Scrofula The Cause

Eczema, catarrh, hip disease, white swelling, and even consumption have their origin in scrofula in the blood. With the slightest taint of scrofula in the blood, there is no safety. The remedy for this disease in all its forms is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which goes to the root of the trouble and expels all impurities and disease germs from the blood.

The best family cathartic is Hood's Pills.

DIED FROM EXPOSURE.

(Moncton Times)

The mystery surrounding the mysterious disappearance of the young child of Mr. J. H. Hanington, of Caledonia Road, Tuesday afternoon, was cleared up Thursday by the finding of the dead body of the little one in a field about a mile from its home. The body of the child bore all the appearance of its having died from exposure. It seems that the little one strayed from the house and walked about 100 yards along the main road, then turned down a log road and got lost in a stump field. The child had apparently become weary and lying down went to sleep and expired from exposure during Tuesday night. A search party of about twenty-five of the neighbors found the lifeless body about 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The face of the dead child looked as natural as if it were sleeping and there was every appearance of death having come to it while asleep. The child was eighteen months old and bright for its age. Dr. Ross was notified yesterday, but after visiting the place and making enquiry concerning the matter he considered an inquest unnecessary. The parents are grief stricken over the sad affair.

STRANGE REQUEST.

MRS. GRACE WILLS HER ASHES TO MAN WHOSE HOME SHE RUINED.

FLINT, Mich., Nov. 7.—"I will and bequeath my body to William Crapo Orrell, and request that he have it cremated and scatter the ashes to the four winds of Heaven."

Thus reads the last will and testament of a wayward woman, whose life was an unhappy one, whose death was tragic. It is a word from beyond the grave penned by Mrs. Grace Newton, young and beautiful, whose life was clouded by an unhappy marriage, and who wandered into greater darkness.

Chapter I.

There was a sensation in Flint when former Judge William Newton, of the Genesee Court, brought from New York State a young bride scarcely one quarter his age. She was in her teens; he was close to the eighty year mark.

There was a shaking of hands over this attempt of "crabbed age and youth" to mate, and direful were the predictions made.

Mrs. Newton was a very dashing young woman. She took an active interest in life, and her house was a centre for social gayeties. The ex-judge was a farmer and a man of quiet, studious tastes. They had a house in the city and farm to which the old man often repaired.

Four years ago a boy was born of this unequal marriage. The mother seemed devoted to it, but she did not evince any very warm affection for her husband, and there were whisperings of domestic discord in the family. How could one look for harmony between eighty and twenty?

Chapter II.

On Aug. 31 Mrs. Newton was found lying on the floor of her bedroom unconscious with a bullet in her left side. The revolver lay beside her. On the dressing table was a bottle of chloroform. Judge Newton was at the farm.

The story given out was that Mrs. Newton had bought a pistol to protect herself from burglars, who were troublesome in the neighborhood, and that the pistol went off accidentally while she was examining it. No attempt was made to explain the bottle of chloroform.

"I want to die," she said when consciousness returned. "Do not try to save me. I will kill myself some other way if you do. I want to die. I can't stand this life any longer."

Specialists examined the wound and decided that the bullet could not safely be extracted. It could not safely be left in. It killed her.

Revelations followed; revelations which caused Mrs. William Crapo Orrell to leave her husband and go back home to her father. Orrell was a young man. He was known to be an exceedingly friendly relations with Mrs. Newton.

The body was buried, and it looked as if there was an end of things so far as this world was concerned. But yesterday there came a tremendous sensation. The contents of the woman's will were made public.

Bequests amounting to $5,000 were left to her parents and her sisters, but her body was left to Orrell, whose family had been broken up by his alleged infatuation for the lovely suicide, with the request that it be cremated and the ashes scattered to the four winds.

The will was probated, but Judge Newton has filed notice of a contest to break it. In Mrs. Newton's estate there was a legacy of $12,000, left her by an uncle, Charles T. Stone, of New York city. And it is to gain possession of this sum that the will is to be contested by the husband and the old skeleton dug out of the closet.

SIR CHARLES TUPPER QUILTS POLITICS.

HE WILL SPEND THE REST OF HIS LIFE WITH HIS FAMILY.

A Montreal despatch dated Nov 9th, to the St. John Sun says:—Perhaps there never was tendered to any public man in Canada such a testimonial as awaited Sir Charles Tupper on his arrival in Montreal yesterday morning. There were letters and telegrams from every part of the Dominion, expressive of sympathy and good will, and amongst them were messages from six provinces from sitting members offering to resign their seats and promising to work to elect Sir Charles.

When asked what his decision was to be, Sir Charles was firm in the declaration that under no circumstances, even if offered a seat by acclamation, would he consent to re-enter political life.

"I am deeply moved," said Sir Charles, "by these expressions of good will," as he showed a budget of telegrams, "but my decision is final. For years I have worked in the party and out of season for the good of the party to the best of my ability. I have shortened my life by privations incident to campaign work. My friends, colleagues in the house, are good enough to say very kind things about me and that work. They are too considerate, but I thank them cordially for their expressions of goodwill.

"In the quiet of my home life I will not be an indifferent spectator of public events. I will take the greatest pleasure in seeing the Conservative party, now united to a man, taking its place in the house and before the country, waging their battle by younger men, full of vigor, hope, endurance, and having behind them a good cause, securing for the people of Canada wise legislation, righteous law and fair play to all creeds and nationalities. As I step out of public life I am proud to be able to say that I never used nor countenanced using of any but one policy in each and all provinces. I defy any man to say that I have ever reflected upon any nationality or did other than help to cement the bond of union between all races as Canadians with a common heritage and a common future. God forbid that there should be anything but peace and goodwill throughout the Dominion. There is a great future for the Conservative party, and its future has not at any time in four years looked as bright as to-day.

"Gentlemen, with all seriousness, this relief from public life is a boon, the greatest I have enjoyed for years. Remember my age. The party would not listen to the idea of my resigning. I made no great effort to hold Cape Breton, for I felt my duty to my party was to be in the fight to help my supporters rather than to concentrate my efforts upon one seat. I was in the county only four days. I have nothing but what is pleasant to say of the electors of Cape Breton and at this moment, as I leave the arena, my heart goes out to all Canada in hope that peace and prosperity may abound."

FIGHTING IN AFRICA.

METHUEN'S GOOD WORK IN MAPEKING VICINITY.

MAPEKING, Nov. 4.—On Saturday last, the day after Lord Methuen's arrival at Zeerust, a reconnaissance was made by a force composed of four companies of the North Lancashire Regiment and a battalion of the Northumberland supported by Yeomanry, Australians, Bushmen and artillery. The column moved out three miles to the north of Zeerust, where the enemy were found in force on the side of Botha's farm. Gen. Douglas had already started shelling the enemy from a small kopje.

Lord Methuen at once delivered an attack with artillery and rifle fire which was sustained for about four hours. He eventually succeeded in dislodging the enemy from their position. Our casualties were four killed and ten wounded.

Capt. Gordon Wood, of the Shropshire Yeomanry, was being carried off the field when he was shot dead on the stretcher. The bearers escaped untouched.

The enemy had cunningly concealed wire entanglements among the growing crops in front of their position. Here several of our men came to grief, but owing to the bad shooting of the enemy they did not suffer so heavily as otherwise might have been the case.

On the day before entering Zeerust, Lord Methuen's column was severely shelled by Boers along the road. One of the shells struck a tree, and then exploded, causing several casualties.

The enemy took shelter in farmhouse, which were afterwards found crowded with women and children. Thirty Boers took refuge in one farm, but owing to the presence of women and children our guns were not permitted to fire on them. Sniping was located from a building in which none but women and children were found, but it could not be ascertained whether women or men were the snipers.

With the object of removing an impression prevalent among the Boers that burghers will suffer death or banishment on surrender, the following instructions have been received from Lord Roberts and circulated in Western Transvaal by Lord Methuen:

Burghers surrendering voluntarily, who have never taken the oath of neutrality, will not be sent out of South Africa. No promise regarding future treatment can be given to burghers who have been taken prisoners on the battlefield.

Burghers surrendering voluntarily, and who have either never taken the oath or have taken the oath and have been forced to break it, will be permitted to return to their farms at the conclusion of hostilities.

The stock belonging to those who surrendered voluntarily will, if taken during the campaign, after the date of this notice be paid for either in cash or by cheque.

Charles Davis, who shot and killed his wife several days ago and then put a bullet into his own head, died at the hospital at Portland, Me., Thursday. This finally disposes of the case, although Coroner Perry will probably hold an inquest on Davis to close up the matter officially.
