

Dyspepsia's Victims.

THE CAUSE OF THE TROUBLE AND HOW TO OVERCOME IT.

It Frequently Produces Headache, Heartburn, Dizziness and Other Distressing Symptoms—A Victim Tells of Her Release.

From the Telegraph, Quebec.

The primary cause of indigestion or dyspepsia is lack of vitality; the absence of nerve force; the loss of life-sustaining elements in the blood. No organ can properly perform its functions when the source of nutriment fails. When the stomach is robbed of the nutriment demanded by nature, assimilation ceases, unnatural gases are generated and the entire system responds to the discord.

A practical illustration of the symptoms and torture of dyspepsia is furnished by the case of Mrs. A. Labonte, who lives in the village of Stadacona, Que. When interviewed by a reporter of the Quebec Telegraph, Mrs. Labonte looked the picture of vigorous health, showing no traces of the malady that had made her life for the time miserable. Speaking of her illness, Mrs. Labonte said: "For about two years I suffered dreadfully. My digestive organs impaired, and the food I ate did not assimilate, and left me with a feeling of flatulency, pain and acidity of the stomach, and frequently heartburn. This condition of affairs soon told on my system in other ways, with the result that I had frequent headaches, dizziness, and at times a dimness of vision with spots apparently dancing before my eyes. I became so much run down that it was with difficulty I could do my household work, and at all times I felt weak, depressed and nervous.

While I was at my worst, one of my friends, seeing that the doctor was not helping me, urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My husband then got me half a dozen boxes and I began taking them. After I had used two boxes I began to enjoy my meals and the various symptoms of my trouble began to disappear. I continued the pills until I had used the half dozen boxes, when I again felt perfectly well. My stomach was as healthy as ever it had been. I could sleep well and my head was clear and free from the dizziness and aches that so long helped make me miserable. It is more than a year since I stopped taking the pills, and health has continued better than it was for years before."

Mrs. Labonte added that she will always feel grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for the misery they have released her from, and she always advises friends who are ailing to use them.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. If your dealer does not keep them they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Orders have been received at Halifax to send the steamer Maverick to New York for repairs. The vessel will sail on Saturday in tow of the Standard Oil Company's tugs. She will be repaired in the company's own yards. Tenders were asked for at Halifax, but no firm was willing to undertake the job. The steamer is being repaired sufficiently to enable her to make the trip in safety.

We would like to be as sure of everything as we are sure that Kendrick's Liniment will please you.

To cleanse the system and keep the blood pure use Wheeler's Botanic Bitters. Obtain KENDRICK'S LINIMENT.

APPLE BLOSSOMS.

(Maggie E. Fraser.)

Beautiful within the orchard,
Apple blossoms pink and white,
Grow amid the emerald leaflets,
In the sunshine warm and bright.

With the deep blue sky above us,
And the verdure underneath,
Let us gaze upon the apple,
Every bough a glorious wreath!

Here a sweet perfume is wafted,
Which has power the pulse to thrill,
While we stand and gaze upon them,
As if robbed of strength and will.

Here the lovely apple blossoms
Speak to us of life and love;
Just as does a sacred anthem,
Or the cooing of the dove.

For the sweet and varied beauty
Of this plant, so grandly fair,
Hath the power to touch the sinner,
As the chant of evening prayer.

Are there those who gaze upon them,
And "tis work of fate" declare?
Are there those who still discern not
Something grander, nobler, there?

Let us pray there are not such heathens
In our own Canadian land!
Who can not within this blossom
See the Great Creator's hand.

For there never could such beauty
Be arranged without design;
Nor the work of chance entrall one,
As they do this heart of mine.

Let us then the beautiful blossom
Prize, as never done before!
Let us prize it for its beauty,
And besides for something more.

Let us learn the long spoke adage,
"The Lord, himself, in all life lives!"
Let us love the apple blossom!
Let us know that He forgives!

AN OLD MAN'S STORY.

BYRON SMITH, HAMILTON, ONT.

My friends, I am a stranger in your village, yet I trust I may call you friends. You have just heard that I am a vagrant and a fanatic. I am not. As God knows my own sad heart, I came here to do good; hear me and be just. I am an old man, standing alone at the end of life's journey. There is a deep sorrow in my heart. I have voyaged over a dark and beaconless ocean, and all of my life's hopes have been wrecked. I am without friends, home or kindred upon earth, and look with longing to the rest of the night of death.

Without friends, kindred or home! It was not so once! No, my friends, it was not so once. Away over the dark waves which have wrecked my hopes, there is a blessed light of happiness and home. I reach again convulsively for the shrines of the household idols that once were mine; now mine no more. I once had a dear mother. With her loving heart crushed with sorrow, she went down to her grave. I once had a wife—as fair an angel-hearted creature as ever smiled in an earthly home. Her eyes as mild as the summer sky, and a heart as faithful and true as ever guarded and cherished a husband's love. Her blue eyes grew dim as the floods of sorrow washed away their brightness, and the loving heart I wrung until every fibre was broken. I once had a brave, noble boy, but he was driven out from the ruin of his home, and my old heart yearns to know if he yet lives. I once had a babe—a sweet, tender blossom, but my hand destroyed it, and she liveth with One who loves children.

Do not be startled, my friends; I am not a murderer, in the common acceptance of the term; there is yet a light in my evening sky. A spirit mother rejoices over the return of her prodigal son. A wife smiles upon her partner who again turns back to virtue and honor. The child-like angel visits me at nightfall, and I feel the hallowing touch of a tiny palm upon my feverish brow. My brave boy, if he still lives, would forgive the sorrowing old man for the treatment which drove him into the world and the blow that maimed him for life. God forgive me for the ruin I have brought upon me and mine!

I was once a fanatic, and madly followed the malign light which led me to ruin. I was once a frantic when I sacrificed my wife, children, happiness and home to the accused demon of the bowl. I once adored the gentle being whom I injured so deeply. I was a drunkard. From respectability and affluence I plunged into degradation and poverty. I dragged my family down with me. For years I saw my wife's cheeks pale, and her step grow weary. I left her alone amid the wreck of her home, and rioting at the tavern. She never complained, yet she and the children went hungry for bread. One New Year's night I returned late to the hut where charity had given us a roof. She was yet up, and shivering over the coals. I demanded food, but she burst into tears and told me there was none. I fiercely ordered her to get some. She turned her eyes sadly upon me, the tears falling fast over her pale cheeks. At this moment the child in the cradle awoke, and sent up a famishing wail, startling the despairing mother like a serpent's sting.

"We have no food, James!—have had none for several days. My once kind husband, must we starve?"

That sad, pleading face, those streaming eyes, and the famishing wail of the child, maddened me, and I—yes, I struck her a blow on the face, and she fell forward upon the hearth. The furies of hell boiled in my bosom, and with deeper intensity as I felt I had done wrong. I stooped as well as I could in my drunken state, and clinched both hands in her hair. "God of mercy, James!" exclaimed my wife, as she looked up into my fiendish countenance, "you will not kill us—you will not harm Willie!" and she sprang to the cradle and grasped him in her embrace.

I caught her again by the hair, and dragged her to the door, and as I lifted the latch the wind burst in with a cloud of snow. With the yell of a fiend, I still dragged her into the darkness and the storm. With a wild Ha! ha! I closed the door and turned the button. But my work was not complete. I turned to the bed where lay my elder son, snatched him from his slumbers and against his half-wakened struggles, opened the door and thrust him out. In the agony of fear, he called me, "Father," a name I was no longer fit to hear, and locked his fingers in my side pocket. I could not wrench that frenzied grasp away, and with the coolness of a devil, as I was. I shut the door upon his arm, and with my knife deliberately severed the hand at the wrist.

It was morning when I awoke, and the storm had ceased, but the cold was intense. I first secured a drink of water, and then looked in the accustomed place for Mary. As I missed her, for the first time, a shadowy sense of some horrible nightmare began to dawn upon my wandering mind. I thought I had a dreadful dream, but I involuntarily opened the outside door with a shuddering dread. As the door opened, the snow burst in, followed by a fall of something scattering the snow and striking the floor with a sharp sound; My blood shot like red-hot arrows through my veins and I rubbed my eyes to shut out the sight. It was—It was—Oh, God, how terrible!—it was my dead wife and babe, face to face—dead! The over-true mother had bowed herself over the child to shield it, her own person stark and bare to the storm. I know not what became of my brave boy. I was arrested, and for long months raved in delirium. I awoke; was sentenced to prison for ten years. But no tortures could have been like those I endured within my bosom.

Oh God! No! I am not a fanatic! I wish to injure no one. But while I live, let me strive to warn others not to enter the path which has been so dark and fearful to me.

The old man then asked the people to sign the pledge.

My father leaped from his seat, and snatched at the pledge eagerly. I had followed him, and as he hesitated a moment with pen in the ink, a tear fell from the old man's eye on the paper.

"Sign it, sign it, young man. Angels would sign it. I would write my name ten thousand times in blood, if it would bring back my loved and lost ones."

My father wrote "Mortimer Hudson." The old man looked with tearful eyes, and looked again; his countenance alternately flushed with red and death-like paleness. "It is—no, it cannot be—yet how strange!" muttered the old man. "Pardon me, sir, but that was the name of my brave boy."

My father trembled, and held up the arm from which the hand had been severed. They looked for a moment in each
