WHAT A GREAT MAN SAID.

The Hon. John Wanamaker, known as the Merchant Prince of America, is presisident of the Pennsylvania State Sunday School Association. In his last annual address he made the following statement which ought to be heralded from one end of the land to the other:

"The Sunday-school began in the eighteenth century, and slowly developed, improved and enlarged, indeed almost all its growth has been in the nineteenth century I make bold to declare that the noblest development of this closing century is that of the Sunday-school in its many various departments, buildings and literature, because of the touch it has had upon the civilization of the country as a mother of churches and its care for her children. This century is the only Sunday-school century that the world has ever had. From a small and imperfect organization, step by step through the township, county and State organizations, and by means of County conventions, institutes, house-to house visitation, Summer assemblies, graded Sunday-schools and Bible Union Work, and other agencies, from the very few who have come in the first years under the influence of the Sunday-school to the twenty-five millions of youths and adults, at least, who are today studying the International lessons in and Strong. England and America and the wide world over. I believe that we have been preparing the world by all these previous years and by the preparation of this century for the greatest of all conturies, the of the humble classes for an existence and one upon which we now enter."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 20, 1900 .-There is a somewhat strong feeling here at present on the subject of the Nicara guan canal, a good many important men believing that the United States has been outwitted by Great Britain. Some slurs are even being cast at Lord Pauncefote for his part in the proceedings, as if it were any duty of his to point out to American western women who are coming forward diplomatists the results of their mist kes or to instruct them in their business. The upshot of the affair seems to be that the United States has now officially acknowledged the validity of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, which nine out of ten believed had been abrogated, and that the country is at Britain's mercy so far as the canal is concerned, A high officer of the government said yesterday: "Secretary Hay may not have promised it, and possibly does not intend to favor it, but the British hoped to secure a port or the Lynn canal. They believed the American peole would accept the Hay Pauncefote treaty as a great act of liberality on the part of the British, and then, under the influence of the sentiment thus created, the opening into the Alaskan strip was to be broached as a natural quid pro quo. If Great Britain accepts the Davis amendment (assuring the United States the right to defend the canal in time of war) it will be followed by a renewal of the Lynn canal proposition and a neutralization of that system of internal waterways will be suggested. The advantage to the United States is so enormous that the British would be fools not to ask for some return, and a free path to the Klondike is what they most want."

It is probable that the treaty will be amended and passed without further reference to British wishes. In these days, leading up to the campaign, the administation cannot afford to show any more consideration for Great Britain than it can help and any request for a modification of the treaty would be taken as a further vielding to British influences. The State Department has already made light of the proposed amendment, predicting that the British government would accept it without hesitation but asserting that it would not be accepted by other nations. On the other hand Lord Pauncefote has intimated that he does not like the change, although, of course, he will not speak of the matter for publication. It is reasonably certain, however, that Great Britain will ultimately accept the amendment because if she does not, Congress is likely to declare the Clayton-Bulwer treaty abrogated and go ahead without further reference

Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote have signed a protocol extending the time allowed for ratification of the reciprocity treaties between the United States and the British West Indian colonies of Jamaica, Turks and Caicos, Bermuda and Guiana. The protocol provides that the ratifications shall take place as soon as possible, or within twelve months at the utmost. These treaties are now pending before the Senate behind the French reciprocity treaty, and the period allowed for their ratification would expire, in the ordinary course, about the end of the present month.

The fact that the South African war is nearly over is welcomed, apart from general reasons of humanity, because of Sir Thomas Lipton's intimation that he now intends to make his promised challenge for the America's cup. He is interested in the consolidation of the Havana street car lines. In addition to this he is tentatively interested in a scheme for the amalgamation of the railroads of the interior of the island.

F. S. S. Johnson, U. S Commercial Agent at Stanbridge, reports to the Department of States as follows: "The magnitude of the business done between the United States and Canada in lambs and poultry is not realized by those not immediately connected with it. During the months of September, October and November there were shipped from Canada 112,000 lambs valued at $270,000. For the same period of 1898, there were sent across the line 129,228 lambs from all over Canada. As regards poultry, there were 8,000 to 10,000 geese shipped to one firm in Massachusetts, and a single firm in Sabrevois. Quebec, has had at one time as many as 25,000 geese and 15,000 ducks,"
