CANADIAN LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., U. S. A., Aug. 2.—The highly important naval scandal, arising out of the constant attacks on Rear Admiral Sobleby by the friends of Rear Admiral Sampson, now seems in a fair way to be brought to a conclusion. For over two years Sobleby had submitted to this without making any sign, no doubt because he did not believe that he could secure an unbiased judicial inquiry from the Navy Department, which he would be practically on trial himself, through their selection of Capt. Sampson to command in the war, his promotion over the heads of a score of Commodores and Rear-Admirals, and their ardent championship of him later on to prove the justice of their favoritism. However, matters having been brought to a crisis by the attacks of a "Historian" named Macleay who was in the employ of the Navy Department and who was believed to be a member of the staff of a certain Rear-Admiral, Sobleby has finally demanded a court of inquiry into his conduct, relying on the support of the country to see that he gets justice. The court will consist of Admiral Dewey and two Rear-Admirals on the retired list, neither of whom have shown any bias in the matter. The Navy Department, when selecting a fair court, has done its best to prejudice the case by making its present directing the inquiry read more like an accusation on which a court-martial was to be held than a mere outline for investigation. However, the court will meet next month some time and it is hoped will settle the subject so definitely that there will be no further room for discussion.

The Rodney troubles are up in the courts again. Mrs. M. E. Rodney, formerly of Toronto, Canada, and said to be a descendant of Admiral Rodney of the British Navy, having brought suit for absolute divorce with permanent alimony from her husband, R. B. Rodney, of the United States Navy, retired. The case is somewhat amusing to outsiders whatever it may be to those involved in it. The first difficulties arose some time ago because Mrs. Rodney insisted on taking with her on her wedding trip her cousin, Mrs. Cole, who shared her apartment to the total exclusion of her husband. Naturally, Mr. Rodney objected, the result being a suit for support brought by Mrs. Rodney. This was afterwards compromised, the couple going to live in the same house, though they occupied separate apartments. Now Mrs. Rodney has a gain brought suit, alleging cruel treatment by her husband, and averring that on May 20, 1901, she received an indecent letter from the defendant, in which he made insulting propositions to her, which she declares caused her great distress. She further alleges that on the same day the defendant made the same proposition which she declares she vigorously rejected. The defendant, she declares, threatened to give her no more money unless she acceded to his proposal. Since that time, she avers, he has failed to properly provide for her, or to supply her with money.

Mr. W. O'Leary of Limerick, Ireland, who is visiting in this city at present, is a good deal stirred up over the commercial supremacy accorded in American papers to Great Britain and the United States. He does not consider that Great Britain includes Ireland, and asserts the supremacy of the Emerald Isle in emphatic tones. "Don't you know," he said, "that Ireland has bigger breweries than all England? Don't you know that the shipbuilders of England and Scotland? Don't you know that the 'canny Scots,' who are supposed by American journalists to like their own hard liquor, patronize Irish products in preference to his own? Ireland has the largest brewing and shipbuilding concerns in the world. Ireland supplies half the British empire with hankchiefs, collars, tablecloths and shirts, and puts on British tables the choicest breakfast bacon and butter. Neither the Tyne nor the Clyde nor the Mersey show anything equal to the shipbuilding concern at Belfast, which employs 10,000 men and supports a good sized town. It is a by-word in the British navy that the breakdown of machinery, a thing so frequent, has ever occurred in any British naval vessel built in the Belfast yards. Nothing shoddy ever comes from Ireland. That is why the balbriggan is imitated by British and German manufacturers. The 'canny Scots' drink 500,000 gallons of Irish whiskey every year. Look up the statistics and you will see that I have underrated the amounts that Ireland gives to England annually, not only for her consumption but in most cases for the purpose of receiving an English brand before sale."

The Treasury Department has affirmed the decision of the Collector of Customs at Fort Vincent, N. Y., in assessing duty on fish caught in Canadian waters by Canadian fishermen in the employ of the Lake Ontario Fish Company, an American corporation. The company claimed that its fish were entitled to admission free of duty under the provision of the law that admits free fresh water fish when caught by American citizens. The question thus raised was whether fish caught by Canadian citizens in the employ of a New York corporation can be deemed to be caught in the Great Lakes or other fresh waters by citizens of the United States. The Board of General Appraisers cites a former case, decided by the courts, where it was conceded upon the argument that the importer was a New York corporation, the fish in question having been caught in the Bay of Quinte, an arm of Lake Ontario in Canadian waters by citizens of Canada. It was argued that the importer, being a New York corporation, was a citizen of the United States; that a corporation could only act through agents and that the fish in question, being caught by its employees, were constructively caught by it. The soundness of this argument however, was not admitted by the court, whose conclusion was that, to obtain the benefits of the exemption "the citizen must be present and actually engaged in catching the fish."

NORTH SYDNEY, Aug. 5.—Mrs. Thos. C. Moxham, whose husband was killed at the steel works a few weeks ago, died Saturday afternoon at Rockaway, Mr. Moxham's Sydney home. An infant son was still born. The deceased lady was 23 years old and was formerly a Miss Houston, of Louisville, Kentucky, whither her remains will be forwarded by special car to-morrow morning. Mr. and Mrs. Houston, who were telegraphed for a few days ago, arrived on Saturday night too late to see their daughter alive. A little four-year-old son of Dr. R. C. McLeod, of this town, was drowned on Saturday by falling off a wharf where he had strayed with another child. The latter a mere baby, went straight to the child's home to give warning of the accident, which was unnoticed by men near the wharf. When help arrived the body had drifted a distance and was found after some search. Three doctors worked for hours to restore life, but without avail. The same afternoon a young man named Archie McAdam, aged 25, was drowned at M. Adams' lake through backing a horse and cart into a hole. The horse was also drowned.

With Constipation Come a Host of Ills.

To Get Well and Keep Well Regulate the Bowels by Using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

You cannot avoid disease if you neglect to regulate the bowels and allow the liver and kidneys to become torpid, sluggish and inactive. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are the most valuable family medicine that one can conceive of because they invigorate and regulate the excretory and filtering organs as no other preparation was ever known to do. Mr. Geo. Bennet, Wharton, Ont., writes:—"I don't like to have my name put in public print, but I feel it a duty to my fellow-men to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. For about four years I was troubled with chronic constipation and weakness of the kidneys. My condition was serious when I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I verily believe that they have saved my life. I am now well and feel like a new man." Now people use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills than any other Canadian medicine. They are popular because they cure when other remedies fail. Ask your neighbor about them. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all druggists or Edmondson Bates & Co., Toronto.

Origin of "Whig."

Several reasons have been assigned to account for the word "Whig," universally known to all the English speaking people. By some the word is supposed to be a contraction of a longer one, "whiggamore," which in some parts of England and Scotland, especially Scotland, signifies a drover or herder. It was in 1679 that the word first became common in the British Isles, when the struggle was in progress between the peasantry and the aristocracy to have or not to have the bill passed by parliament to exclude the Duke of York from the line of succession. All who were opposed to placing the duke in the line of succession were derisively called "whiggamores," or "drovers," just as the city duds of today speakers of the "grangers," the "grays," the "chin whiskers" and the "bayseiders."

But Scotch tradition gives altogether a different reason for the existence of the word. It is this: During the early religious wars in Scotland the weakest of the factions used the words "We Hope In God" as a motto. The initials of these words were placed on their banners thus, "W. H. I. G.," and soon all the followers of that clan were given the title of "Whig," which was afterwards attached as a party nickname. I do not allude to what are obviously mere misprints, such as when The Morning Post announced at the head of its fashionable intelligence that Lord Palmerston had gone down into Hampshire with a party of fiefs to shoot peasants, but I refer to blunders due to crass ignorance of a pretentious order. Perhaps the best instance was when one of the "young lions" of The Daily Telegraph in a leading article enumerated the great masters of Greek sculpture as Phidias, Praxiteles and Milo, ignorant of the fact that Milo is not a sculptor, but an island. The Times was even worse when, mistaking Prussia for Austria, it devoted a whole leader to discussing why Prussia had joined the zollverein. The Saturday Review once explained at great length that the population might be nourished gratuitously on young lambs if killed unweaned before they had begun to crop grass, having therefore cost nothing to feed. Many other instances will doubtless occur to your readers.—Notes and Queries.

A Mixed Wedding Party.

"The college roommate of a friend of mine was engaged to a lady in New York," writes the Rev. D. M. Steele in his article on "Some People I Have Married" in The Ladies' Home Journal. "His people are Congregationalists, but while at Yale he became a Unitarian. Her parents are Roman Catholics, but she was a member of the Ethical Culture society at Carnegie hall. In compliance with her mother's wish he asked five different priests to marry them, but all refused. In despair he came for me. I married them, an Episcopalian, with the ritual service in a Presbyterian chapel. The Roman Catholic brother of the bride and the Congregational sister of the groom were present. This sister acted as one witness; the other witness was a Jewess."

The Appeal to the Record.

Little Tommy returned sore and trembling from the torture room. "Doesn't your papa ever thrash you?" he asked his chum, who is the son of a cabinet minister. "I should say not!" replied the other loftily. "Every time he threatens to cane me I read him an extract from his great peace at any price speech in which he said: 'These barbarians are like wayward children, but have we on that account the right to take away their heaven sent privilege to do as they please? Let us treat them as we would our own wayward children—plead with them, beseech them, but never coerce them with either gun or rod.'"

Careful Statement.

"Was this man Dennis an entire stranger to you?" asked the cross examining counsel of a witness in an important case. "Sorr?" said the witness, whose stupid face was crossed with wrinkles of anxiety, for he had been warned to be cautious and exact in his answers. The lawyer repeated his question. "Well, no, sorr," said the witness, with a sudden gleam of enlightenment. "He couldn't be that, for he had but the wan arm, sorr, but he was a partial stranger, sorr. O'd never seen him befor."—Youth's Companion.

Punishment and Reward.

Never give up to children if they are in the wrong. Do not rob them of a memory that their mother and father were always true to their principles.—Ladies' Home Journal. Suited to a Tee.

The orange came to Europe from Africa in the eleventh century. Sir Walter Raleigh brought it to England in the sixteenth century. It was first planted in Australia in 1788.

Mr. Hare's Fountain of Youth.

Mr. John Hare, the eminent English actor-manager, said that the most delightful compliment he ever received was from Mr. Gladstone. It was a double ended compliment. Whichever way you took it it was satisfactory. Mr. Hare earned fame playing old men's parts, his character as Mr. Goldby in "A Pair of Spectacles" being a good example. Added to this was a horror of having his picture taken. Mr. Gladstone had never seen a picture of the actor, but he knew him well behind the scenes as well as before the footlights. The premier's favorite play was "A Pair of Spectacles," and he always went behind the scenes to chat awhile with the actor. The really old man and the made up old man would sit there and talk in the most delightful way for an hour after the show. One day the Earl of Rosebery had Mr. Gladstone to dinner, and he also invited his friend, John Hare. The actor came in smooth shaven, looking about 35. He was presented to Mr. Gladstone, and the prime minister shook his hand most cordially and said: "My dear sir, I am very, very glad to meet you. I know your father very, very well. Splendid actor! Fine old man!" It took the whole evening for the earl and Mr. Hare to convince him that this son was really the father.

A Pigeon as Valet to a Crow.

"Tom was the name given to a lordly young crow," says Florence M. Kingsley in The Ladies' Home Journal. "Beauty was a snow white pigeon of about the crow's age, with whom he was reared. Just how it came about we never knew, but we soon discovered that Beauty regularly acted as maid of all work to Tom. She fetched and carried morsels of food at his imperious command, and one of her unvarying duties was the preening of her master's feathers. Tom was very much of a dandy. His coal black plumage always appeared perfectly dressed and shining, but the arduous labor of his toilet was performed for him twice every day by the humble and affectionate pigeon. "Our fine gentleman would come in from a roll in the dust or a dip in the fountain and, seating himself upon a certain railing, utter a short, sharp call. Instantly Beauty would descend to his side and begin her task, fluttering anxiously from side to side as she worked, drawing each shining black feather carefully out to its full length in her pink bill. Tom meanwhile dozing luxuriously, with closed eyes, after the manner of the complacent patron of a skillful barber. If Beauty unfortunately pulled a feather too hard, a squawk and a sudden peck informed her of her mistake."

His Spelling System.

Dobbs met his friend Turner in the train. They were both going to Birmingham and stopped at the same hotel. Turner registered his name "E. K. Phthologyrh." Dobbs, noticing it, exclaimed, "Here, what are you using such a foreign, outlandish name for?" "I am not assuming any foreign name," replied Turner. "What kind of a name is it, then?" "That is my identical old name, and it is English too—pronounced 'Turner.'"

Optimism.

When the optimist was dispossessed and thrown, along with his household impedimenta, into the cold street, he chuckled furiously. "Why do you laugh, my friend?" inquired a passerby. "Because I have just now been emancipated from toil," replied the optimist. "For years my life has been one long struggle to keep the wolf from the door. But now that I have been deprived of the door I no longer am compelled to toil. Sweet, indeed, are the uses of adversity!" Then the optimist walked off, whistling gayly, into the sunshine.

A Task.

To be honest, to be kind, to earn a little and to spend less, to make, upon the whole, a family happier by his presence, to renounce where that shall be necessary and not to be imbibed, to keep a few friends, but these without capitulation; above all, on the same grim conditions to keep friends with himself—here is a task for all that a man has of fortitude and delicacy.

An Once of Prevention.

"As you went out," whispered the observing boarder, "I saw you pick up something from the floor, tear it in a dozen pieces and throw it in the range. Was it a love letter?" "No," responded the practical boarder. "It was a little booklet telling how to prepare prunes in 99 different ways. I was afraid it might fall into the hands of the landlady."

Most Curious Thing.
