

DYSPEPSIA AND HEADACHE.

An Elderly Lady Tells of Her Cure Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills After a Score of Other Remedies Had Failed.

Dyspepsia causes more genuine distress than most diseases that afflict mankind. In this country from one cause or another its victims are numbered by the hundreds of thousands, and those afflicted always feel tired, worn out and miserable, and are subject to fits of melancholy or ill temper without apparent cause.

He was afraid to struggle lest the shaking should bring it down and at once deposit his head in the basket of sawdust below him, into which his eyes were of necessity steadily looking.

Having staid some time in this plight, he was overjoyed to hear the approach of a visitor, whom he implored to release him. It was in vain. "I'm thinking," said the gentleman, a Scottish visitor to the metropolis.

There are many people who do not care for libraries who pride themselves on having "only the books they read" about them, but the answer made by a distinguished scholar to one of those persons very well illustrates how valuable is this idea as to what a library should be.

More books? Dear me, it seems to me you've got more than you can read now. Have you read all you have at ready?"

"No," returned the scholar, "and I never expect to read them all."

"Then why do you want more?"

"Let me ask you," said the scholar, "did you ever read the dictionary through?"

"Certainly not," was the reply. "Well, sir," said the scholar, "a library is my dictionary."

Supposing the Ax Had Fallen

Some years ago an inquisitive medical student, while examining the gullotine in a big waxworks exhibition in London, took it into his head that the sort of yoke which fits down on the shoulders of the criminal to hold him in his place would not be sufficient to confine a person who struggled.

His curiosity on that point led him to watch till the place was empty, when he actually put himself in, letting down the yoke. He soon found, however, that he was quite unable to lift it, and it at once flashed into his mind that the sharp ax suspended over his neck might not be firmly fixed, or it would fall, as it should, with a touch.

So the luckless student was left till one of the attendants came in and waded fast the ax before releasing him from his predicament. The ax was afterward removed and laid by the side of the structure to prevent future accidents.

A Convincing Answer.

There are many people who do not care for libraries who pride themselves on having "only the books they read" about them, but the answer made by a distinguished scholar to one of those persons very well illustrates how valuable is this idea as to what a library should be.

"More books? Dear me, it seems to me you've got more than you can read now. Have you read all you have at ready?"

"No," returned the scholar, "and I never expect to read them all."

"Then why do you want more?"

"Let me ask you," said the scholar, "did you ever read the dictionary through?"

"Certainly not," was the reply. "Well, sir," said the scholar, "a library is my dictionary."

The answer was convincing, and the merchant provided the professor with the funds he wished for.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

TIPS ON THE MARKET.

Why One Broker Absolutely Refuses to Post His Friends.

"A tip to a friend! Not on your life!" said a veteran New Orleans broker, chatting over cigars and coffee in a restaurant last night. "I've responded on hard luck stories as often as the next fellow," he continued earnestly, "and I'll do it again, but a tip on the market—no! I wouldn't give it if I knew it was a lead pipe cinch and the other chap needed the money to buy bread. That sounds hard, and it's the result of hard experience. When I was young and green, I used to put folks next to 'good things' now and then, and there was never a case—not one—in which I didn't have a reason to curse my folly. In the first place, nobody who gets a secret of that kind is going to keep it."

"One day years ago, just to give you an illustration, a man who was an old friend of my father's and who was badly down on his luck, came to ask my private advice on a little speculative investment. I took him into my back office, swore him to secrecy and gave him a piece of information of considerable value. I instructed him exactly what to do and impressed upon him that the least leak would ruin the whole thing and incidentally destroy his own chances of making some money. I was so earnest that he got indignant and asked me if I meant to insult him by doubting his word."

"Well, inside of an hour he had told the secret, 'in strict confidence,' of course, to two particular friends, each of whom proceeded to tell it in strict confidence to other particular friends, giving me as authority all along the line, and before night it was public property. You may imagine in what sort of position I was placed. Men who had lost thousands of dollars through my indiscretion didn't feel inclined to listen to explanations, and some of them are my enemies to this day. I don't blame 'em."

"When I took my man to task, he was dumfounded. He swore by all that was holy he hadn't said a word, and when I clinched the thing with positive proof he got mad. A chap who does you an involuntary injury is always sure to hate you afterward. That's one instance out of a dozen differing slightly in detail, but all having the same moral—namely, don't give tips."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WHEN FORT HILL WENT UP.

The Experience of a Colored Man in the Explosion.

"Speaking of comical incidents in the civil war," said Captain Oscar Ludwig, "brings to mind an incident of the blowing up of Fort Hill at Vicksburg. Fort Hill, it should be understood, was the key to the Confederate system of fortifications. Our regiment, the Twentieth Illinois, had charged up to the fort on May 22, but was ordered back on the 23d and laid siege in a regular way. In June we proceeded to dig an open tunnel toward the fort for the purpose of mining. A car loaded high with cotton bales was pushed in front to protect the diggers, and the tunnel or trench was covered as we proceeded to protect us from the Confederate fire. Finally we pushed the tunnel under the fort and our brigade made ready for the charge."

"The mines were exploded. The fort and all the men in it seemed to go into the air, and the Twentieth Illinois and other regiments rushed into the gap. As we climbed over the broken embankment three men who had been blown up with the fort came down. Two of these were white men, and they were dead. The other, a colored man, came down with a mass of debris, but he was living. When the boys dug him out, they asked him how in the world he came to be in the fort. The frightened dandy explained that he was the servant of one of the leading officers and that he had just carried to his master his dinner when the explosion came."

"He went on to say: 'Dat is so for a fact. I came in just in time to be blowed up. I was standin by de side of de captain when there came a roarin an tremblin, an I felt myself goin up. In a little while I started down, an I met de captain comin up, but we didn't speak. He was goin up head fust an I was comin down head fust. I struck mighty hard, but here I is, thank de Lord an de Yankees!' I suppose that if any one would ask that dandy to describe the siege of Vicksburg he would tell of his own mishap at the blowing up of Fort Hill."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Persian Soldier's Conundrum.

The Rev. Samuel Graham Wilson, M. A., author of "Persian Life and Customs," is a missionary who has lived in the land he writes about for more than 30 years. To show that the Persian peasant is not devoid of humor, the doctor tells the following experience:

"A soldier was an attaché of a royal household, and, besides soldiering, he had to write poems and tell conundrums and improvise puzzles. One day, after not having been paid for either military or other duties, he said to his master: 'I have a conundrum, your excellency.' 'What is it?' 'Tell me what it is which has a name but no existence?' 'The master thought for some time and then exclaimed: 'I give it up. Now tell me the answer.' 'My salary,' the peasant groaned, dropping on his knees for daring to be so bold.'—Saturday Evening Post.

Sheep as Beasts of Burden.

In the northern part of India sheep are put to a use unthought of in European or American countries. They are made to serve as beasts of burden. The mountain paths along the foothills of the Himalayas are so precipitous that the sheep, more surefooted than larger beasts, are preferred as burden carriers. The load for each sheep is from 15 to 20 pounds. The sheep are driven from village to village, with the wool still growing, and in each town the farmer shears as much wool as he can sell there and loads the sheep with the grain which he receives in exchange. After his flock has been sheared he turns it homeward, each sheep having on its back a small bag containing the purchased grain.

When the Band Doesn't Play On.

One of the queer things of a great procession is that the band always ceases to play just before it passes you, no matter what your location may be.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A woman who has spent a good deal of time in Japan says that she has often kept cut flowers for an abnormally long period by burning their stems with a piece of wood.

McLEAN'S VEGETABLE WORM SYRUP Safe Pleasant Effectual

George B. Lightfoot, amateur champion half mile runner, has begun suit against a New York hospital for $10,000 damages for injuries to his foot, and charges the hospital with malpractice. Lightfoot alleges that while he was securely tied to a cot a nurse applied hot bags to his right foot that so blistered it that he is now unable to run and his occupation is gone. At the hospital it was denied that any permanent injury had been done.

Trouble in The Stomach

Which Doctors Failed to Remove, Cured by Less Than Two Boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The experience of Mr. Blackwell is similar to that of many sufferers with chronic indigestion. Stomach medicines will seldom really cure indigestion. The kidneys and liver must be set right, and the bowels made regular and active. Mr. Joseph Blackwell, Holmesville, Ont., says: "I derived more benefit from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills than from any other medicine I ever took, and can highly recommend them for stomach troubles. I was in a terrible state and could hardly work at my trade. I tried most every kind of medicine and doctors, until I was tired doctoring, and before I used one box of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I could see that they were helping me, and after taking a box and a half, found that I was cured."

Nearly every family on the continent has used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills or heard of the remarkable cures they have effected. One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates and Co., Toronto.
