The warning cough is the faithful sentinel. It tells of the approach of consumption, which has killed more people than war and pestilence combined. It tells of painful chests, sore lungs, weak throats, bronchitis, and pneumonia. Do not suffer another day. It's useless, for there's a prompt and safe cure. It is which cures fresh colds and coughs in a single night and masters chronic coughs and bronchitis in a short time. Consumption is surely and certainly prevented, and cured, too, if taken in time.

A 25c. bottle for a fresh cold; 50c. size for older colds; $1 size for chronic coughs and consumption.

"I always keep a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral on hand. Then every time I get cold I take a little of it and I am better at once."

NOMINATION DAY.

Speeches by Hon. O. J. LeBlanc, Geo. V. McInerney and J. D. Phinney.

Yesterday was one of the finest days of the season and large numbers from all sections of the County visited town to listen to the nomination speeches. The fact that so many electors had driven from remote parishes showed the great interest taken by both political parties in the present contest.

At 2 o'clock Sheriff Leger adjourned his court, announcing that Mr. George V. McInerney and Hon. O. J. LeBlanc were the candidates nominated. The court house, being considered too small to accommodate the large number of people present, it was decided that the candidates address the electors outside. The speakers accordingly repaired to the hand stand in the court house yard when Sheriff Leger was unanimously chosen chairman of the meeting.

Hon. O. J. LeBlanc, govt. candidate, was nominated by:—

James Girvan, Placide R. Goguen, Gilbert C. Richard, and others.

Mr. McInerney was the first speaker and after having thanked the electors for the support given him in the past and particularly for the grand majority given him in 1896, he devoted about an hour to his opponent, Mr. LeBlanc's personal and political character. He praised Mr. LeBlanc as a man, admitting that nothing could be said against him personally—that he stood high in his profession of agriculturist, but that as a politician he had made many mistakes. He accused Mr. LeBlanc of having sold himself for one thousand dollars in the matter of letting the contract for building the Moncton & Buctouche Railway. He thought Mr. LeBlanc unfit to represent the County in Parliament and did not consider that the people would inflict any great injury on him if they left him at home. He spoke of Mr. LeBlanc resigning his seat in the local government to contest the County for the Commons. Here he showed strong marked inconsistency, for he said that Mr. LeBlanc had made a good local representative, but contended that he would be a failure at Ottawa.

Mr. McInerney then spoke of having run on the same ticket with Mr. LeBlanc for the local house. He said that Mr. LeBlanc had not always been a Liberal—that in the 1896 election Mr. LeBlanc

Had Piles For 9 Years

Dominion Inspector of Steamboats Cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

False modesty and fear of the surgeon's knife prevent most people from appealing to their physicians for a cure for piles.

Many people suffer on year after year, robbed of their rest and sleep by the terrible itching, when they could be entirely cured by a single box of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. O. P. St. John, Dominion Inspector of Steamboats, living at 246 Shaw street, Toronto, states: "I suffered for nine years from itching piles, at times being unable to rest on account of the annoyance caused by them. After trying almost all remedies in vain I began the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which entirely cured me. I cannot speak too highly of it. I have recommended it to several friends, all of whom have been cured by its use."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognized by physicians, druggists, and the public in general as the only absolute cure for piles; 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmansons, Bates and Co., Toronto.

stood on the fence ready to join any party that happened to come into power. Speaking of the late Buctouche convention he said that it did not represent the whole County—that large sections were without representation and many of those present were not legally authorized delegates.

Mr. McInerney then made use of all the usual arguments resorted to by the Tory party to strengthen their case and weaken that of their opponents. He read a letter from Mr. LeBlanc in which that gentleman said that some of the patronage had been taken from him and given to little George Robertson.

Referring to Mr. J. D. Phinney's conversion to Liberalism he said that Mr. Phinney might have found some other constituency than Kent in which to exercise his fine talents and some other man more worthy of his support than Hon. O. J. LeBlanc.

Although Mr. McInerney was in good voice and displayed more than his usual eloquence, he failed to arouse that enthusiasm which characterizes a party confident of success. Although the town of Richibucto might be said to be Mr. McInerney's stronghold, little or no interest was evinced by the large audience, who, by the way, had dwindled to a "thin red line" ere the conclusion of Mr. McInerney's speech. In conclusion he appealed to the electorate to support him, a young man, against Mr. LeBlanc whom he said was too old to guard their interests in parliament.

Hon. O. J. LeBlanc was the next speaker. He was laudly cheered on rising, plainly showing that the meeting was with him. He said as Mr. McInerney had taken up so much of their time—nearly three hours—he would not detain them for any great length of time. He gave an unqualified denial to the charge that he had once sold his influence for one thousand dollars—that it was a slander manufactured to injure him. He showed the very large amount of work that Mr. McInerney hadn't done for the county, although that gentleman had represented the constituency for about nine years, and judging the future by the past very little could be hoped for the constituency if they should again elect Mr. McInerney. He admitted Mr. McInerney's oratorical powers, but said work and not talk was what was needed—that rhetoric wouldn't build breakwaters or light-houses, especially when it came from the opposition.

In handling the tariff changes that were made by the Liberal party Mr. LeBlanc showed to the satisfaction of every unbranded elector that what changes had been made was in the best interests of the people of Canada. As to the preference given Great Britain, he thought it a master stroke of diplomacy on the part of the Liberal party, for although we could not be said to have received any direct preference as a return, we had derived such indirect benefit that our trade with the mother country had increased by leaps and bounds as a consequence of having won the good will and esteem of the British people. (Applause.) He contended that substantial reductions had been made in nearly every article of import, and as the finances of the country should warrant it, further reductions should be made so as to amount to a mere revenue tariff. If the Liberal party had expended more money than the Conservatives had done, it was because they had had more to spend, and the public services of the county demanded it. The Conservatives had prevailed to 1896, in order to show a small expenditure starved the public service so that when the Liberals had attained to power they found many crying wants, they had found the canal system inadequate for the increasing traffic, they had found the government railway but poorly equipped to cope with its formidable rival the Canada Pacific. They quickly found the necessity of extending the I. C. R. to Montreal, of buying heavier and better engines, of strengthening the bridges along the road and of making such general repairs as should bring the people's railway up to a first class standard. All these things required money, but as the Liberal government, by its wise and statesmanlike policy had been able to make the money with which to do this work, the great changes had been effected without a drain on the people who had been enjoying the highest measure of prosperity all the while. Mr. LeBlanc said he would, if elected, look after the interests of Kent County to the best of his ability. Although he could not hope to attain to high honors as an orator, as a worker he hoped to be able to do much for the county. He referred to his printed card in THE REVIEW for an outline of what he hoped to accomplish for the constituency. Mr. LeBlanc then addressed the electors in French. Upon taking his seat he was greeted with great cheering and applause.

A DAUGHTER'S DANGER.

A Chatham Mother Tells how Her Daughter, who was Troubled with Weak Heart Action and run Down System was Restored to Health.

Every mother who has a daughter drooping and fading—pale, weak and listless—whose health is not what it ought to be, should read the following statement made by Mrs. J. S. Heath, 39 Richmond Street, Chatham, Ont.:

"Some time ago I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills at the Central Drug Store for my daughter, who is now 13 years of age, and had been afflicted with weak action of the heart for a considerable length of time.

"These pills have done her a world of good, restoring strong, healthy action of her heart, improving her general health and giving her physical strength beyond our expectations.

"They are a splendid remedy, and to any one suffering from weakness, or heart and nerve trouble I cordially recommend them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25, at all druggists.

Repeated calls for Mr. J. D. Phinney brought that gentleman to the platform, and on rising to address the audience he was received with hearty applause.

He said that at that late hour and after the electors had been wearied by Mr. McInerney's long and time-killing address, he did not purpose detaining them. He had already had the opportunity at meetings held by him in different localities of explaining his views as to the political situation and his attitude in the present contest, and hoped to have a like opportunity to speak in other districts before polling day. His object now, more particularly was to express his disapproval of the course which Mr. McInerney had today considered it advisable for him to take in reflecting upon Mr. LeBlanc's integrity and coupling his (Mr. Phinney's) name with charges of wrong doing by that gentleman. He desired to emphatically and positively deny that he had on any occasion stated that Mr. LeBlanc had while representing the County in the local legislature, or at any other time received a bribe of $1000 or any other sum. No such expression had ever passed his lips nor had he any reason to doubt Mr. LeBlanc's honesty or that in all his public acts and in his private life he was as free from wrong doing as Mr. McInerney himself. If on any occasion a bribe had been offered to him he had spurned it and now stood before the electors as an honest and trustworthy man.

As to his own position Mr. Phinney said, that without then going into details, speaking as an elector and without any representative responsibility, he was of opinion that the administration of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Cabinet with which he had surrounded himself, had during the past four years been in the best interests of the Country as a whole, and that, independent of party ties or party affiliations they were entitled to a renewal of the confidence that the electorate had reposed in them in 1896. The disensions amongst the present Conservative leaders held out no hope that they could unite in the formation of a strong and successful administration even if the elections should result in their return; and having confidence in the ability and statesmanship of Sir Wilfrid and his associates, he felt an assurance that they were the men who at this juncture in the history of the country were best entitled to the reins of power, and that if again returned the same prosperity and harmony which the country had enjoyed during the past four years would, so far as the administration could accomplish it, be enjoyed during the coming term of parliament.

A vote of thanks was tendered the chairman and the meeting ended with rousing cheers for the Queen.
