrick Cavanagh, one of Richibucto's oldest and most respected residents dropped off last Saturday evening about 7 o'clock at the ripe old age of 80 years. Deceased, who had for the last few years been subject to spells of sickness, but who had been quite smart of late, being able to do little chores about the house, was obliged to take to his bed the early part of last week. As the family did not think his sickness any worse than former attacks of this kind they did not send for a doctor, thinking it would pass off in a few days as it had done before, but as he kept gradually getting worse they thought it best to send for a doctor. The doctor, however, did not do any good as he died about 7 o'clock on Saturday evening. Mr. Cavanagh was a native of Cavan Co., Ireland, but has lived in Richibucto the greater part of his life, having come to this country when quite young. He was married twice, his second wife surviving him, besides 6 children—2 sons to his first wife and 3 sons and 1 daughter to his second wife. He also has two brothers living. The funeral which took place on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock, was quite largely attended. The interment took place in the Roman Catholic burying ground, Rev. Fr. Bannon officiating. The pall bearers were Messrs. J. D. McMinn, R. McDonald, John Bell, Wm. Connaughton, Robert McKinnon and Donally McDermott.

DEATH OF MRS. MARY BURT.—The following was taken from the Burlington, Iowa, Hawk-Eye, of Saturday, Jan. 20th:—"Scarcely a week passes but the Hawk-Eye is called upon to chronicle the death of some older resident. The circle of those who knew the Burlington of the earlier days, the Burlington before or during the war, is contracting with great rapidity; the old familiar faces and figures that so many knew so well, are disappearing one by one. At noon yesterday, Mrs. Mary Burt crossed the river to the better land. She had arrived at the fine old age of seventy-six. Her health had been failing for some time and while her death was not unexpected, she will be missed and mourned for none the less. Mrs. Burt was a native of New Brunswick and came here with her husband some forty years ago. Mr. Burt was well known in business circles. He died about twenty-five years ago. Five daughters survive the beloved mother: Mrs. Kate Fabert, Miss Margaret Burt, a faithful teacher in North Hill school; Miss Josephine Burt, principal of Sunnyside school, and the Misses Sarah and Mary F. Burt. The deceased was beloved and honored by all who had been so fortunate as to become acquainted with her. From her home there went out an influence for good, that certainly cannot be estimated too highly. Her's was the pleasure of seeing her children grow up to honor her declining years; her's was the knowledge of duty well performed. A good and useful and noble life has ended. One who wrought long and hard, has gone to her well-earned rest. Those who knew her best, will keep her memory green until they, too, are called away." Deceased's maiden name was Wathen, and was a sister of DEATH OF JOHN GILLIES.—The Seattle, Wash., Post-Intelligence of Friday, Jan. 19th, gives the following account of the death of John Gillies:—John Gillies is dead and John A. McKinnon lies in Providence hospital seriously injured as a result of the collapse yesterday morning of a staging which they were constructing around the bow of the steam schooner George W. Dickinson. The Morans are building the vessel for the Pacific Clipper line. Both men fell with the collapse of the staging to the deck, twelve feet below.

Gillies had his neck broken, and his companion, McKinnon, sustained a painful wrench of the neck and other injuries. The latter was unconscious for ten minutes, and had he struck squarely on his head, as did Gillies, would no doubt have met a similar fate. The accident occurred shortly before noon. Although a number of men were at work on the ship none could give full details. McKinnon says he knows what caused the structure to drop, but he declined to tell about it. He and Gillies were the only men in that particular portion of the staging when it went down. Both were working as ship carpenters on the vessel. Fellow-workmen rushed to the assistance of the unfortunate men, but were too late to help Gillies. Blood gushed from his mouth and the cuts on his head, but he did not utter a sound. McKinnon did not learn of his companion's death until about 3 o'clock at Providence hospital "Poor fellow," said he, speaking of Gillies. "I saw him on the wharf when I came to, but didn't know he was dead. But it isn't strange, for I was pretty well stunned. All I know is that Gillies and I were working on the staging. John was near me at the time we fell, but just what we were doing then I can't remember." The body of Gillies was taken to Bonney & Stewart's where it remains subject to instructions from relatives. No inquest has been held. Dr. J. B. Eagleson attended McKinnon at the hospital. He does not think the man is dangerously injured. His back is probably bruised and the muscles in his hands and arms were severely strained. Gillies was a single man, 32 years old. For the past three or four years prior to his employment in the Moran yards, which began December 27, he worked as a carpenter and builder for the Canadian Pacific railway in the Kootenay district. Much of that time he and McKinnon were together. They had known each other for years, and were the best of friends. Gillies had a brother, Daniel Gillies, manager of Hull Bros., a butcher firm of Calgary. James Gillies, another brother, is a foreman at the Brooklyn navy yard, and two sisters, one Mrs. Waller, also resides in Brooklyn. McKinnon is a resident of Seattle, though his wife and five children have been living at Vancouver for two years. McKinnon began work for the morans January 4. He had been confined to his bed for four weeks prior to that time through another accident that also nearly cost him his life. He was in North Seattle and had started to cross First avenue at Bell street. In doing so he was nearly run down by an electric car. Just as he made his escape from this an out-bound car ran into him. The fender probably saved his life, though he was knocked to the ground and injured his left leg between the foot and knee severely. The cuts sustained in this accident have not thoroughly healed, though McKinnon had been doing full duty as a ship carpenter at the Morans'. (Deceased was a native of Jardineville, Kent Co., N. B., and went to the United States a number of years ago. He was a son of the late Roderick Gillies, whose death we recorded some time ago.)—Ed.

F., which was held in the Kingston Public Hall on Tuesday evening, Jan. 23rd, the following officers were installed into their respective offices:—C. R., R. G. Girvan; P. C. R., G. N. Clark; V. C. B. Carson and Geo. N. Clark; Finance Com., J. L. Hutchinson and Thos. Forster.

—The Kingston, Kent, correspondent writing to the Moncton Transcript of Wednesday, Jan. 24, in reference to Court Favourite, I. O. F., says:—"Expressions of delight were uttered by the members when they saw the beautiful moose head which had been added to the decorations of the Court room. The moose head was captured a few miles from Court Favourite by our enthusiastic brother, A. C. Amiraux and presented to the court by him. It is of the handsomest specimen which the writer has ever had the privilege of viewing. Too much cannot be said of the manner in which the taxidermist did his work, which was done by D. W. Clark, who certainly is master of the art of taxidermy. Court Favourite is a lively and progressive court and meets in their court room every third Tuesday in the month. All visiting brethren will be made welcome."

—A representative of THE REVIEW in conversation with Mr. George Amiraux who returned from the Klondyke a short time ago, was given a short account of the latter's trip to that country. Mr. Amiraux says that on several occasions while on the trail, he, with the rest of the company, travelled as much as fifty miles at a time without having a bite to eat or not knowing where they would get anything. On one occasion, he says, they had to eat nothing but rabbits for three days without a bit of salt or even a bit of bread, nothing but rabbit. He says they would eat rabbit for their breakfast and then take a smoke, then have some more rabbit, then a smoke, and so on. They did nothing but smoke and eat rabbit during all that time. He also showed the writer a number of views which were taken during his trip. One of them shows Mr. Amiraux feeding a "squaw" with porridge from a large soup spoon. There are also several views of the Niagara Falls as well as a number of others of which special mention might be made. Mr. Amiraux says they had a good deal of hardship, and would not go over the same again for "all the Klondyke" as he expressed himself.
